4 ¶ [*] And it came to pass that night, that the word of the LORD came unto Nathan, saying,

5 Go and tell my servant David, Thus saith the LORD, [f] Shalt thou build me an house for me to dwell in?

6 [g] Whereas I have not dwelt in any house since the time that I brought up the children of Israel out of Egypt even to this day, but have walked in a tent and in a tabernacle.

7 In all the places wherein I have walked with all the children of Israel, spake I a word with [h] any of the tribes of Israel, whom I commanded to feed my people Israel, saying, Why build ye not me an house of cedar?

8 Now therefore so shalt thou say unto my servant David, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [i] I took thee from the sheep-cote, from following the sheep, to be ruler over my people, over Israel:

9 And I [k] was with thee whithersoever thou wentest, and have cut off all thine enemies out of thy sight, and have made thee a great name, like unto the name of the great men that are in the earth.

10 (Moreover, [l] I will appoint[*] a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime, 11 And as since the time that I commanded judges to be over my people Israel, and have caused thee to rest from all thine enemies.) Also the LORD telleth thee, that he [m] will make thee an house.

12 ¶ And [n] when thy days be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers,[†] I will set up thy seed after thee, which shall proceed out of thy bowels, and I will establish his kingdom.

13 [*] He shall build an house for my name, and I will stablish the throne of his kingdom for ever.

14 [p] I will be his father, and he shall be my son. [q] If he commit iniquity,[‡] I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men:

‡ How could this be Messiah, seeing it is admitted this son may commit iniquity? REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Perpetual visibility and splendour are no marks of a true church. The ark, the most noted symbol of God's presence, continued long in obscurity. God can be graciously present with his people even when they want his solemn ordinances; and it is his presence that renders his ordinances truly glorious. Such as have high thoughts of him will reverence all his institutions. The greatest need think it no disparagement to join with the meanest before the great God, their common Maker and Saviour. Singing of psalms to his praise is always esteemed when God revives a spirit of religion. God's laws relative to the manner, as well as to the matter, of his worship, ought to be exactly observed: and the authority of men, or bad precedents, should never weigh more with us than the express word of God. By rashness and intemperate zeal we are apt to give wrong touches to God's ark; and no good intention will atone for our irreverence or presumption. Men are never in greater danger of ruinous mistakes than in dealing with God. How apt are the best to be displeased with God's judgments rather than with their own sins which procured them! The awful strokes of Providence should move us to repentance and heedfulness, but never terrify us from our duty. None ever lost by their fidelity and kindness to God and his ordinances. It is a happiness to be in the family or place where God is duly respected. Duty may happily succeed at last, though our first attempts have been marred. Let us therefore search out and repent of our errors, apply Jesus' propitiatory sacrifice for remission of sins, feast on him as our provision, and set about it anew with proper circumspection. Only base minds reckon God's service mean or indecent; and ridicule, not reason, is the common weapon of the enemies of truth. But we must not be laughed out of our religious profession; but the more opposition we meet with, the more resolutely persevere. If God knows our heart to be upright before him, the censures of others may lie light upon us. We can never sufficiently humble ourselves before him. And if in our service of him, we have the regard of good men, we need not fear the contempt of the irreligious or the great. While God shall mark the despisers of his service with infamy and wrath, we shall be had in glory and honour.

But let me here think of that solemn joy and triumph wherewith Jesus, our great Ark of God's testament, was carried up into heaven, and set down at the right hand of God: and of that joy and triumph with which his name is carried through the world by the gospel, in the times of his love and days of his power! O then what harmony and peace in churches—what familiar feasting on his flesh and blood! And how dreadful their case who disdain to concur in that solemn work!

16 And [s] thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee: thy throne shall be established for ever.

17 [t] According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak unto David.

18 ¶ Then went king David in, and sat before the LORD, and he said, [u] Who am I, O LORD God? and what is my house, that thou hast brought me hitherto?[*]

19 And [x] this was yet a small thing in thy sight, O LORD God; but thou hast spoken also of thy servant's house for a great while to come: and [y] is this the [†] manner of man, O LORD God?[‡]

20 And what can David say more unto thee? for thou, LORD God, [z] knowest thy servant.

21 [a] For thy word's sake, and according to thine own heart, hast thou done all these great things, to make thy servant know them.

22 Wherefore [b] thou art great, O LORD God: for there is none like thee, neither is there any God besides thee, according to all that we have heard with our ears.

23 And [c] what one nation in the earth is like thy people, even like Israel, whom God [d] went to redeem for a people to himself, and to make him a name, and to do for you great things and terrible, for thy land, before thy people, which thou redeemedst to thee from Egypt, from the nations and their gods?

24 For [e] thou hast confirmed to thyself thy people Israel, to be a people unto thee for ever; [§] and thou, LORD, art become their God.

25 And now, O LORD God, the word that thou hast spoken concerning thy servant, and concerning his house, [f] establish it for ever, and do as thou hast said.

26 And [g] let thy name be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God over Israel: and let the house of thy servant David [h] be established before thee.

27 For thou, O LORD of hosts, God of Israel, hast [i] revealed to thy servant, saying, I will build thee an house; therefore hath thy servant [k] found in his heart to pray this prayer unto thee.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Gracious souls are never weary of working for the Lord; nor can they, with pleasure, enjoy their own conveniencies while his ordinances are in distress. It is good to strengthen the hands of such as have at heart to build up the church of God: but all our success depends on God's presence and assistance. Even prophets may be too rash: they are no further infallible than as inspired by the Holy Ghost. God may approve a work, and yet not the doing of it by a particular person. Nay, he may accept his purpose, and yet not allow him to execute it. All true honour and happiness come from God. Yet the good purposes of ministers, magistrates, and parents, sometimes entail upon churches, nations, and families, the most remarkable mercies. But how great things God hath laid up for them that fear him! how abundant, free, sovereign, and lasting, are the blessings of his covenant! Yes, pleasant, fervent, and successful, are those supplications now, which are animated by, and do reduplicate upon the promises of God impressed on our heart; particularly those respecting Jesus Christ and his grace. Let us then boldly ask what God hath promised. Let us never stagger at the greatness of the mercy, but pray in faith, nothing doubting. Let it be our constant desire that God in all things may be glorified. If we find in our hearts to pray, God will not fail to hear and answer.

AND David said, Is there yet any that is left of the house of Saul, that I may show him kindness for [a]Jonathan's sake?

2 And [b]there was of the house of Saul a servant, whose name was Ziba: and when they had called him unto David, the king said unto him, Art thou Ziba? And he said, Thy servant is he.

3 And the king said, Is there not yet any of the house of Saul, that I may show [c]the kindness of God* unto him? And Ziba said unto the king, Jonathan hath yet a son, which is [d]lame on his feet.

4 And the king said unto him, Where is he? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he is in the house of [e]Machir, the son of Ammiel, in Lo-debar.

5 ¶ Then king David sent and [f]fetched him out of the house of Machir, the son of Ammiel, from Lo-debar.

6 Now when Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, was come unto David, he [g]fell on his face,* and did reverence. And David said, Mephibosheth! And he answered, Behold thy servant!

7 ¶ And David said unto him, [h]Fear not; for I will surely show thee kindness for Jonathan thy father's sake, and will restore thee all the land of Saul thy father; and thou shalt [i]eat bread at my table continually.

8 And he [k]bowed himself, and said, What is thy servant, that thou shouldest look upon such a dead dog as I am?

9 ¶ Then the king called to Ziba, Saul's servant, and said unto him, [l]I have given unto thy master's son all that pertained to Saul, and to all his house.

10 Thou therefore, and thy sons, and thy servants, shall till the land for him, and thou shalt bring in the fruits, that thy master's son may have food to eat:† but Mephibosheth thy master's son shall eat bread alway at my table. Now Ziba had fifteen sons and twenty servants.

11 Then said Ziba unto the king, [m]According to all that my lord the king hath commanded his servant, so shall thy servant do. As for Mephibosheth, said the king, he shall eat at my table, as one of the king's sons.

12 And [n]Mephibosheth had a young son, whose name was Micah: and ‡all that dwelt in the house of Ziba were [o]servants unto Mephibosheth.

13 So Mephibosheth dwelt in Jerusalem: for he did eat continually at the king's table; and was lame on both his feet.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Faithful is he who hath promised. Now, after many ages, he put Israel into the full enjoyment of all their promised territory, from the river of Egypt on the south-west to the Euphrates on the north-east. No mighty nations, or powerful corruptions, can withstand when God's time of humbling them arrives. The awful threatenings denounced against them take fast hold on them; and, the more they have oppressed the people of God, the worse fate may they expect. While the associated enemies of the church are broken in pieces, those armies are safe with whom the Lord goes out to the battle. In all wars the glory of God ought to be our principal end; and to him our whole success ought to be ascribed. Wars abroad ought never to hinder mildness, good order, and equity at home. And such as have been faithful friends in adversity, deserve preferment in prosperity. But, lo! when God has a temple to build, how he brings under such as would incline to oppose it, and provides for its expense!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—How quickly sin nearly extirpates the most flourishing families! How often good men, amidst the hurry of business, are too long forgetful of their former friends! But we should not only be ready to do good to such as need, but even seek out opportunities, and inquire after proper objects. Yea, we should be peculiarly earnest in showing kindness to such as have injured us, or to such as have befriended us in our distress. Nor should our kindness die with our friends, but extend to their relations and posterity. Advancement to high stations should make us remember poor friends and poor objects with more readiness and tender care. Unexpected favours ought to be received with the warmest gratitude, and the most self-denying humility of mind and behaviour. Honours sit most gloriously on the most humble and modest. But how amazing is it that, for Jesus' sake, God should seek out us deformed sinners of mankind, restore to us our eternal inheritance, and appoint us to feast continually on, and with, Jesus at his table!

his father. And David's servants came into the land of the children of Ammon.

3 And the princes of the children of Ammon said unto Hanun their lord, [a] Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? [c] hath not David rather sent his servants unto thee to search the city, and to spy it out, and to overthrow it?

4 Wherefore Hanun took David's servants, and [d] shaved off the one half of their beards,[†] and cut off their garments in the middle, even to their buttocks, and sent them away.

5 When they told it unto David, he sent to meet them, because the men were greatly ashamed: and the king said, Tarry at [e] Jericho[‡] until your beards be grown, and then return.

6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they [f] stank before David, the children of Ammon [f] sent and hired the Syrians of Beth-rehob, and the Syrians of Zoba, twenty thousand footmen, and of king Maacah a thousand men, and of Ish-tob twelve thousand men.

7 And [h] when David heard of it, he sent Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.

8 [i] And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array at the entering in of the gate: and the [k] Syrians of Zoba, and of Rehob, and Ish-tob, and Maacah, were by themselves in the field.

9 When Joab saw that the front of the battle was against him before and behind,[§] he chose of all the choice men of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians:

10 And the rest of the people he delivered into the hand of Abishai his brother, that he might put them in array against the children of Ammon.

11 And he said, [l] If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me; but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will come and help thee.

12 [m] Be of good courage, and let us play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God; and the LORD [n] do that which seemeth him good.[‖]

13 And Joab drew nigh, and the people that were with him, unto the battle against the Syrians; and they fled before him.

14 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, then fled they also before Abishai, and entered into the city. So Joab returned from the children of Ammon, and came to Jerusalem.

15 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were smitten before Israel, they [o] gathered themselves together.

16 And [p] Hadarezer sent, and brought out the Syrians that were beyond the river;[*] and they came to Helam: and Shobach, the captain of the host of Hadarezer, went before them.

17 And when it was told David, [q] he gathered all Israel together, and passed [†] over Jordan, and came to Helam: and the Syrians set themselves in array against David, and fought with him.

18 [r] And the Syrians fled before Israel; and David [‡] slew the men of [§] seven hundred chariots of the Syrians, and forty thousand horsemen,[‖] and smote Shobach, the captain of their host, who died there.

19 And when all the kings that [s] were servants to Hadarezer saw that they were smitten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and served them. So the Syrians [t] feared to help the children of Ammon any more.

3 And David sent and inquired after the woman. And one said, Is not this Bath-sheba, the daughter of [g] Eliam, the wife of Uriah the Hittite?

4 And David [h] sent messengers, and took her: and she came in unto him, and he lay with her; (for she was [i] purified from her uncleanness;) and she returned unto her house.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—It is good to return a kindness even to the wicked, and to mourn with the afflicted. Wicked princes are ordinarily attended by wicked flatterers. Base minds are always the most suspicious: and evil suspicions hurry men into the most rash and ruinous conduct. It is exceedingly criminal to violate the person of an ambassador. But little pleasure, profit, or honour, must be expected from courting or complimenting the inveterate enemies of God and his people. Calumny often drives men into obscurity; but patience will gradually wear off the reproach. War had need to be made with good advice. No numbers will be found able to support those who fight against God. Nor is it unwieldy strength, but a prudent disposition and application of forces, that in battle usually prevails. Great dangers call for the greater fortitude. Love of God, and of their country, makes the bravest soldiers. Mutual assistance is a duty incumbent in every difficulty; and dependance upon God, in the use of the means, is the sure way to be crowned with success. What a mercy is it that inclement winters interrupt the grievous trade of war, and force the combatants to an unwilling rest! But sinners, by their obstinate opposition to Christ and his cause, often bring upon themselves redoubled destruction. It is happy if they submit before they are totally ruined. Meanwhile, let mankind beware of abusing Jesus' ministers and messages of grace; for the inflamed vengeance of Almighty God awaits such wickedness as its just reward.

6 And David sent to Joab, saying, [1] Send me Uriah the Hittite. And Joab sent Uriah to David.

7 And when Uriah was come unto him, David demanded of him [†] how Joab did, and how the people did, and how the war prospered.

8 And David said to Uriah, [m] Go down to thy house, and wash thy feet. And Uriah departed out of the king's house, and [n] there [‡] followed him a mess[§] of meat from the king.

9 But Uriah slept at the door of the king's house with all the servants of his lord, and went not down to his house.

10 And when they had told David, saying, Uriah went not down unto his house, David said unto Uriah, Camest thou not from thy journey? why then didst thou not go down unto thine house?

11 And Uriah said unto David, [o] The ark,[‖] and Israel, and Judah, abide in tents; and [p] my lord Joab, and the servants of my lord, are encamped in the open fields; shall I then go into mine house, to eat and to drink, and to lie with my wife? As [q] thou livest, and as thy soul liveth, I will not do this thing.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Lord, what is man when left to himself! On this side the grave no man is secure from presumptuous sin. The lusts of the flesh are most powerful and deceitful evils, and the last to be subdued; and such as make provision for the flesh, by sloth and sensuality, are prepared for every temptation. When we are out of God's way of duty, we cannot expect his protection. If our eyes be suffered to wander, our hearts and feet will soon follow. To indulge sinful lusts is but to increase its cravings. And a heart given up to lewdness will sacrifice honour, interest, friends, nay, God himself, to the idol of its hateful passions. Often it requires double care to conceal sin than what would have been necessary to prevent it. One sin ordinarily requires another to hide it. And such as have defiled their neighbour's bed will not stick to destroy his soul by drunkenness, or even his life by the sword. When sin has hardened the heart, the strongest warnings of providence are disregarded. When the devil has once got a soul before the wind of his temptations, he can drive it to the very brink of hell—to deliberate malice and murder. God, however highly displeased, may permit men for a time to prosper in their wickedness, till their particular branches of guilt have become almost innumerable. But stand still, my soul, and tremble to behold the man according to God's heart, the royal deputy of heaven—negligent in business, indulgent of sloth, wandering in eye, and lustful in heart; in old age debauching a lady of good reputation, and the wife of a faithful hero; labouring to impose a spurious issue

4 And there came a [o] traveller unto the rich man; and he spared to take of his own flock, and of his own herd, to dress for the wayfaring man that was come unto him; but [f] took the poor man's lamb, and dressed it for the man that was come to him.*

9 Wherefore hast thou [m] despised the commandment of the LORD, to do evil in his sight? thou hast killed Uriah the Hittite with the sword, and hast taken his wife to be thy wife, and hast slain him with the sword of the children of Ammon.

10 Now therefore [n] the sword shall never depart from thine house; because thou hast despised me, and hast taken the wife of Uriah the Hittite to be thy wife.

11 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, [o] I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house; [‖] and I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbour, and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun.

12 For thou didst it secretly: but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun.

13 And David said unto Nathan, [p] I have sinned against the LORD.* And Nathan said unto David, [q] The LORD also hath [†] put away thy sin; thou shalt not die.‡

14 Howbeit, because by this deed [r] thou hast given great occasion to the enemies of the LORD to blaspheme, the child also that is born unto thee shall surely die.

15 ¶ And Nathan departed unto his house: and the LORD [*] struck the child that Uriah's wife bare unto David, and it was very sick.

16 David therefore [t] besought God for the child; and David [§] fasted, and went in and lay all night upon the earth.

18 And it came to pass on the seventh day, that the child died. And the servants of David feared to tell him that the child was dead; for they said, Behold, while the child was yet alive, we spake unto him, and he would not hearken unto our voice; how will he then *vex himself, if we tell him that the child is dead?

20 Then David [u] arose from the earth, and washed, and anointed himself, and changed his apparel, and came into the house of the LORD, and worshipped: [†] then he came to his own house; and, when he required, they set bread before him, and he did eat.

22 And he said, [x] While the child was yet alive, I fasted and wept: for I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live?

AND it came to pass after this, that [a] Absalom the son of David had [b] a fair sister, whose name was Tamar; and Amnon the son of David [c] loved her.

2 And Amnon was so [d] vexed, that he fell sick for his sister Tamar; for she was a virgin: and Amnon thought it hard [*] for him to do any thing to her.

3 But Amnon had [e] a friend, whose name was Jonadab, the son of Shimeah, David's brother: and Jonadab was a very [f] subtile man.

4 And he said unto him, Why art thou, being the king's son, [†] lean [‡] from day to day? wilt thou not tell me? And Amnon said unto him, [g] I love Tamar, my brother Absalom's sister.

5 And Jonadab said unto him, [h] Lay thee down on thy bed, and make thyself sick: [§] and when thy father cometh to see thee, say unto him, I pray thee, let my sister Tamar come and give me meat, and dress the meat in my sight, that I may see it, and eat it at her hand. [‖]

6 ¶ So Amnon lay down, and made himself sick: and when the king was come to see him, Amnon said unto the king, I pray thee, let Tamar my sister come and [i] make me a couple of cakes in my sight, that I may eat at her hand.

7 Then David sent home to Tamar, saying, Go now to thy brother Amnon's house, and dress him meat.

8 So Tamar went to her brother Amnon's house, and he was [k] laid down. And she took [*] flour, and kneaded it, and made cakes in his sight, and did bake the cakes.

9 And she took a pan, and poured them out before him; but he refused to eat. And Amnon said, [l] Have out all men from me. [†] And they went out every man from him.

10 And Amnon said unto Tamar, Bring the meat into the chamber, that I may eat of thine hand. And Tamar took the cakes which she had made, and brought them into the chamber to Amnon her brother.

11 And when she had brought them unto him to eat, he [m] took hold of her, and said unto her, Come lie with me, my sister.

12 And she answered him, Nay, my brother, do not [‡] force me; for [§] [n] no such thing ought to be done [o] in Israel: do not thou this [p] folly.

13 And I, whither shall I cause my shame to go? and as for thee, thou shalt be as one of the fools in Israel. Now therefore, I pray thee, speak unto the king: for he will not withhold me from thee.

14 Howbeit he [q] would not hearken unto her voice; but, being stronger than she, forced her, and lay with her.

15 ¶ Then Amnon [r] hated her [‖] exceedingly; [*] so that the hatred wherewith he hated her was greater than the love wherewith he had loved her: and Amnon said unto her, Arise, be gone.

16 And she said unto him, There is no cause; this evil in sending me away [†] is greater than the other that thou didst unto me. But he would not hearken unto her.

17 Then he called his servant that ministered unto him, and said, Put now this woman out from me, and bolt the door after her.

18 And she had a [s] garment of divers colours upon her: for with such robes were the king's daughters that were virgins apparelled. Then his servant brought her out, and bolted the door after her.

19 ¶ And Tamar [t] put ashes on her head, and rent her garment of divers colours that was on her, and laid her hand on her head, and went on crying.

20 And Absalom her brother said unto her, Hath [‡] Amnon thy brother been with thee? but [u] hold now thy peace, my sister, he is thy EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. XII. Ver. 23.—David's consolation could not arise from the idea that he should die too; a consideration unworthy of such a man; but from a firm persuasion that his child was gone to glory, and that he should meet him there: and so it affords us the surest consolation under the death of infants.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—It is dreadful to behold noted saints continue long impenitent in their sins: and prudent reproof is always necessary, especially for great transgressors; and when wisely administered, it is doubly effectual. Every wife has a right to her husband's most endeared affection. Multiplying of wives never cures concupiscence, but inflames it. Great sinners are often most severe in their censures of others. Reprovers ought to deal plainly and closely with the consciences of sinners, and lay before them the aggravating circumstances of their guilt; for unbelief is the great source of all our wickedness. They must pay dear for their lusts who dare indulge them. The only way to escape the judgment which we have deserved, is by returning to God, through Jesus Christ, with humble acknowledgment of our guilt. Nothing causes more reproach to God, and his cause, than the scandalous falls of professors; especially of eminent saints, high stationed in church or state. And God will make those sins bitter to his people at last, in which they sought lasting pleasure, even though others should seem to escape unpunished. Yea, God sometimes quickly marks his people's sin in their punishment; and often children are afflicted in their parents' punishment. The sickness of our relations demands our earnest wrestlings with God on their behalf; and none more than that of distressed children, who cannot pray for themselves. We brought them into the world heirs of wrath; let us labour to pluck 21 ¶ But when king David heard of all these things, he [x] was very wroth.

22 And Absalom spake unto his brother Amnon neither [y] good nor bad: [§] for Absalom [z] hated Amnon, because he had forced his sister Tamar.

26 Then said Absalom, If not, I pray thee, let [e] my brother Amnon go with us. And the king said unto him, Why should he go with thee?

27 But Absalom pressed [†] him, that he let Amnon and all the king's sons go with him.

29 And the servants of Absalom did unto Amnon as Absalom had commanded: then all the king's sons arose, and every man [‖] gat him up upon his [g] mule, and fled.[*]

30 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were in the way, that tidings came to David, saying, Absalom hath slain all the king's sons, and there is not one of them left.

31 Then the king [h] arose, and tare his garments, and lay on the earth; and all his servants stood by with their clothes rent.

32 ¶ And [i] Jonadab, the son of Shimeah David's brother, answered and said, Let not my lord suppose that they have slain all the young men the king's sons; for Amnon only is dead: for by the appointment of Absalom this hath been [k] determined from the day that he forced his sister Tamar.

33 Now therefore let not my lord the king take the thing to his heart, to think that all the king's sons are dead; for Amnon only is dead.

34 But [l] Absalom fled. And the young man that kept the watch lifted up his eyes and looked, and, behold, there came much people by the way of the hill-side behind him.

35 And Jonadab said unto the king, Behold, the king's sons come! [*] as thy servant said, so it is.

36 And it came to pass, as soon as he had made an end of speaking, that, behold, the king's sons came, and lifted up their voice and wept: and the king also and all his servants wept [†] very sore.[‡]

37 ¶ But Absalom fled, and went to [m] Talmai, the son of [§] Ammihud, king of Geshur: and [n] David mourned for his son every day.

38 So Absalom fled, and went to [o] Geshur, and was there three years.

39 And the soul of king David longed to go forth unto Absalom: for he was [p] comforted concerning Amnon, seeing he was dead.

NOW [a] Joab the son of Zeruiah perceived that the king's [b] heart was toward Absalom.

2 And Joab sent to [c] Tekoah, and fetched thence [d] a wise woman, and said unto her, I pray thee, feign thyself to be a mourner, and put on now mourning apparel, and [*] anoint not thyself with oil, but be as a woman that had a long time mourned for the dead;

3 And come to the king, and speak on this manner unto him. So Joab [f] put the words in her mouth.

4 ¶ And when the woman of Tekoah spake to the king, she [g] fell on her face to the ground, and did obeisance, and said, [h] Help, O king!

5 And the king [i] said unto her, What aileth thee? And she answered, [k] I am indeed a widow woman, and mine husband is dead.

6 And thy handmaid had two sons, and they two strove together in the field, and there was [l] none to part them, but the one smote the other, and slew him.

them as brands out of the burning, and bring them to Jesus the Saviour. If we must part with them, let us do it as Christians; and let their death fill us with the most serious impressions of our own. At the same time, let us fortify our patience by the comforting consideration of this pious king: let us return them into the hand of God, assured that "their angels do always behold the face of our Father which is in heaven," and that "of such is the kingdom of heaven: and let it be our only concern that we meet them again in his presence.—Meanwhile, let us remember, that submission to God's strokes is the way to obtain the restoration of his comforts; and that he will not chide for ever, but will in wrath remember mercy.—Alas! that, while Joab was so zealous for David's honour, David, in his fondness for the heathen crown, and his severity to the prisoners, should have so little consulted the honour of his God! But when men lie hardened in their lust, what evil are they not capable of committing!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Righteous, but awful are the judgments of God; especially when he punishes sin with sin, and that remarkably similar! Children are apt to imitate their parents' sins without imitating their repentance. And near relatives should be cautious that their tender affection does not degenerate into lawless lust. How unbridled is lust when once indulged! the body often suffers through vile affections: and no station can render the man happy whose against thine handmaid; and they said, Deliver him that smote his brother, that we may kill him, for the life of his brother whom he slew; and we will destroy the heir also: and so they shall [n] quench my coal[*] which is left, and shall not leave to my husband neither name nor remainder upon the earth.

8 And the king said unto the woman, Go to thine house, and [o] I will give charge concerning thee.

9 And the woman of Tekoah said unto the king, My lord, O king, [p] the iniquity be on me, and on my father's house; and the king and his throne be guiltless.

10 And the king said, Whosoever saith ought unto thee, bring him to me, and he shall not touch thee any more.

11 Then said she, I pray thee, let the king [q] remember the LORD thy God, that thou [r] wouldest not suffer the revengers of blood to destroy any more, lest they destroy my son. And he said, [s] As the LORD liveth, there shall not one hair of thy son fall to the earth.[†]

12 Then the woman said, Let thine handmaid, I pray thee, speak one word unto my lord the king. And he said, Say on.

13 And the woman said, [t] Wherefore then hast thou thought such a thing against the people of God? for the king doth speak this thing as one which is faulty, [u] in that the king doth not fetch home again his banished.[‡]

14 For we [x] must needs die, and are as water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again; [§] neither doth God [y] respect any person: yet doth he [z] devise means, that his banished be not expelled from him.

15 Now therefore that I am come to speak of this thing unto my lord the king, it is because [‖] the people have made me afraid: and thy handmaid said, I will now speak unto the king; it may be that the king will perform the request of his handmaid.

16 For the king will hear, to deliver his handmaid out of the hand of the men that would destroy me and my son[*] together out of the inheritance of God.

17 Then thine handmaid said, The word of my lord the king shall now be [†] comfortable: for [a] as an angel of God,[‡] so is my lord the king, to discern good and bad; therefore the LORD thy God will be with thee.

18 Then the king answered and said unto the woman, Hide not from me, I pray thee, the thing that I shall ask thee. And the woman said, Let my lord the king now speak.

19 And the king said, Is not the hand of Joab with thee in all this? And the woman answered and said, As thy soul liveth, my lord the king, none can turn to the right hand or to the left from ought that my lord the king hath spoken: for thy servant Joab, he bade me, and he put all these words in the mouth of thine handmaid:

20 To fetch about this form of speech hath thy servant Joab done this thing: and my lord is wise, according to the wisdom of an angel of God, to know all things that are in the earth.

21 ¶ And the king said unto Joab, Behold now, I have done this thing: go therefore, bring the young man Absalom again.

22 And Joab [b] fell to the ground on his face, and bowed himself, and [c] thanked the king: and Joab said, To-day thy servant knoweth that [d] I have found grace in thy sight, my lord, O king, in that the king hath fulfilled the request of his servant.[*]

23 So Joab arose and went to [*] Geshur, and brought Absalom to Jerusalem.

24 And the king said, Let him turn to his own house, and let him not [f] see my face. So Absalom returned to his own house, and saw not the king's face.

25 ¶ [g] But in all Israel there was none to be so much praised as Absalom for his beauty: [h] from the sole of his foot even to the crown of his head there was no blemish in him.

26 And when he polled his head, (for it was at every year's end that he polled it; because [i] the hair was heavy on him, therefore he polled it,) he weighed the hair of his head at [k] two hundred shekels,[†] after the king's weight.

27 ¶ And unto [l] Absalom there were born three sons, and one daughter, whose name was Tamar: she was a woman of a fair countenance.

28 ¶ So Absalom dwelt two full years in Jerusalem, and [m] saw not the king's face.

29 Therefore Absalom sent for Joab, to have sent him to the king; but he would not come to him: and when he sent again the second time, he would not come.

30 Therefore he said unto his servants, See, Joab's field is [‡] near mine, and he hath barley there; [n] go and set it on fire. And Absalom's servants set the field on fire.

lusts rage within him. A wicked and subtile friend, who leads to, or flatters in sin, is a dreadful curse. Such as harbour no ill designs themselves, are often made instruments of iniquity by the crafty sinner, as they are most unsuspicious. Deeds of filthiness seek for secrecy. It is therefore extremely dangerous for those who have youth and beauty to be alone with the wanton. But nothing can be more barbarous and foolish, than, for a momentary gratification, to ruin a character, render a companion infamous and miserable, and rush into everlasting ruin. Yet where lust rages, men are insensible of fear or shame, and deaf to all the remonstrances of reason and religion; though the pleasures of lust are quickly turned into loathing and hatred; and nothing is reckoned too shameful or cruel to be done to the object of it. The neglect of magistrates to punish, infallibly occasions more, if not worse crimes; and yet how hard for them to punish, in their children, crimes copied after their own! Revenge is often deep rooted, and masked with pretences of friendship; yea, the longer it is concealed, it often burns the more fiercely: and drunkenness remarkably exposes sinners to death, and ripens them for hell. None are more ready to imbrue their hands in our blood than our companions in luxury. What certain griefs, but uncertain comforts, are the children of the best and greatest! How kind is it to sympathize with the afflicted, and to comfort them the best way we can! and how strong is parental affection, which cannot be extinguished by the most horrid and unnatural crimes.

* Joab must have so managed the court, that David was totally inaccessible, except through himself. This caution may have been partly to guard against dangers, partly for state, but, most probably, it chiefly arose from Joab's own desire to monopolize all access to the royal ear. Blessed be the name of the Lord, however difficult access may be for petitioners to earthly potentates, the believer has no difficulty in seeing the King's face. Heb. 4. 16.—Ed.

(1) Absalom artfully depreciates his father's government, and insinuates himself into the people's affections: 1—6. (2) Pretending a vow, he retires to Hebron, and sets up for king: 7—12. (3) David and his friends flee from Jerusalem: 13—18, 23, 30, 31. (4) In his flight David tries the fidelity of Ittai: 17—22; orders Zadok and Abiathar to carry back the ark to Jerusalem: 24—29; employs Hushai to attend Absalom, and thwart the counsels of the crafty Ahithophel: 32—37.

AND it came to pass after this, that [a] Absalom prepared him chariots and horses, and fifty men to run before him.

2 And Absalom [b] rose up early, and stood beside the way of the gate: and it was so, that when any man that had a controversy * came to the king for judgment, then Absalom called unto him, and said, Of what city art thou? And he said, Thy servant is of one of the tribes of Israel.

3 And Absalom said unto him, See, [c] thy matters are good and right; but [d] there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee.

4 Absalom said moreover, Oh that I were [e] made judge in the land, that every man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me, and [f] I would do him justice!

5 And it was so, that when any man came nigh to him to do him obeisance, he put forth his hand, and [g] took him, and kissed him.

6 And on this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment: so [h] Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israel.

7 ¶ And it came to pass [†] after [‡] forty years,‡ that Absalom said unto the king, I pray thee, let me [k] go and pay my vow, which I have vowed unto the LORD, in Hebron.

8 For thy servant vowed a vow while I [l] abode at Geshur in Syria, saying, If the LORD shall bring me again indeed to Jerusalem, then [m] I will serve the LORD.

9 And the king said unto him, Go in peace. So he arose, and went to Hebron.

10 ¶ But Absalom sent [n] spies throughout all the tribes of Israel, saying, As soon as ye hear the sound of the trumpet,* then ye shall say, Absalom [o] reigneth in Hebron.

11 And with Absalom went two hundred men out of Jerusalem, that were [p] called; and they went in [q] their simplicity, and they knew not any thing.

12 And Absalom sent for [r] Ahithophel the Gilonite, David's counsellor, from his city, even from Giloh,† while he [s] offered sacrifices: and the conspiracy was strong; for the people [t] increased continually with Absalom.

13 ¶ And there came a messenger to David, saying, [u] The hearts of the men of Israel are after Absalom.

14 And David said unto all his servants that were with him at Jerusalem, Arise, and let us [x] flee; for we shall not else escape from Absalom: make speed to depart, lest he overtake us suddenly, and ‡ bring evil upon us, and smite the city with the edge of the sword.

15 And the king's [y] servants said unto the king, Behold, thy servants are ready to do whatsoever my lord the king shall § appoint.

16 And the king went forth, and all his household ‖ after him: and the king left [z] ten women, which were concubines, to keep the house.

17 And the king [a] went forth, and all the people after him, and tarried in a place that was far off.

18 And all his servants passed on beside him; and all the [b] Cherethites, and all the Pelethites,* and all the Gittites,† six hundred men which came after him from Gath, passed on before the king.

19 ¶ Then said the king to [c] Ittai the Gittite, Wherefore goest thou also with us? return to thy place, and abide with the king: for thou art a stranger, and also an exile.

20 Whereas thou camest but yesterday, should I this day ‡ make thee go up and down with us? Seeing I go whither I may, return thou, and take back thy brethren: [d] mercy and truth be with thee.

21 And Ittai answered the king, and said, [e] As the LORD liveth, and as my lord the king liveth, [f] surely in what place my lord the king shall be, whether in death or life, even there also will thy servant be.

22 And David said to Ittai, Go and pass over. And Ittai the Gittite passed over, and all his men, and all the little ones§ that were with him.

‡ David reigned but 40 years in all. This, therefore, cannot mean the 40th of his reign. Several versions, and Josephus, read 4 instead of 40; but the Hebrew MSS. do not support the change. The ordinary solution of the difficulty is therefore, the supposed error of some transcriber. This is a usual, but a most violent, gratuitous, and dangerous proceeding. Why not date from the era of David's appointment in Saul's stead, to the attempt of Absalom to supplant David? This is an intelligible era. Now, David was anointed, according to Hales, one of the highest authorities in chronology, A. M. 2281, and Absalom rebelled in 2341, which will exactly give the 40 years in the text.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—Most parents are incapable of continuing due severity towards their offending children. And crafty statesmen are disposed to humour their sovereign in his sinful indulgences; yea, with amazing dexterity they can dress up falsehood, to bring about their own designs. Sometimes they will pretend the mercy of God as a pattern, and the safety of the sovereign from popular insurrections, or the near approaches of death, as reasons, without any real regard to either. The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light. Truth never shames its author; and it is honourable to acknowledge our obligations. Handsome persons, and flourishing families, are to little purpose, while sin reigns in our heart, and the curse of God hovers over our head. But also himself passed over the [g] brook Kidron, and all the people passed over, toward the way of the [h] wilderness.*

24 ¶ And lo Zadok also, and all the Levites were with him, [i] bearing the ark of the covenant of God: and they set down the ark of God; and Abiathar went up,† until all the people had done passing out of the city.

25 And the king said unto Zadok, [k] Carry back the ark of God into the city: if I shall find favour in the eyes of the LORD, he will bring me again, and show me both it and [l] his habitation:

26 But if he thus say, I have no delight in thee; behold, [m] here am I, let him do to me as seemeth good unto him.‡

27 The king said also unto Zadok the priest, Art not thou [n] a seer? return into the [o] city in peace, and your two sons with you, Ahimaaz thy son, and Jonathan the son of Abiathar.

28 See, I will tarry in the [p] plain of the wilderness, until there come [q] word from you to certify me.

29 Zadok therefore and Abiathar carried the ark of God again to Jerusalem: and they tarried there.

30 ¶ And David went up by the ascent of [r] mount Olivet, and [§] wept as he went up, and [‖] had his head covered;‖ and he went barefoot: and all the people that was with him covered every man his head, and they went up, weeping as they went up.

31 ¶ And one told David, saying, [t] Ahithophel is among the conspirators with Absalom. And David said, O LORD, I pray thee, [u] turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness.

32 ¶ And it came to pass, that when David was come to the [x] top of the mount, where he [y] worshipped* God, behold, [z] Hushai the Archite came to meet him with [a] his coat rent, and earth upon his head:

33 Unto whom David said, If thou passest on with me, then thou shalt be a burden unto me:

34 But if thou [b] return to the city, and say unto Absalom, I will be thy servant, O king; as I have been thy father's servant hitherto, so will I now also be thy servant: then mayest thou for me defeat the counsel of Ahithophel.

35 And hast thou not there with thee Zadok and Abiathar the priests? therefore it shall be, that what thing soever thou shalt hear out of the king's house, thou shalt tell it to Zadok and Abiathar the priests.

36 Behold, they have [c] there with them their two sons, Ahimaaz Zadok's son, and Jonathan Abiathar's son; and by them ye shall send unto me every thing that ye can hear.

37 So Hushai, David's [d] friend, came into the city, and Absalom came into Jerusalem.

2 And the king said unto Ziba, What meanest thou by these? And Ziba said, The asses be for the king's household to [d] ride on; and the bread and summer-fruit for the [e] young men to eat; and the wine, that such as be faint in the wilderness may drink.

3 And the king said, And [f] where is thy master's son? And Ziba said unto the king, Behold, he abideth at Jerusalem: for [g] he said, To-day shall the house of Israel restore me the kingdom of my father.

with what art and perseverance do wicked men pursue their carnal schemes! Often they obtain, by their insolence, what their betters could not do by their deserts, or by their earnest and modest requests.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Indulged children often become the plague, if not the murderers, of parents. Young fools are fond of making a pompous figure in the world. And they who are least fit to rule are ordinarily the most ambitious of it. Zeal for the public welfare, and care to redress grievances, are the ordinary cloaks of the vilest ambition and treachery. Nor is the most upright administration able to escape the malignant aspersions of a discontented faction. But none are more apt to play the tyrant, when they have obtained power, than those who have paved their way to it by the basest condescensions. Gracious parents easily credit their children's pretences to reformation and devotion. But the vilest designs are ordinarily masked with a cloak of pretended religion: and they never want carnal prudence who have the devil to be their director. Slippery and tottering are the exalted stations and honours of this world. Our fortified abodes may soon become too weak or too hot for us, whilst our intimates, yea, almost all beside, go over to our enemy. Our severest strokes often come from hands which we least suspected: and fear of God's wrath, in our sufferings, sinks the spirits, and makes men cowards. In suffering times large families are great encumbrances: and, though terrible revolutions are great trials for young converts, yet strangers are often more faithful than our kindred and countrymen: and, the more distressful our case, they cleave to us the more resolutely. So let us, sinners of the Gentiles, cleave to David's Lord. Let neither the trials of life, nor the torments of death, separate us from him. The Lord's ministers ought to be patterns of fidelity, when others are inclined to rebel against their rightful sovereigns. It is hard for gracious persons to bear at once the stings of conscience, the base rebellion of children, and a want of the public ordinances of God: such.

if any, require our deepest sympathy and fellowship in grief. Bitter grief for our sin, and resignation to God's afflicting hand, must be attended with the diligent use of proper means for our relief: but none that trust in the Lord shall perish. Often our friends, and especially our Jesus, help us most when unseen. It is not the craft of politicians, but the God of heaven, that governs the world. He can easily turn the counsels of the crafty into foolishness, and cause the traitors to be betrayed. Let us commit our way to God, and he will bring it to pass.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Many, like Ziba, affect to be very generous of what is not really their own. The lying tongues of servants, and the presents of knaves, are snares and plagues to all concerned: and carnal and selfish designs are often concealed under the most seasonable and useful presents. But listening to slander, and a rash bestowal of valuable grants, prepare work for an after-shame and bitter repentance: for surely nothing is so base as to use infirmity for an occasion of injury; or to insult and abuse the miserable. Bitter is the state when an awakened conscience, and a railing neighbour, upbraid us with our guilt, while an angry God fearfully corrects us for it. Wicked revilers are fond of interpreting God's righteous judgments as a patronising of their malice: and innocence is no protection from a malicious and lying tongue. But no provocation can warrant our revenging ourselves, and returning evil for evil. The vilest reproaches should make us to search our ways, and condemn ourselves for our real faults. To see God's hand in every trial is the way to bear it aright. Patience under reproaches will issue in our full vindication at last. And happy are they who can thus withstand the strongest temptations to revenge, when they meet with the most insolent abuse. What an easy prey are proud men to every subtile flatterer! They take all those for friends whom they would wish to be such. It is hard for crafty politicians to confine themselves to untainted veracity and candour. Nay, such will often stick at nothing, however infamous or wicked, to secure their own purposes. But let us here observe how this most abominable conduct fulfils the righteous threatenings of God. He, who murdered his friend to conceal his adultery, has now ten of his concubines publicly debauched by his own son on the top of the same house where he began his crime.

is a man of war, and will not lodge with the people.

9 Behold, he [l] is hid now in some pit, or in some other place: and it will come to pass, [m] when some of them be overthrown at the first, that whosoever heareth it will say, There is a slaughter among the people that follow Absalom.

10 And [n] he also that is [n] valiant, whose heart is as the heart of a lion, shall [o] utterly melt: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is [p] a mighty man, and they which be with him are valiant men.

11 Therefore I counsel, that [q] all Israel be generally gathered unto thee, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, as [r] the sand that is by the sea for multitude, and [s] that thou go to battle in thine own person.

12 So shall we come upon him in some place where he shall be found, and we will light upon him as the dew falleth on the ground: and of him, and of all the men that are with him, there shall not be left so much as one.

13 Moreover, if he be gotten into a city, then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, and we will [t] draw it into the river, until there be not one small stone found there.

14 And Absalom and all the men of Israel said, The counsel of Hushai the Archite is better than the counsel of Ahithophel: [†] for the LORD had [u] appointed to [x] defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel, to the intent that the LORD might bring evil upon Absalom. [‡]

15 ¶ Then said Hushai unto [y] Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, Thus and thus did Ahithophel counsel Absalom and the elders of Israel; and thus and thus have I counselled.

16 Now therefore send quickly, and tell David, saying, Lodge not this night in the plains of the wilderness, but speedily pass over; lest the king be swallowed up, and all the people that are with him.

17 Now [z] Jonathan and Ahimaaz stayed by [a] En-rogel; (for they might not be seen to come into the city:) and a wench went and told them; and they went and told king David.

18 Nevertheless a lad saw them, and told Absalom: but they went both of them away quickly, and came to a man's house in [b] Bahurim, which had a well in his court; whither they went down.

19 And the woman took and [c] spread a covering over the well's mouth, and spread ground corn thereon; and the thing was not known.

20 And when Absalom's servants came to the woman to the house, they said, Where is Ahimaaz and Jonathan? And the woman said unto them, [d] They be gone over the brook of water. [*] And when they had sought and could not find them, they returned to Jerusalem.

21 And it came to pass, after they were departed, that they came up out of the well, and went and told king David, and said unto David, Arise, and pass quickly over the water: for [e] thus hath Ahithophel counselled against you.

22 Then [f] David arose, and all the people that were with him, and they passed over Jordan: by the morning light there lacked not one of them that was not gone over Jordan.

23 ¶ And when Ahithophel [g] saw that his counsel was not followed, he saddled his ass, and arose, and gat him home to his house, to his city, and [h] put his household in order, [†] and [i] hanged himself, and died, and was buried in the sepulchre of his father.

24 Then David came to [k] Mahanaim: and Absalom passed over Jordan, he and all the men of Israel with him.

25 ¶ And Absalom made [l] Amasa captain of the host instead of Joab: which Amasa was a man's son, whose name was Ithra an Israelite, that [‡] went in to Abigail the daughter of Nahash, [§] sister to Zeruiah, Joab's mother.

26 So Israel and Absalom pitched in the [m] land of Gilead.

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when David was come to Mahanaim, that Shobi the son of [n] Nahash of Rabbah of the children of Ammon, and [o] Machir the son of Ammiel of Lo-debar, and [p] Barzillai the Gileadite of Rogelim,

28 [q] Brought beds, [‖] and [*] basons, [†] and earthen vessels, and wheat, and barley, and flour, and parched corn, and beans, and lentiles, and parched pulse,

29 And honey, and butter, and sheep, and cheese of kine, for [r] David, and for the people that were with him, to eat: for they said, [s] The people is hungry, and weary, and thirsty, in the wilderness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—Some men have large capacities for contriving or executing mischief, or for imposing on their neighbours: yea, when men are once involved in sin, they drive deeper and deeper, till the most horrid crimes become, as it were, necessary for their own safety. Dangerous is the case of those princes who have rebellious subjects and unnatural children: but vain is their counsel who aim at the ruin of God's church and people. By the most secret ways He can divert their blows, and make them unanimously to alter their mind, and applaud what is for his glory and their own ruin: and the weakest instruments in his hand can answer the greatest of purposes. Good intelligence in war is as necessary as good advice. In my spiritual warfare, let the all-knowing Jesus, whose despatches neither hell nor earth can stop, communicate to me my necessary informations. While we depend on God's protection, we must give all diligence to save ourselves. But not one follower of Jesus Christ shall be lost in the Jordan of trouble or death. The prayers of his saints are often indeed answered in a more people under [c] the hand of Joab, and a third part under the hand of Abishai the son of Zeruiah, Joab's brother, and a third part under the hand of Ittai the Gittite: and the king said unto the people, [d] I will surely go forth with you myself also.

3 But the people answered, [e] Thou shalt not go forth: for if we flee away, they will not [*] care for us; neither if half of us die, will they care for us: but now thou art [f] worth ten thousand of us: [†] therefore now it is better that thou [g] succour us out of the city.

4 And the king said unto them, What seemeth you best I will do. And the king [h] stood by the gate-side, [‡] and all the people came out by hundreds and by thousands.

5 And the king commanded Joab, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, [i] Deal gently, for my sake, with the young man, even with Absalom. And all the people heard when the king gave all the captains charge concerning Absalom.

6 ¶ So the people went out into the field against Israel: and the battle was in the [k] wood of Ephraim;

7 Where the people of Israel were slain before the servants of David; and there was there a [l] great slaughter that day of twenty thousand men.

8 For the battle was there scattered over the face of all the country: and [m] the wood [n] devoured [§] more people that day than the sword devoured.

9 ¶ And Absalom met the servants of David. And Absalom rode upon a mule, and the mule went under the thick boughs of a great oak, and his [o] head caught hold of the oak, and he was taken up between the heaven and the earth; and the mule that was under him went away.

10 And a certain man saw it, and told Joab, and said, Behold, I saw Absalom hanged in an oak. [‖]

11 And Joab said unto the man that told him, And, behold, thou sawest him; and why didst thou not smite him there to the ground? and I would have given thee [*] ten shekels of silver, and a girdle.

12 And the man said unto Joab, Though I should [†] receive a [‡] thousand shekels of silver in mine hand, yet would I not put forth mine hand against the king's son: for in our hearing the king [p] charged thee, and Abishai, and Ittai, saying, [§] Beware that none touch the young man Absalom.

13 Otherwise I should have wrought falsehood [q] against mine own life: for there is no matter hid from the king, and thou thyself wouldest have set thyself against me.

14 Then said Joab, I may not tarry thus [*] with thee. And he took three darts [†] in his hand, and [r] thrust them through the heart of Absalom, while he was yet alive in the [s] midst of the oak.

15 And ten young men that bare Joab's armour compassed about and smote Absalom, and slew him.

16 And Joab [t] blew the trumpet, and the people returned from pursuing after Israel: for Joab held back the people.

17 And they took Absalom, and cast him into a great pit in the wood, and [u] laid a very great heap of stones [‡] upon him: and all Israel fled every one to his tent.

18 ¶ Now Absalom in his lifetime had taken and reared up for himself a pillar, [x] which is in the king's dale: for he said, [y] I have no son to keep my name in remembrance: and he [z] called the pillar after his own name: and it is called unto this day, Absalom's Place. [§]

19 ¶ Then said [a] Ahimaaz the son of Zadok, Let me now run and bear the king tidings, how that the LORD hath [b] avenged him of his enemies.

20 And Joab said unto him, Thou shalt not [c] bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day: but this day thou shalt bear no tidings, because the king's son is dead.

21 Then said Joab to [d] Cushi, Go tell the king what thou hast seen. And Cushi bowed himself unto Joab, and ran.

22 Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok yet again to Joab, But, [‖] howsoever, let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushi. And Joab said, Wherefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings [*] ready?

23 But howsoever, said he, let me run. And he said unto him, Run. Then Ahimaaz ran by the way of the plain, and over-ran Cushi.

24 ¶ And David sat [e] between the two gates: [†] and the watchman went up to the [f] roof over the gate unto the wall, and lifted up his eyes, and looked, and behold a man running alone.

25 And the watchman cried, and told the king. And the king said, If he be alone, [‡] there is tidings in his mouth. And he came apace, and drew near.

26 And the watchman saw another man running: and the watchman called unto the porter, and said, Behold another man running alone. And the king said, He also bringeth tidings.

awful manner than they could have wished. Disappointed pride produces self-murder to such as sought their life. But how much more terrible is their disappointment, who meet with everlasting shame and destruction by fleeing to death, as their refuge from present contempt or hazard! [d] Why is the conduct of David, in the case of Bathsheba's child, (ch. 12. 23.) and in the case of Absalom, so different? There are two reasons for the difference. (2) David was lamenting Absalom, not merely as a rebel son, but a lost sinner; a thought, of all thoughts, the most grievous to a parent's heart.—ED.

6 [*] In that thou lovest thine enemies, and hatest thy friends: for thou hast declared this day, [†] that thou regardest neither princes nor servants: for this day I perceive, that if Absalom had lived, and all we had died this day, then [e] it had pleased thee well.

7 Now therefore arise, go forth, and speak [f] comfortably unto thy servants: for I swear by the LORD, if thou go not forth, there [g] will not tarry one with thee this night; [‡] and that will be worse unto thee than all the evil that befell thee from thy youth until now.

8 Then the king arose, and [h] sat in the gate. And they told unto all the people, saying, Behold, the king doth sit in the gate. And all the people came before the king; for [i] Israel had fled every man to his tent.

9 ¶ And all the people were at [k] strife throughout all the tribes of Israel, [§] saying, The king [l] saved us out of the hand of our enemies, and he delivered us out of the hand of the Philistines, and now he is fled out of the land for Absalom.

10 And Absalom, whom we [m] anointed over us, is dead in battle: now therefore why [n] speak ye not a word of bringing the king back?

11 ¶ And king David sent to [o] Zadok and to Abiathar the priests, [‖] saying, Speak unto the elders of Judah, saying, Why are ye the [p] last to bring the king back to his house? seeing the speech of all Israel is come to the king, even to his house.

12 Ye are [q] my brethren, ye are my bones and my flesh: wherefore then are ye the last to bring back the king?

13 And say ye [r] to Amasa, Art thou not of my bone, and of my flesh? [s] God do so to me, and more also, if thou be not captain of the host before me continually [t] in the room of Joab.

14 And he bowed the heart of all the men of Judah, [*] even [u] as the heart of one man; so that they sent this word unto the king, Return thou, and all thy servants.

15 So the king returned, and came to Jordan. And Judah came to [x] Gilgal, to go to meet the king, to conduct the king over Jordan.

16 ¶ And [y] Shimei the son of Gera, a Benjamite, which was of Bahurim, hasted, and came down with the men of Judah to meet king David.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—In dangerous times great care ought to be taken for the security and honour of princes: and good advice from inferiors ought to be readily complied with. No undutifulness can root out or obliterate strong parental affection. What then must be the affection of God to his children! How quickly, how easily, the enemies of God are overthrown, and that by means the most unexpected! Both the hopes and joys of the wicked soon issue in misery and shame: and they who flee from God's arm only rush into his net. Pride proves men's shame at last. A head trimmed, at the expense of neglecting the soul, is

18 And there went over a ferry-boat* to carry over the king's household, and to do † what he thought good. And Shimei the son of Gera fell down before the king, as he was come over Jordan;

19 And said unto the king, Let not my lord impute iniquity unto me, neither do thou remember [a] that which thy servant did perversely the day that my lord the king went out of Jerusalem, that the king should take it to his heart.

20 For thy servant doth know that I have sinned: therefore, behold, I am come [b] the first this day of all the house of Joseph‡ to go down to meet my lord the king.

21 But Abishai the son of Zeruiah answered and said, [c] Shall not Shimei be put to death for this, because he cursed the LORD's anointed?

22 And David said, [d] What have I to do with you, ye sons of Zeruiah, that ye should this day be adversaries unto me? [e] shall there any man be put to death this day in Israel? for do not I know that I am this day king over Israel?

23 Therefore the king said unto Shimei, [f] Thou shalt not die: and the king [g] sware unto him.

24 ¶ And [h] Mephibosheth the son of Saul came down to meet the king, and had neither [i] dressed his feet, nor trimmed his beard,§ nor washed his clothes, from the day the king departed until the day he came again in peace.

25 And it came to pass, when he was come to Jerusalem to meet the king, that the king said unto him, Wherefore wentest not thou with me, Mephibosheth?

26 And he answered, My lord, O king, my servant deceived me: for thy servant said, I will saddle me an ass, that I may ride thereon, and go to the king; because thy servant is lame.

27 And [k] he hath slandered thy servant unto my lord the king; but my lord the king is as an [l] angel of God: do therefore what is good in thine eyes.

28 For [m] all of my father's house were but [ll] dead men before my lord the king; yet didst thou set thy servant among them that did eat at thine own table: what right therefore have I yet to cry any more unto the king?

29 And the king said unto him, Why speakest thou any more of thy matters? I have said, [n] Thou and Ziba divide the land.*

30 And Mephibosheth said unto the king, [o] Yea, let him take all, forasmuch as my lord the king is come again in peace unto his own house.

31 ¶ And [p] Barzillai the Gileadite came down from Rogelim, and went over Jordan with the king, to conduct him over Jordan.

32 Now Barzillai was a very aged man, even fourscore years old: and [q] he had provided the king of sustenance while he lay at Mahanaim; for he was a very great man.

33 And the king said unto Barzillai, [r] Come thou over with me, and I will feed thee with me in Jerusalem.

34 And Barzillai said unto the king, [s] How long have I to live, that I should go up with the king unto Jerusalem?

35 I am this day [t] fourscore years old: and can I discern between good and evil? [u] can thy servant taste what I eat or what I drink? can I hear any more the voice of singing-men and singing-women?* wherefore then should thy servant be yet a burden unto my lord the king?

36 Thy servant will go a little way over Jordan with the king: and why should the king recompense it me with such a reward?

37 Let thy servant, I pray thee, turn back again, that I may die in mine own city, and be buried by the grave of my father and of my mother: but behold thy servant [x] Chimham; let him go over with my lord the king; and do to him what shall seem good unto thee.

38 And the king answered, Chimham shall go over with me, and I will do to him that which shall seem good unto thee: and whatsoever thou shalt † require of me, that will I do for thee.

39 And all the people went over Jordan. And when the king was come over, the king [y] kissed Barzillai, [z] and blessed him; and he returned unto his own place.

40 Then the king went on to Gilgal, and Chimham went on with him: and [a] all the people of Judah conducted the king, and also half the people of Israel.‡

41 ¶ And, behold, [b] all the men of Israel§ came to the king, and said unto the king, Why have our brethren the men of Judah‖ stolen thee away, and have brought the king and his household, and all David's men with him, over Jordan?

42 And all the men of Judah answered the men of Israel, [c] Because the king is near of kin to us:* wherefore then be ye angry for this matter? have we eaten at all of the king's cost? or hath he given us any gift?

David had purposed not to give cause of sorrow on the day of his joyous restoration (ver. 22.) like to prove ruinous to both. Monuments of fame often serve only to perpetuate the disgrace of the erectors. Fearful is the guilt, and dreadful the end, of rebellious children. But success, whether in work or warfare, should be wholly ascribed to the Lord: and messages of evil cannot be too tenderly delivered. Yet is it not astonishing to find so great and good a man neglecting to praise God for his wonderful salvation; quarrelling with his kind providence; opposing the justice of the nation; uttering things unadvisedly with his lips; and so immoderately bewailing a son abandoned of Heaven to every thing vile and hateful!

2 So [*] every man of Israel went up from after David, and followed Sheba the son of Bichri: but [f] the men of Judah clave unto their king, from Jordan even to Jerusalem.

5 So Amasa went to assemble the men of Judah: but he [l] tarried longer [§] than the set time which he had appointed him.

‖ Proverbial expressions founded upon local circumstances or peculiarities must necessarily be more or less obscure. But does not the obscurity of the text arise principally from the insertion of the word "counsel" instead of the word "questions?" Is not the object of the wise woman to excuse her questions by pleading the inquisitive character of her town? Her first question, (ver. 17.) is very artful, "Art thou Joab?" As much as to insinuate—"The hero of whom we have heard so much?" Her second, (ver. 19.) "Why wilt thou swallow up the inheritance of the Lord?" is an irresistible appeal to mercy, generosity, patriotism and piety, and had Joab been a worse man than he was, we could not be surprised at its success.—Ed.

11 And one of Joab's men stood by him, and said, [t] He that favoureth Joab, and he that is for David, let him go after Joab.

12 And Amasa [u] wallowed in blood in the midst of the highway: and when the man saw that all the people stood still, he removed Amasa out of the highway into the field, and cast a cloth upon him, when he saw that every one that came by him stood still.

13 When he was removed out of the highway, all the people went on after Joab, to pursue after Sheba the son of Bichri.

14 ¶ And [x] he went through all the tribes of Israel unto [y] Abel, and to Beth-maachah, and all the Berites: and they were gathered together, and went also after him.

Reflections upon Chap. XIX.—The productions of unbridled passions are always unseasonable and dangerous. Few will risk their life for such as, after all, will look down upon them with neglect, and if we foolishly bring ourselves into danger, we shall justly be upbraided with it. Good counsel, though bluntly, and even roughly given, should be thankfully received. And, when we have done ill, we cannot too soon seek to amend it: but, when many are guilty, it is too common to cast the blame on their neighbours. Ministers ought to be principal promoters of loyalty. It is shameful when those, who ought to be most forward in duty, need instigation to it. Clemency is one of the noblest qualities of princes: and professions of deep sorrow for faults committed powerfully pacify the injured. But let us rejoice that Jesus will never condemn penitent sinners, though Satan stand at their right hand to accuse them. Our rash reception of evil reports concerning our friends turns to our shame, when they manifest their innocence. Wicked servants do their masters inexpressible injuries: but good men, like Mephibosheth, make times of distress seasons of mourning and grief, and disregard their own interests in comparison of those of God's church and people. Riches are truly blessings when possessed by generous minds, and liberally ministered for the support of the indigent. Grateful hearts count themselves happy to have it in their power to recompense their friends: and noble minds count little of all the services they can do to their friends. But observe, courts, feasting, and mirth, are poor preparations for death: and old men especially would do well often to decline all intercourse with them, that they may contemplate the more important concerns that now so closely press upon them, and cheerfully leave the more active employments for those whose age and capacities are more suitable to such a task. With what caution ought public affairs to be conducted! By pride cometh contention. A small evidence of respect might often prevent, not only angry alterations

CHAPTER XXI.

(1) God punishes Saul's violation of the national oath to the Gibeonites, by a three years' famine: 1, 2. (2) By the delivery of seven of Saul's offspring to the Gibeonites, the plague of famine is stopped: 3—9. (3) Rizpah's care of the hanged bodies: David orders them to be taken down, and buried with the bones of Saul and Jonathan, now brought from Jabesh-Gilead: 8—14. (4) The Philistines are defeated, and their giants slain, by the hand of David and his servants: 15—22.

THEN there was a [a] famine in the days of David three years, year after year; and David [b] inquired of the LORD. And the LORD answered, [c] It is for Saul, and for his bloody house, because he slew the Gibeonites.*

2 And the king called the Gibeonites, and said unto them; (now the Gibeonites were not of the children of Israel, but [d] of the remnant of the Amorites; and the children of Israel had sworn unto them: and Saul sought to slay them [e] in his zeal to the children of Israel and Judah:)

3 Wherefore David said unto the Gibeonites, What shall I do for you? and wherewith shall I make the atonement, that ye may [f] bless the inheritance of the LORD?

4 And the Gibeonites said unto him, [g] We will have no silver nor gold of Saul, nor of his house; neither for us shalt thou kill any man in Israel. And he said, What ye shall say, that will I do for you.

5 And they answered the king, The man that consumed us, and that [h] devised against us, that we should be destroyed from remaining in any of the coasts of Israel,

6 Let [i] seven men of his sons be delivered

‡ As Michal had no children of her own, (chap. 6. 23.) some consider her name an error of a transcriber; and some translations ascribe the children to Merab. Others think Michal merely educated the children of whom Merab was mother; while some consider the name of the one, Michal, and of the other Michal Merab, and, by abbreviation, Michal. We adopt the latter view, which is perfectly consonant with Hebrew practice, inasmuch as the word translated brought up, seems to us to signify, bare as a mother.—Ed.

7 But the king spared [l] Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, the son of Saul, because of [m] the LORD's oath that was between them, between David and Jonathan the son of Saul.

8 But the king took the two sons of [n] Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, whom she bare unto Saul, Armoni and Mephibosheth; and the five sons of [o] Michal [‡] the daughter of Saul, whom she [§] brought up for Adriel, the son of Barzillai the Meholathite:

9 And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and they hanged them [p] in the hill before the LORD: and they fell all seven together, and were put to death in the days of harvest, in the first days, [q] in the beginning of barley harvest.

10 ¶ And [r] Rizpah the daughter of Aiah took sackcloth, and spread it for her[‖] upon the rock, from the beginning of harvest until water dropped upon them* out of heaven, and suffered neither the birds of the air to rest on them by day, nor the beasts of the field by night.†

11 And it was told David what Rizpah the daughter of Aiah, the concubine of Saul, had done.

12 ¶ And David went and took the [s] bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his son, from the men of Jabesh-gilead, which had stolen them from the street of Beth-shan, where the Philistines had hanged them, when the Philistines had slain Saul in Gilboa:

13 And he brought up from thence the bones of Saul, and the bones of Jonathan his son; and they gathered the bones of them that were hanged.

14 And [t] the bones of Saul and Jonathan his son buried they in the country of Benjamin in Zelah, [u] in the sepulchre of Kish his father;‡ and they performed all that the king commanded: and after that [x] God was entreated for the land.

15 ¶ Moreover the Philistines had yet war again with Israel; and David went down, and his servants with him, and fought against the Philistines: and David waxed faint.

16 And Ishbi-benob, which was of the sons of [y] the giant, (the weight of whose [§] spear weighed [‖] three hundred shekels of brass in weight,) he being girded with a new sword, thought to have slain David.

but much murder and bloodshed. It is best to yield, and to leave off strife before it be meddled with: for when men are once in a passion, they are sure to speak wrong, even though they have truth on their side.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—We must not expect to enjoy long peace on earth. Foolish, and even trifling quarrels, have often dangerous consequences; and all of a sudden our most zealous friends may become our bitterest enemies. Objects of unlawful pleasure are often turned into standing memorials of our grief and shame: and an obscure retirement is fittest for those who have made themselves publicly scandalous. Kings seldom find that rash changes of the commanders in their army turn out to their satisfaction. Hardened murderers cannot be restrained by law. Impunity in one act encourages them to another. But let them outbrave their sovereign, or cover their bloodshed, yet God will punish them at last. One daring sinner often involves many in his punishment. But what a mercy, amidst the ravages of war, is a fit mediator! The terms of peace may often be very easy, would the parties but once confer together, and understand one another.

17 But Abishai the son of Zeruiah [z] succoured him, and smote the Philistine, and killed him. Then the men of David sware unto him, saying, [a] Thou shalt go no more out with us to battle, that thou [b] quench not the [*] light of Israel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—The obligations of public oaths and covenants are lasting and solemn; and the breaches of them, be the pretexts what they will, are highly provoking to God. Wicked and murderous magistrates are a great plague to nations. God may long defer his judgments without averting them: but old sins are not forgotten by him. The time of recompense will come at last; and may soon turn a fruitful land into barrenness. God's judgments should therefore make us search out and bewail our own and our fathers' iniquities. The sins of parents often entail misery on their posterity. And, though the poor oppressed should have no power to relieve themselves, God will plead their cause: nor, till satisfaction be made them, can we hope for a blessing from God. Thus they, who maliciously designed the ruin of others, bring themselves and families to misery! and how unsearchable are the judgments of God in ruining the families of his wrath! Severe executions for the public good are sometimes necessary. Many parents are long spared to meet with sad scenes of anguish and grief: and often survivors, by

CHAPTER XXIII.

(1) Some of David's last words, intimating what magistrates ought to be and do, and what Jesus would be and do; what comfort he found in the fulness and stability of God's covenant; and what miseries should befall the enemies of his seed, and especially of Jesus Christ: 1—7. (2) A list of his principal warriors, and their most remarkable exploits: 8—39.

NOW these be [a] the last words of David.* David the son of Jesse said, and [b] the man who was raised up on high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the [c] sweet psalmist of Israel, said,

2 The [d] Spirit of the LORD [†] spake by me, and his word was in my tongue.

3 The [e] God of Israel said, the Rock of Israel spake to me, [f] He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God:[‡]

4 And [g] he shall be as the light of the morning when the sun riseth, even a morning without clouds; as [h] the tender grass springing out of the earth by clear shining after rain.

5 Although my house be [i] not so with God;[§] yet he hath [k] made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things, and sure: for [l] this is all my salvation [‖] and all my desire, although [m] he make it not to grow.

6 But the [n] sons of Belial shall be all of them as thorns thrust away, because they cannot be taken with hands:

7 But the man that shall touch them must be fenced with iron and the staff of a spear; and they shall be utterly burned with fire in the same place.

8 ¶ These be the names of the mighty men whom David had: [o] The Tachmonite that sat in the seat, chief among the captains; (the same was Adino the Eznite;) he lifted up his spear against eight hundred, whom he slew at one time.

9 And after him was [p] Eleazar the son of Dodo the Ahohite, one of the three mighty men with David, when [q] they defied the Philistines that were there gathered together to battle, and the men of Israel were gone away:

10 [r] He arose, and smote the Philistines until his hand was weary, and his hand clave unto the sword: and the LORD wrought a great taking pains to revive the memory of lost friends, prove their own self-tormentors. Fidelity to sovereigns, in moments of danger, is extremely honourable. Strength of body is of no use to resist God, or withstand death. But let God's people be attacked as often as they may by their enemies, they will come off more than conquerors through him who loveth them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Such as God has intended for great honour, or who follow Jesus into his kingdom, may be assured of meeting with many enemies by the way. But what was in the promise the object of our faith, will, in the fulfilment, become the matter of our praise. Behold what God is to his people! Every thing they can need; every thing they can enjoy. Happy those who can claim this infinite ALL, in every form, as their own. To awaken their importunity, and to magnify God's love and power in their deliverances, God's people are often reduced to the deepest distresses: and those whom he most delights in have the severest exercises of their faith and patience. But, the sharper our trials, let us call the more earnestly upon God. Perseverance in prayer will assuredly be crowned with deliverance—amazing deliverance! What a mercy is it to receive grace to watch and wrestle against the sins which do so easily beset us—to have the testimony of a good conscience—and to have God freely rewarding his own grace in us! Great is the advancement of God's people. And it is victory that day; and the people returned after him only to spoil.

11 And after him was [s] Shammah the son of Agee the Hararite. And the Philistines were gathered together into a troop, where was a piece of ground full of lentiles: and the people fled from the Philistines.

12 But he stood in the midst of the ground, and defended it,* and slew the Philistines: and [t] the LORD wrought a great victory.

13 And [†] three of the thirty chief went down, and came to David in the harvest time unto [u] the cave of Adullam: and the troop of the Philistines pitched in the valley of [x] Rephaim.

14 And David was then [y] in an hold, and the garrison of the Philistines was then in Bethlehem.

15 And David longed,[‡] and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the [z] water of the well of Beth-lehem, which is by the gate!

16 And the three mighty men brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: nevertheless he would not drink thereof, but poured [a] it out unto the LORD:

17 And he said, Be it far from me, O LORD, that I should do this: is not this the blood of the men that went in jeopardy of their lives? therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mighty men.

18 And [b] Abishai, the brother of Joab, the son of Zeruiah, was chief among three: and he lifted up his spear against three hundred, [§] and slew them, and had the name among three.

19 Was he not most honourable of three? therefore he was their captain: howbeit he [c] attained not unto the first three.

20 And [d] Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, the son of a valiant man of [e] Kabzeel, [f] who had done many acts, he slew two [g] lion-like men of Moab: he went down also and slew a lion in the midst of a pit in time of snow.

21 And he slew an Egyptian, [h] a goodly man: and the Egyptian had a spear in his hand; but he went down to him [‖] with a staff, and plucked the spear out of the Egyptian's hand, and [i] slew him with his own spear.

22 These things did Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and had the name among three mighty men.

23 He was [*] more honourable than the thirty, but he attained not to the first three: and David set him over his [*†] guard.

reasonable that God should have the glory of all that strength, success, or honour with which he hath blessed us: yea, the more God has done for us, the more good we may expect at his hands. And the more confidently should all our faith, our thanksgiving, and our joy, centre in Jesus Christ our Lord.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—It is a high honour to be endowed with gifts, and invested with offices, by the God of Israel, for the benefit of his people: for his gifts and graces are necessary for the faithful discharge of every office in church or state. What a mercy to mankind is Jesus and his new covenant! It is pleasant to die in his arms, beholding his glory, resting on his atonement, and cleaving to his promise: but great is the wickedness, and dreadful the end, of those that oppose him and the interests of his church. God distributes, in a most sovereign manner, his endowments even in natural things, rendering men weak or strong, cowardly or brave, as he pleases. And it is sinful, for self-indulgence, or to please a superior's humour, to hazard human life: and very necessary to repent bitterly of such conduct. But let me, refreshed with the living water which flows from Jesus the Beth-lehemite, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might; so shall I put to flight the heroes and the armies of the aliens. No powers of hell or earth shall be able to withstand me; and with honour shall my deeds be recorded in the Lamb's book of life.

LORD thy God add unto the people, how many soever they be, an hundred-fold, and that the eyes of my lord the king may see it: but why doth my lord the king delight in this thing?

4 Notwithstanding the king's word prevailed against Joab, and against the captains of the host: and Joab and the captains of the host [f] went out from the presence of the king to number the people of Israel.

5 ¶ And they passed over Jordan, and pitched in [g] Aroer, on the right side of the city that lieth in the midst of the [*] river of Gad, and toward [h] Jazer:

6 Then they came to [i] Gilead, and to the [†] land of Tahtim-hodshi; and they came to [k] Dan-jaan, and about to [l] Zidon,

7 And came to the strong hold of [m] Tyre, and to all the cities of the Hivites, and of the Canaanites; and they went out to the [n] south of Judah, even to Beer-sheba.

8 So, when they had gone through all the land, they came to Jerusalem at the end of nine months and twenty days.

9 And [o] Joab gave up the sum of the number of the people unto the king: and there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drew the sword; and the men of Judah were five hundred thousand men.[‡]

10 ¶ And David's heart [p] smote him [§] after that he had numbered the people. And David said unto the LORD, [q] I have sinned greatly in that I have done: and now, I beseech thee, O LORD, take away the iniquity of thy servant; for I have done very foolishly.

11 For, when David was up in the morning, the word of the LORD came unto the prophet [r] Gad, David's seer, saying, 12 [s] Go and say unto David, Thus saith the LORD, I offer thee three things; choose thee one of them, [t] that I may do it unto thee.

13 So Gad came to David, and told him, and said unto him, [u] Shall seven years[‖] of famine come unto thee in thy land? or wilt thou flee three months before thine enemies, while they pursue thee? or that there be three days' pestilence in thy land? now advise, and see what answer I shall return to him that sent me.

14 And David said unto Gad, [x] I am in a great strait: let us fall now into the hand of the LORD, (for his mercies are [y] great,) and let me not fall into the hand of [z] man.

15 ¶ So the LORD sent a [a] pestilence upon Israel from the morning even to the time appointed: and there died of the people, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, seventy thousand men.

16 And when the angel stretched out his hand upon Jerusalem to destroy it, [b] the LORD repented [*] him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed the people, It is enough; stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD was by the thrashing-place of [c] Araunah the Jebusite.

17 And David spake [d] unto the LORD, when he saw the angel that smote the people, and said, [e] Lo, I have sinned, and I have done wickedly; but [f] these sheep, what have they done? Let thine hand, I pray thee, be against me,[†] and against my father's house.

18 ¶ And Gad came [g] that day to David, and said unto him, Go up, rear an altar unto the LORD in the thrashing-floor of Araunah the Jebusite.

19 And David, according to the saying of Gad, went up, [h] as the LORD commanded.

20 And [i] Araunah looked, and saw the king and his servants coming on toward him: and Araunah went out, and [k] bowed himself before the king on his face upon the ground.

21 And Araunah said, [l] Wherefore is my lord the king come to his servant? And David said, To buy the thrashing-floor of thee, to build an altar unto the LORD, that [m] the plague may be stayed from the people.

22 And Araunah said unto David, [n] Let my lord the king take and offer up what seemeth good unto him: behold, here be oxen for burnt-sacrifice, and thrashing-instruments, and other instruments of the oxen, for wood.

23 All these things did Araunah, as a king, give unto the king: and Araunah said unto the king, [o] The LORD thy God accept thee.

24 And the king said unto Araunah, [p] Nay; but I will surely buy it of thee at a price: neither will I offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD my God of that which doth cost me nothing. So David bought the thrashing-floor and the oxen for [q] fifty shekels of silver.[‡]

25 And David [r] built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings. So the LORD was [s] entreated for the land, and the plague was stayed from Israel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—It is very dangerous when the sins of subjects provoke God to permit Satan to tempt their kings. He exactly discerns our pride, and detests it, and every thing leading to or produced by it. And it is cause of great shame to the saints, when monsters of wickedness are made to put them in mind of the promises of God and of their own duty. The pleasures obtained by sinful methods are quickly turned into the gall of asps within us: and bitter are the griefs, and great the straits, when we have no choice but of destructive judgments allowed us by God. Alas! our sin, our folly, makes it so! But let a sense of guilt put an edge of importunity he means prayers;—it may be the Lord will be gracious. He often smites where upon our not to destroy. And though, in his just judgment, he will abase our pride, by smiting our idol, he will mingle mercy with judgment. While, therefore, we tremble at his judgments, let us beware of provoking him by our sins. How it stings a generous mind to have neighbours, and especially a Saviour, suffering for his sins! But under all our guilt, and all our plagues, let Jesus, our altar, our sacrifice, and ransom, be applied to as the means of our reconcilement to God. Let sacrifices of praise attend our pardon, and every manifestation of it. And, however generous our friends may be, let us never willingly come under needless obligations to them; and never let us wish to serve God at the expense of others.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE SECOND BOOK OF SAMUEL.

CHAP. I. Ver. 18. Book of Jasher.—The book of Jasher is by some supposed to have been an uninspired book, now lost. But it were strange indeed, if an inspired writer referred to uninspired authority! The word Jasher signifying perfect, is it not much more likely that this was a mere Hebrew phrase of authentication, somewhat similar to the English phrase, "witness my hand and seal?"——Ver. 23. Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives.—This seems inconsistent with Saul's attempt against the life of Jonathan, 1 Sam. 20. 30—34. But, however deeply culpable, this was but a solitary act, and not any habitual disagreement.

CHAP. III. Ver. 36. Whatsoever the king did pleased all the people.—There are always "tides in the affairs of men," either for good or evil. David was now in the very height of popularity; and God who gave it, enabled David to improve it in correcting the abuses of government, and reorganizing the ordinances of religion. —Note. If any species of popular favour be employed to foster personal pride or vanity, it is evil: if turned to the advancement of public good, it is a blessing to be prized.

CHAP. V. Ver. 6. Except thou take away the blind and the lame, thou shalt not come in hither.—Who are "the blind and the lame?" Some think certain invalids whom the Jebusites had placed upon their lofty walls, to express their contempt of David's assault. Others consider them the images of their gods, whom the Hebrews contemptuously called "lame and blind," and whom, nevertheless, the Jebusites placed on the battlements as a protection; and this opinion is countenanced by the description, "hated of David's soul:" words supposed inapplicable to anything but idolatrous images. But though images might justly be called "blind," they could not be called "lame," as it implies some capacity of walking. We feel, therefore, compelled to adopt the first interpretation. Coverdale translates part of ver. 6, thus:—"Thou shalt not come hither, but the blind and the lame shall drive thee away;" which seems the true rendering. The word "gutter," in ver. 8, signifies in the original a "sewer," or subterraneous passage for water; and the last clause may, and should be rendered, "Because the blind and the lame continued to say, he shall not come into this house."

CHAP. VI. Ver. 3. They set the ark of God upon a new cart.—The manner of this procedure is contrary to the divine law, which required the ark to be carried on the shoulders of the Levites, by means of staves, and who were not, upon pain of death, even to touch any of the holy things, Num. 4. 15. The Philistines had indeed conveyed the ark home upon a cart, but that should have formed no precedent for David. It forms a melancholy example either of ignorance, inattention, or neglect, even in a reformation commenced and carried on with zeal for the glory of God. And if David so erred, let us take heed lest we fall.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 3. Nathan said to the king, Go, do all that is in thine heart.—Nathan spoke according to his own judgment. He drew his conclusion from David's divine call to the kingdom, the evident prosperity that God had bestowed upon him, and the goodness of the object proposed. But God, who judges not as man judges, directs the prophet to countermand his own order.—Note. It is not enough to mean well in what we propose for God's cause and honour, we must take care that the plan, the time, and the agency, are such as God approves. But how may these be known, if there be no prophet to receive and deliver the mind of God? Search the Scriptures, pray for the Spirit, and wait upon Providence.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 2. With one full line to keep alive.—Some interpreters think, that according to an asserted Oriental custom, David caused his prisoners to be cast on the ground; and, as a summary form of judgment, divided them by lines for life or death. Others conceive the passage to mean, that he divided the territory of Moab by three geographical lines, or marches—from two of which the inhabitants were to be extirpated, while within the other, called a full line, they were to be preserved. This sentence of David has been censured as severe: but that can be determined only by those who can prove the innocence of the convicts. A community of robbers, manstealers, murderers, or pirates—any community such as the Thugs of India, may as righteously be exterminated, as one single individual, Gen. 9. 6.——Ver. 18. Cherethites and the Pelethites.—The king's body guard: but who were they? The title of Cherethites, is applied to certain Philistines, (1 Sam. 30. 14. Ezek. 25. 16. Zeph. 2. 5.) hence some conclude they were, by birth, Philistines, enlisted into David's army. Others consider them to be those Israelites who, having adhered to David when he sojourned in Philistia, took this distinctive title, to mark their early, and well tried loyalty. The Pelethites some derive from Peleth, mentioned chap. 12. 2. as one of David's principal officers. The Jewish Targum calls them, "archers and slingers;" Gesenius, "headsmen" and "couriers;" and these several explanations may all be true, as the duties assigned are not incompatible.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. That I may show him kindness for Jonathan's sake.—This was a fulfilment of David's covenant with Jonathan, (1 Sam. 20. 15.) The precise time of the inquiry is not mentioned; but it is not likely a man of David's warmth of affection, would long overlook so important a duty.—Note. There is always danger of the heart being spoiled by prosperity; and then forgetting former engagements, or neglecting former acquaintances. The grace that keeps men humble in prosperity, can alone keep them faithful either to God or man.

CHAP. X. Ver. 2. His father showed kindness unto me.—There is no grace of the Spirit more lovely than gratitude for former favours; a grace that appears conspicuous in the character of David, and that animates him in his intercourse both with God and man.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 4. David sent messengers, and took her.—Here commences a most deplorable era in the life of David, but a remarkable example of that historical honesty which is to be found perfect in no book but the Holy Scriptures.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 3. Ewe lamb.—All animals, more especially the domestic, are capable of a wonderful extent of education; and the prophet exaggerates nothing, but merely describes what frequently occurs in their history.——Ver. 30. King's crown from off his head, the weight whereof was a talent of gold.—According to the common calculation of the talent, this would give 125 lbs., a weight that no man could bear. Whiston, however, calculates the talent here mentioned, at 7 lbs., which would give a weight that might be borne. Others think that value and not weight is indicated; this would make the crown worth about £6000. Others suppose it to be the crown, not of "their king," but of the idol of the Ammonites, called Milcom. The most probable opinion is, that the weight was according to the first calculation; for if not so remarkably great, why should it be so particularly noticed? and, that it was not worn on, but suspended over the head, of which fact ancient history furnishes many examples, and Sir W. Ouseley mentions it as still subsisting in Persia.——Ver. 31. Put them under saws.—Not that he so cruelly punished, as our translation conveys; but that he put them to work with saws, and harrows, and axes, and to make brick, as the original Hebrew will bear. The objection that may be urged against this sense, from the expression "cut," in 1 Chron. 20. 3. has been clearly removed by Kennicot.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 30. Tidings came to David, saying, Absalom hath slain all the king's sons.—The very exaggerated form in which rumour still continues to deliver her reports. Passion always exaggerates, and is therefore to be dreaded, whether in historian or judge.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 2. Tekoah.—A city of Judah, 12 miles south-east of Jerusalem. It was situate on a hill, and considerable ruins are described by modern travellers, as still remaining. Why did Joab send to Tekoah for a wise woman? (1) He must bring a petitioner from a distance, so that she may the less be suspected of collusion. (2) Tekoah was in Joab's own tribe, and he therefore culls his agent from his acquaintance. (3) He chooses her for her peculiar address and ready eloquence; which, when the words of Joab had been repeated, never forsakes her for a moment.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 6. Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israel.—This narrative presents a beautiful, magnificent, pains-taking, condescending, insinuating courtier; promising every man justice, that is, according to every suiter's opinion, a verdict in his favour. Alas! such are the arts by which hearts are won, a father defamed, a government overturned; and such the toils which hypocrites lay for others, and in which themselves are finally ensnared.——Ver. 23. Kidron.—This brook flows through a valley that lies to the east of Jerusalem, and between the city and the mount of Olives. It is a considerable stream in winter, but mostly dry for nine months in the year. Its bed is narrow, but steep, and is crossed by a bridge of one arch.——Ver. 30. Mount Olivet.—So called from its olive-trees. It is situate east of Jerusalem, from which it is separated by the valley of Jehoshaphat and brook Kidron, and is distant, according to Acts 1. 12. a sabbath-day's journey, or something less than an English mile.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 5. Bahurim.—A city of Benjamin, evidently not far from mount Olivet. The Targum considers it identical with Alemeth, 1 Chron. 6. 60. ——Ver. 7. Come out, thou bloody man.—"Come out" from the guards "on the right and left," that I may smite thee—a charge of cowardice to provoke David to expose himself—or "get out, get out" of the land.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 8. Thou knowest thy father.—Hushai, acting contrary to Ahithophel, always addresses Absalom with "thy father," and thus seeks to awaken every feeling of remorse, or tenderness, if such there were—or at least of caution, from the recollection of his military prowess.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 1. Set captains.—In every department of human affairs, success is, under Providence, largely the result of order. David therefore seizes the first moment, after his hurried and irregular flight, to arrange his followers, in the most efficient form.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 43. We have ten parts in the king.—It therefore seems most probable that Benjamin, swayed by David's kindness to Mephibosheth, and mercy to Shimei, (see ver. 16. and 17.) had not yet joined this movement, and that only ten tribes were originally concerned in the expostulation. Benjamin seems subsequently to have joined in the defection. See ch. 20. 1, 2, 4.——The words of the men of Judah were fiercer than the words of the men of Israel.—In which there was presumptive proof that the men of Judah were wrong—loudness and violence being proof of passion, not of reason.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 2. Saul sought to slay them.—In violation of the national faith, he sought to extirpate them, (ver. 5.) to satisfy the hereditary and unappeasable prejudices and hatred of the people; thus offering a bloody sacrifice to popularity, not even under pretence of justice.——Ver. 4. What ye shall say, that will I do for you.—Clarke very thoughtlessly blames David for leaving the selection of the punishment to the Gibeonites. He should first have shown that God had not so directed him. That God had done so, is plain from his subsequent approval of the punishment upon Saul's "bloody house."

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 50. Sing praises unto thy name.—Paul, (Rom. 15. 9.) applies this passage distinctly to Jesus the Messiah. And while ver. 51. speaks of David, let it be recollected that David, in the Hebrew, signifies beloved, so "beloved" is one of the titles of Christ ascribed to him both on earth and from heaven. See Matt. 3. 17. Eph. 1. 6.

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 4. He shall be as the light of the morning when the sun riseth.—A very valuable MS. collated by Kennicot, reads, "And as the light of the morning shall Jehovah arise, a sun." Such a change of reading, however, is not to be adopted on such slight authority, nor is it necessary to explain the passage. The whole difficulty vanishes when we rectify the translation of ver. 3. as in marginal note.——Ver. 7. Fenced with iron.—The translators not seeing Messiah in the passage, evidently consider these words as referring to a man attempting to gather the thorns, and requiring to be fenced against injury. But instead of fenced, we should translate the word filled, and then it becomes a prophecy of Christ which was literally fulfilled.——Ver. 8. Eight hundred, whom he slew at one time.—There is a seeming discrepancy between this passage and 1 Chron. 11. 11. though they seem to be spoken of the same person. The passages may easily be reconciled, thus:—(1) Though 1 Chronicles be placed after 2 Samuel, Chronicles may have been first written. (2) The Tachmonite may have assailed 300 at one time, 500 at another. (3) What the leader began, and his troops completed, may, according to all common usage, be ascribed to the leader.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. He moved David against them to say, Go number Israel and Judah.—By comparing this passage with 1 Chr. 21. 1, it will be seen that "Satan stood up against Israel, and provoked David" to this census. How is it, then, in this passage, ascribed to the Lord? Just as the Lord moves men to prayer by danger, and to repentance by affliction; so, being displeased with Israel and David, he delivers them over to Satan, their adversary, as he delivered Job; and David is thus judicially moved by the Lord, who has sentenced him, but instrumentally by Satan who accused him, and received power to tempt him.——Ver. 4. Went out from the presence of the king to number the people of Israel.—The census being taken by the military, and not by the civil or ecclesiastical authorities, (see Num. 1. 44.) proves that David contemplated a military enrolment, for purposes of war. But why then is David opposed by Joab and the other generals? Joab had the existing army completely in his interest, and was thereby generally too strong for David. But he dreaded such addition of new troops as might enable David to overpower him, or depose him from the chief command. Next, what was the sin of David and Israel, for which they are delivered over to the tempter, and punished with the plague? Their sin was the appetite for military glory beyond the purposes of defence, and of foreign conquest beyond the boundaries assigned them by God,—the most glaring sins, for which, and by which, nations still continue to be punished.——Ver. 13. See what answer I shall return to him that sent me.—We read in 1 Chr. 21. 12, that the alternative offer was not seven, but three years. How are these differences to be reconciled? The Septuagint reads three, in both places; and the seven, by what may be called the Gordian Canon, is charged to the error of a transcriber. But as there is great danger in this violent criticism, so there is no need of it. On examination, the two accounts will be found to have been delivered at different times—that in Chronicles the last; and in it the interrogative seven, are reduced to the positive three.

THE FIRST BOOK OF KINGS.

PERHAPS this and the following book were written by the prophets who lived in their respective periods; and the whole connected together by Jeremiah or Ezra. They contain the history of the Jewish church and nation for about four hundred and twenty-seven years, from the coronation of Solomon to the burning of the temple by the Chaldeans. The alternate changes of mercies and judgments therein represented are an exact fulfilment of Lev. xxvi. Deut. xxviii. xxxii.

Forty years the kingdom of Israel continued united under Solomon, whose instalment, wisdom, wealth, erection of the temple, and idolatrous apostasy, are largely described; i—xi. After the division, the kingdom of the ten tribes continued two hundred and fifty-four years under nineteen kings, descended from nine different families; viz., Jeroboam I. Nadab;—Baasha, Elah;—Zimri;—Omri, Ahab, Ahaziah, Jehoram;—Jehu, Jehoahaz, Jehoash, Jeroboam II. Zechariah;—Shallum;—Menahem, Pekahiah;—Pekah;—Hoshea; all of them idolaters. The kingdom of Judah continued three hundred and eighty-seven years, under nineteen kings of the line of David; viz., Rehoboam, Abijah, Asa, Jehoshaphat, Jehoram, Ahaziah, (Athaliah was an usurper,) Joash, Amaziah, Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, Hezekiah, Manasseh, Amon, Josiah, Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah: of whom Asa, Jehoshaphat, Jotham, Hezekiah, and Josiah, were pious, and Manasseh a penitent. The history of these thirty-nine sovereigns, with that of the prophets Elijah and Elisha, is the subject matter of these books. The scope is to show how righteousness exalts a nation, and sin is the reproach of any people.

NOW king David was [a] old and stricken in years; and they covered him with clothes, but he gat no heat.

2 Wherefore his [b] servants said unto him, Let there be sought for my lord the king a young virgin; and let her [c] stand before the king, and let her cherish him, and [d] let her lie in thy bosom, that my lord the king [e] may get heat.

3 So they [f] sought for a fair damsel throughout all the coasts of Israel, and found [g] Abishag a Shunammite, and brought her to the king.

4 And the damsel was very fair, and cherished the king, and ministered to him: but the king [h] knew her not.

5 ¶ Then [i] Adonijah the son of Haggith [k] exalted himself, saying, I will be king: and [l] he prepared him chariots and horsemen, and fifty men to run before him.

6 And his father [m] had not displeased him at any time* in saying, Why hast thou done so? and he also was a very [n] goodly man: and his [o] mother bare him after Absalom.

7 And he [p] conferred with [q] Joab the son of Zeruiah, and with Abiathar the priest: and they, following Adonijah, helped him.

8 But [r] Zadok the priest, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and Nathan the prophet, and Shimei,* and Rei, and the [s] mighty men which belonged to David, were not with Adonijah.

9 And Adonijah [t] slew sheep, and oxen, and fat cattle, by the stone of Zoheleth, which is by [u] En-rogel, and called all his brethren the king's sons, and all the men of Judah the king's servants:

10 But Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah, and the mighty men, and Solomon his brother, he called not.

11 ¶ Wherefore Nathan [x] spake unto Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon, saying, Hast thou not heard that Adonijah the son of Haggith doth reign, and David our lord knoweth it not?

12 Now therefore come, [y] let me, I pray thee, give thee counsel, that thou [z] mayest save thine own life, and the life of thy son Solomon.

13 Go and get thee in unto king David, and say unto him, Didst not thou, my lord, O king, swear unto thine handmaid, saying, [a] Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall [b] sit upon my throne? why then doth Adonijah reign?

17 And she said unto him, [f] My lord, thou swarest by the LORD thy God unto thine handmaid, saying, [g] Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne:*

18 And now, behold, [h] Adonijah reigneth; and now, my lord the king, thou knowest it not:

19 And he [i] hath slain oxen, and fat cattle, and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the sons of the king, and Abiathar the priest, and Joab the captain of the host: but Solomon thy servant hath he not called.

20 And thou, my lord, O king, the eyes of all Israel are upon thee, that thou shouldest tell them who shall sit on the throne of my lord the king after him.

21 Otherwise it shall come to pass, when my lord the king shall [k] sleep with his fathers, that I and my son Solomon shall be counted [l] offenders.

22 ¶ And, lo, while she yet talked with the king, [m] Nathan the prophet also came in.†

23 And they told the king, saying, Behold Nathan the prophet. And when he was come in before the king, he [n] bowed himself before the king with his face to the ground.

24 And Nathan said, My lord, O king, hast thou said, Adonijah shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne?

25 For [o] he is gone down this day, and hath slain oxen, and fat cattle, and sheep in abundance, and hath called all the king's sons, and the captains of the host, and Abiathar the priest; and, behold, they eat and drink before him, and say, [p] God save king Adonijah.

26 But me, [q] even me thy servant, and Zadok the priest, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and thy servant Solomon, hath he not called.

27 Is this thing done by my lord the king, and thou hast not [r] showed it unto thy servant, who should sit on the throne of my lord the king after him?

28 ¶ Then king David answered and said, Call me Bath-sheba:‡ and she came [§] into the king's presence, and stood before the king.

30 Even as [u] I sware unto thee by the LORD God of Israel, saying, Assuredly Solomon thy son shall reign after me, and he shall sit upon my throne in my stead; even so will I certainly do this day.

31 Then Bath-sheba [x] bowed with her face to the earth, and did reverence to the king, and said, [y] Let my lord king David live for ever.*

32 ¶ And king David said, Call me [z] Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada. And they came before the king.

33 The king also said unto them, Take with you the servants of your lord, and cause Solomon my son to [a] ride upon mine own mule, and bring him down to [b] Gihon:†

34 And let Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet, [c] anoint him there king over Israel: [d] and blow ye with the trumpet, and say, God save king Solomon.

35 Then ye shall come up after him, that he may come and sit upon my throne; for he shall be king in my stead: and * I have appointed him to be ruler over Israel and over Judah.

36 And Benaiah the son of Jehoiada answered the king, and said, [e] Amen: the LORD God of my lord the king say so too.

37 [g] As the LORD hath been with my lord the king, even so be he with Solomon, and [h] make his throne greater than the throne of my lord king David.

39 And Zadok the priest took an [k] horn of oil out of the tabernacle, and anointed Solomon; and they blew the trumpet; and all the people said, God save king Solomon.

42 And while he yet spake, behold, [n] Jonathan the son of Abiathar the priest came: and Adonijah said unto him, Come in; for thou art [o] a valiant man, and bringest good tidings.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—The strongest constitution of men quickly wastes of itself, and every project for retaining of strength or vigour is foolish and ineffectual. A burden of infirmities attends old age; and happy they, who, in the views of it, have all things ready for an eternal state! Indulgent parents are commonly in their old age contemned and plagued by their children, especially such as they most indulged. Ambition of reigning leads many to trample on the ordinances of both God and men. And they are, in general, most fond of high stations who neither know the duties of them, nor consider the labour and vexation 43 And Jonathan answered and said to Adonijah, [p] Verily our lord king David hath made Solomon king.

44 [q] And the king hath sent with him Zadok the priest, and Nathan the prophet, and Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, and the Cherethites, and the Pelethites, and they have caused him to ride upon the king's mule:

45 And Zadok the priest and Nathan the prophet have anointed him king in Gihon: and they are come [r] up from thence rejoicing, so that the city rang again. This is the noise that ye have heard.

46 And also Solomon [s] sitteth on the throne of the kingdom.

47 And, moreover, the king's servants came to [t] bless our lord king David, saying, [u] God make the name of Solomon better than thy name, and make his throne greater than thy throne. And the king [x] bowed himself upon the bed.

48 And also thus said the king, [y] Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which hath given one to sit on my throne this day, mine eyes even seeing it.

49 And [z] all the guests that were with Adonijah were afraid, and rose up, and went every man his way.

50 ¶ And Adonijah feared because of Solomon, and arose, and went, [a] and caught hold on the horns of the altar.*

51 And it was told Solomon, saying, Behold, Adonijah feareth king Solomon: for, lo, he hath caught hold on the horns of the altar, saying, Let king Solomon swear unto me to-day, that he will not slay his servant with the sword.

52 And Solomon said, If he will show himself a worthy man, there [b] shall not an hair of him fall to the earth: but if [c] wickedness shall be found in him, he shall die.†

53 So king Solomon sent, and they brought him down from the altar. And he came and bowed himself to king Solomon: and Solomon said unto him, [d] Go to thine house.

3 And [d] keep the charge of the LORD thy God, to walk in his ways, to keep his statutes, and his commandments, and his judgments, and his testimonies,* as it is written in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prosper in all that thou doest, and whithersoever thou turnest thyself;

4 That the LORD may [e] continue his word† which he spake concerning me, saying, If thy children take heed to their way, to walk before me in truth, with all their heart, and with all their soul, there shall not fail thee (said he) a man on the throne of Israel.

5 Moreover, thou knowest also [f] what Joab the son of Zeruiah did to me, and what he did to the two captains of the hosts of Israel, unto Abner the son of Ner, and unto Amasa the son of Jether, whom he slew, and shed the blood of war in peace, and put the blood of war upon his girdle that was about his loins, and in his shoes that were on his feet.

6 Do therefore [g] according to thy wisdom, and let not his hoar head go down to the grave in peace.‡

7 But [h] show kindness unto the sons of Barzillai the Gileadite, and let them be of those that eat at thy table: for so they came to me when I fled because of Absalom thy brother.

9 Now therefore [l] hold him not guiltless: for thou art a [m] wise man, and knowest what thou oughtest to do unto him; but his hoar head bring thou down to the grave with blood.‖

10 ¶ So [n] David slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David.

11 And [o] the days that David reigned over Israel were forty years: seven years reigned he in Hebron, and thirty and three years reigned he in Jerusalem.

12 ¶ [p] Then sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father; and his kingdom was established greatly.

13 ¶ And [q] Adonijah the son of Haggith came to Bath-sheba the mother of Solomon: and she said, Comest thou [r] peaceably? And he said, Peaceably.

14 He said moreover, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And she said, Say on.

‖ By rendering literally, and not idiomatically, the translators here have misrepresented the meaning, and thereby exposed the character of David. When the first member of a sentence in Hebrew, contains not, it is frequently omitted, while implied and required in the second. For examples, see Ps. 1. 5. & 9. 18. & 38. 1. Accordingly, the charge should stand, "but his hoar head bring thou not down to the grave with blood." And it is evident that Solomon so understood him; for while he sentenced Joab to death, (ver. 31.) he merely confined Shimei to Jerusalem, (ver. 36.) where his conduct might be under the royal surveillance, and his seditious spirit restrained.—ED.

But how easily God defeats every project inconsistent with his promise, even when it seems fully secured! In times of danger every prudent mean ought to be used for averting it. And they who know God's will should be zealous for the accomplishment of it.—While kings are often kept ignorant of things nearly concerning their kingdom and interest, usurpers will stick at no cruelty to fix themselves on a throne. But if the enemies of God's people be alert and vigorous, their friends ought to be active and vigilant: and such as are weak, through infirmity, should be stirred up and encouraged. Hearts truly grateful never forget God's mercies, nor allow themselves to neglect opportunities of thankfully mentioning them. 15 And he said, Thou knowest [s] that the kingdom was mine, and that all Israel set their faces on me, that I should reign: howbeit the kingdom is turned about, and is become my brother's; for [t] it was his from the LORD.

16 And now I ask one petition of thee, [u] deny me not. And she said unto him, Say on.

17 And he said, Speak, I pray thee, unto Solomon the king, (for he will not say thee nay,) that he give me [x] Abishag the Shunammite to wife.

18 And Bath-sheba said, [y] Well; I will speak for thee unto the king.

19 Bath-sheba therefore went unto king Solomon, to speak unto him for Adonijah. And the king [z] rose up to meet her, and bowed himself unto her, and sat down on his throne, and caused a seat to be set for the king's mother; and she sat on his [a] right hand.

20 Then she said, I desire one small petition of thee; I pray thee, say me not nay. And the king said unto her, Ask on, my mother; for I will not say thee [*] nay.[†]

21 And she said, [b] Let Abishag the Shunammite be given to Adonijah thy brother to wife.

22 And king Solomon answered and said unto his mother, And why dost thou ask Abishag the Shunammite for Adonijah? ask for him [c] the kingdom also; (for he is mine elder brother;) even for him, and for Abiathar the priest, and for Joab the son of Zeruiah.[‡]

23 Then king Solomon sware by the LORD, saying, [d] God do so to me, and more also, if Adonijah have not spoken this word against his own life.

24 Now therefore, [e] as the LORD liveth, which hath established me, and [f] set me on the throne of David my father, and who hath [g] made me an house, as he promised, Adonijah shall be [h] put to death this day.

* There is something very striking in so bad a man taking refuge in the tabernacle, not as a sanctuary where he might escape punishment, but as a place where he might die. 28 ¶ Then tidings came to Joab; (for [q] Joab had turned after Adonijah, though he turned not after Absalom:) and Joab fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD, and [r] caught hold on the horns of the altar.

29 And it was told king Solomon that Joab was fled unto the tabernacle of the LORD; and, behold, he is by the altar: then Solomon [s] sent Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, saying, Go, fall upon him.

30 And Benaiah came to the tabernacle of the LORD, and said unto him, Thus saith the king, Come forth. And he said, Nay; but I will die here.[*] And Benaiah brought the king word again, saying, Thus said Joab, and thus he answered me.

31 And the king said unto him, Do as he hath said, and [t] fall upon him, and bury him; that thou mayest take away the innocent blood, which Joab shed, from me, and from the house of my father.

32 And the LORD shall [u] return his blood upon his own head, who fell upon [x] two men more righteous and better than he, and slew them with the sword, my father David not knowing thereof, to wit, Abner the son of Ner, captain of the host of Israel, and Amasa the son of Jether, captain of the host of Judah.

33 Their blood [y] shall therefore return upon the head of Joab, and upon the head of his seed for ever: but [z] upon David, and upon his seed, and upon his house, and upon his throne, shall there be peace for ever from the LORD.

34 So [a] Benaiah the son of Jehoiada went up, and fell upon him, and slew him: and he was buried in his own house in the [b] wilderness.

35 ¶ And the king [c] put Benaiah the son of Jehoiada in his room over the host: and Zadok the priest did the king put in the room of Abiathar.

36 ¶ And the king sent and called for [d] Shimei, and said unto him, Build thee an house in [e] Jerusalem, and dwell there, and go not forth thence any whither.

37 For it shall be, that on the day thou goest out, and passest over the [f] brook Kidron, thou shalt know for certain that thou shalt surely die: [g] thy blood shall be upon thine own head.

38 And Shimei said unto the king, [h] The saying is good: as my lord the king hath said, so will thy servant do.[†] And Shimei dwelt in Jerusalem many days.

39 And it came to pass at the end of three years,[‡] that two of the servants of Shimei ran away unto [i] Achish, son of Maachah king of is begun with dependance on God, and fervent prayer for his blessing. It is affection, not force, that can make dutiful subjects: and to leave church and state in a prosperous condition is the joy of a dying saint. What discouragement and danger attend a bad cause! And blustering traitors are often cowards when matters come to a crisis. How becoming is it when kings are ready to forgive those who have injured them! But much more astonishing is the pardoning mercy of our Lord Jesus to the guiltiest sinners who flee to his atonement, and prostrate themselves at his throne of grace.

40 And Shimei [k] arose, and saddled his ass, and went to Gath to Achish to seek his servants: and Shimei went, and brought his servants from Gath.

41 And it was told Solomon that Shimei had gone from Jerusalem to Gath, and was come again.

42 And the king sent and called for Shimei, and said unto him, [l] Did I not make thee to swear by the LORD, and protested unto thee, saying, Know for a certain, that on the day thou goest out, and walkest abroad any whither, that thou shalt surely die? and thou saidst unto me, The word that I have heard is good.

43 Why then hast thou not kept [m] the oath of the LORD, and the commandment that I have charged thee with?[*]

44 The king said moreover to Shimei, [n] Thou knowest all the wickedness which thine heart is privy to, [o] that thou didst to David my father: therefore the LORD shall [p] return thy wickedness upon thine own head;

45 And king Solomon shall be [q] blessed, and the throne of David shall be established before the LORD for ever.

z That dreams furnish one of the "divers manners" in which God has communicated his will to men, no reader of the Bible can deny. But even independent of direct divine revelation, dreams afford sometimes a good index of real disposition and character—perhaps because the dreamer thinks and acts as he would do apart from the influence of observing eyes—and may often form valuable assistants in the work of self-observation and self-examination. He that speaks or acts wisely and mercifully in a dream, has reason to thank God—he that speaks foolishly or acts wickedly in a dream, has an intelligible call to self-condemnation, watchfulness, and prayer.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Happy are they who die in the Lord, encouraging their survivors to their proper duty! But none can be faithful to God without holy courage answerable to their station. In the way of obedience to God's precepts we may expect the fulfilment of his promises. And all, especially magistrates, ought to be careful in executing justice upon offenders, and discharging the obligations of gratitude. Some, however happy their lot, cannot rest till they ruin themselves; and the most dangerous designs have often fair pretences. While such as mean no ill themselves are, by the craft of others, rendered instruments of ambition. Such, therefore, who have the ear of princes, ought carefully to consider their request, lest they abuse their influence to the hurt of their benefactor. No station should protect criminals from justice. And often the awakening of their guilty conscience, and which they never expe to be remembered even of the guilty. 18 And it came to pass the third day after that I was delivered, that this woman was delivered also: and we were together; there was no stranger with us in the house, save we two in the house.

19 And this woman's child died in the night; because she overlaid it.

20 And she arose at [i] midnight, and took my son from beside me, while thine handmaid slept, and laid it in her bosom, and laid her dead child in my bosom.

21 And when I rose in the morning [k] to give my child suck, behold, it was dead: but when I had considered it in the morning, behold, it was not my son which I did bear.

22 And the other woman said, Nay; but the living is my son, and the dead is thy son. And this said, No; but the dead is thy son, and the living is my son. Thus they spake before the king.

23 Then said the king, The one saith, This is my son that liveth, and thy son is the dead: and the other saith, Nay; but thy son is the dead, and my son is the living.

24 And the king said, Bring me a sword. And they brought a sword before the king.

25 And the king said, [l] Divide the living child in two, and give half to the one, and half to the other.[*]

26 Then spake the woman whose the living child was unto the king, (for her bowels [m] yearned upon her son,) and she said, O my lord, give her the living child, and in no wise slay it: but the other said, Let it be neither mine nor thine, but divide it.

* The profound knowledge of the human heart indicated by this judgment will readily be acknowledged. But its most important characteristic is the unlimited power of life and death which it indicates as resting in the mere will of the king. Were a British judge to issue such an order, he would be deposed as insane; or, were it carried into execution, would be held guilty of murder. How may we, then, vindicate the despotic authority assumed in principle by Solomon. We may in no wise vindicate despotism—for the divine rule was never despotic—but we can account for the assumption of Solomon, in the fact, that for centuries the land of Judea had, with few and brief exceptions, been constantly under military law—a state of things that necessarily supersedes divided authority, and intrusts, for the time, to one, a power above the ordinary forms of procedure, and authorizes and requires of him, by the pressure of circumstances, extemporaneously as it were, both to make and administer the law.—Ed.

(ch. 1. 39.) the complete consolidation of his authority, (ch. 2. 12.), and the second, and covert attempt of Adonijah upon the throne, (ver. 22), a considerable period of time must have elapsed. And as Abiathar was not banished to Anathoth and removed from being high priest, (ver. 27), till after this period, the historian inserts his name, not as being second in dignity in the Aaronic family, but as having been actually in the first rank during a part of the reign of Solomon.—Ed.

How amazing his fidelity, meekness, humility, faith in God, love to him, zeal for his honour, and devout intimacy with him! Thrice—in his conception, at his baptism, and in his ascension—he was plentifully anointed with the Holy Ghost to his arduous and extensive office. He is the covenant-head of all his spiritual seed, the chosen people, kings and priests unto God. He is our sweet Psalmist, who tunes our hearts and indites our songs of praise. He is our great Prophet and King, who instructs, forms, and governs his church, the Israel of God. Through debasement, labour, reproach, and temptations on every side—and all endured with holy courage, steady regard to his Father's honour, full resignation to his will, and firm confidence of a happy issue—he entered into his kingdom and glory. How skilful, prudent, kind, and righteous, is he in governing his subjects! and how active in framing and fixing the worship of God, preparing the temple above for his people, and them for it! All his faithful soldiers are such as, convinced of their spiritual guiltiness, pollution, poverty, and debt, have been obliged to enlist in his service. His mighties, prophets, apostles, evangelists, pastors, and teachers, by the whole armour of God, particularly the sword of the Spirit, do marvellous exploits. He himself defeated the lions, the bears, the giants of hell. He fulfilled the law, destroyed death and the grave: and by the gospel he conquers the nations to the obedience of faith, and puts his chosen people in the full possession of their promised blessings.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Happy are the children who walk in the steps of their pious parents; and highly honoured are they to whose unfeigned faith and love God himself bears witness. How infinitely bountiful is God!—he even encourages us to ask his favours: and such as wait upon him in prayer and praise will find him speedy in his returns of blessing. Happy are they whose devout turn of mind, when awake, tinctures their very dreams with serious devotion. Godly children will always pay great regard to their parents' memory. None are so 18 Shimei the son of Elah, in [s] Benjamin.

19 Geber the son of Uri was in the [a] country of Gilead, in the country of Sihon king of the Amorites, and of Og king of Bashan; and he was the only officer which was in the land.*

20 ¶ Judah and Israel [b] were many, as the sand which is by the sea in multitude, [c] eating and drinking, and making merry.

21 And [d] Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river † unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: they brought presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life.

22 ¶ And Solomon's provision for one day was thirty ‡ measures of fine flour, and three-score measures of meal,

23 Ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and an hundred sheep, besides harts, and roe-bucks, and fallow-deer, and fatted fowl.§

24 For he had dominion over all the region on this side the river, from Tiphsah‖ even [f] to Azzah,* over all the kings on this side the river: and he had peace on all sides round about him.

25 And Judah and Israel dwelt [g] safely, every man under his vine and under his fig-tree, [h] from Dan even to Beer-sheba, all the days of Solomon.

26 ¶ And [i] Solomon had forty thousand† stalls of horses for his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen.

27 And those officers provided victual for king Solomon, and for all that came unto king Solomon's table, every man in his month: they lacked nothing.

28 Barley also and straw for the horses and [k] dromedaries brought they unto the place where the officers were, every man according to his charge.

29 ¶ And [l] God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea-shore.

30 And Solomon's wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of [m] the east country, and all the wisdom [n] of Egypt.

31 For he was [o] wiser than all men; than [p] Ethan the Ezrahite, and Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol: and his fame was in all nations round about.

AND [a] Hiram king of Tyre* sent his servants unto Solomon; (for he had heard that they had anointed him king in the room of his father:) for Hiram [b] was ever a lover of David.

2 And [c] Solomon sent to Hiram, saying,

3 Thou knowest how that David my father [d] could not build an house unto the name of the LORD his God, for the wars which were about him on every side, until the LORD [e] put them under the soles of his feet.

4 But now the LORD my God [f] hath given me rest on every side, so that there is neither adversary nor evil occurrent.

5 And, behold, I † purpose [g] to build an house unto the name of the LORD my God,‡ as the LORD spake unto David my father, saying, Thy son, whom I will set upon thy throne in thy room, he shall build an house unto my name.

6 Now therefore command thou that they hew me [h] cedar-trees out of Lebanon; and my servants shall be with thy servants: and unto thee will I give hire for thy servants, according to all that thou shalt § appoint: for thou knowest that there is not among us any that can skill to hew timber like unto the [k] Sidonians.‖

7 ¶ And it came to pass, when Hiram heard the words of Solomon, that he rejoiced greatly, and said, [l] Blessed be the LORD this day,* which hath given unto David a wise son over this great people.

8 And Hiram sent to Solomon, saying, I have † considered the things which thou sentest to me for: and I will do all thy desire concerning timber of cedar, and concerning [m] timber of fir.

sensible of their own insufficiency as they who seriously ponder the weight of public offices; and hopeful is their administration who earnestly ask wisdom and direction from God. The disinterested prayer of faith is always acceptable to God: and, when we seek first the kingdom of God, all things shall be added to us. He will give us exceeding abundantly above what we can ask or think: and quickly he gives opportunity for the exercise of the gifts which he bestows. How helpless and perilous is our infantile state! by the most marvellous providence we escape the dangers of it. How tender is the affection of a mother's breast! and monsters of brutality must they be who can neglect and destroy the fruit of their own womb. Magistrates, before whom such difficult causes come, have great need of their subjects' fervent prayers, and of God's special direction. And the greater abilities men have, they are the more indebted to God who bestowed them. But, alas! oftentimes the fear of detection and punishment from men is a greater restraint upon evil-doers than all the terrors of God's everlasting wrath.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Great men should appear great, answerably to their stations. And it is often prudent for kings to continue most of their predecessors' officers in their respective places. But it is necessary for all men to provide for their household in the manner that is best for their own and the nation's advantage. God wisely balances men's honour and wealth with proportionate burdens of expense and care. He can give great happiness on earth: but infinitely greater is the happiness of Jesus' kingdom, which fills both heaven and earth; and unbounded are his provisions of new covenant blessings. How sovereign is God in the bestowal of his gifts and grace! But let us never envy such as outshine us.

AND [a] it came to pass in the four hundred and eightieth year after the children of Israel were come out of the land of Egypt, in the fourth year of Solomon's reign over Israel, [b] in the month Zif, which is the second month,* that he began to build the house of the LORD.

2 ¶ And the house which king Solomon built for the LORD, the length thereof was [c] threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof twenty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits.

3 And the [d] porch before the temple of the house, twenty cubits was the length thereof, according to the breadth of the house; and ten cubits was the breadth thereof before the house.

4 ¶ And for the house he made [e] windows of narrow lights.

5 ¶ And against [†] the wall of the house he built [f] chambers round about, against the walls of the house round about, both of the temple and of the [g] oracle: and he made chambers round about.

6 The nethermost chamber was five cubits broad, and the middle was six cubits broad, and the third was seven cubits broad: for without in the wall of the house he made [‡] narrowed rests round about, that the beams should not be fastened in the walls of the house.[§]

7 And the house, when it was in building, was [h] built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither [i] hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron, heard in the house while it was in building.

8 The door for the middle chamber was in the right [‖] side of the house: and they [k] went up with winding stairs into the middle chamber, and out of the middle into the third.

9 So he built the house, and finished it; and covered the house [*] with beams and boards of cedar.[†]

10 And then he built [l] chambers against all the house, five cubits high: and they rested on the house with timber of cedar.

11 ¶ And the word of the LORD came to Solomon, saying,

12 Concerning this house which thou art in building, [m] if thou wilt walk in my statutes, and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments to walk in them; then will I perform my word with thee, which I spake unto David thy father:

13 And I [n] will dwell among the children of Israel, and will not forsake my people Israel.

14 ¶ So Solomon built the house, and finished it.[‡]

15 And he built the walls of the house within with boards of cedar, [§] both the floor of the house, and the walls of the ceiling: and he covered them on the inside with wood, [‖] and covered the floor of the house with planks of fir.

16 And he [o] built twenty cubits on the sides of the house, both the floor and the walls with REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Condolence with the afflicted is truly kind: and faithful friends love the children for their parents' sake. It is good for kings to cultivate peace with their neighbours, especially such as fear God. The more outward rest we have, the more earnestly we should lay out ourselves in promoting the worship and honour of God: and, when we have God's promise to encourage us we need never doubt of our success. They have often most of natural ingenuity who have no real knowledge of God. And frequently God employs those in building his church who have no spiritual interest in her. But it is highly honourable to assist in promoting her welfare. In all bargains, the conditions ought to be clear, that after-disputes may be prevented. And labourers' wages should be always paid with the greatest punctuality. When God hath a temple to build, he can easily provide workmen; and in his work every one ought to have his particular allotment. But great is the mercy, that thousands unnumbered of Gentile sinners have been brought into the gospel church, and built up a spiritual temple, a meet habitation of God, through the Spirit.

22 And the whole house he overlaid with gold, until he had finished all the house: also the whole altar that was by the oracle he overlaid with gold.

23 ¶ And within the oracle he made [u] two cherubims[*] of [x] olive-tree,[†] each ten cubits high.

25 And the other cherub was ten cubits: both the cherubims were of one measure and one size.

26 The height of the one cherub was ten cubits, and so was it of the other cherub.

27 And he set the cherubims within the inner house: and [y] they stretched forth the wings of the cherubims, so that the wing of the one touched the one wall, and the wing of the other cherub touched the other wall; and their wings touched one another in the midst of the house.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. VI. Ver. 37, 38.—Never was such a magnificent structure on earth as this temple of Solomon. God himself had given the plan of it to David, 1 Chron. xxviii. 19. David and his princes prepared for the erection of it, about 46,000 ton weight of gold and silver; amounting, in all, to about £942,719,750 sterling. About 183,600 Canaanites and Hebrews were employed in building it. It took about seven years to finish it. The whole top of mount Moriah was enclosed within a wall to be a court for it. This court was divided into two; the outer for the clean Hebrews, which had an entrance from every side, but the principal one was from the east: and that of the royal family from the south-west: the inner-court, separated from the outer by a low wall, was appointed for the priests and Levites. Here, just before the east end of the temple, stood the brazen altar, 36½ feet square, and 18¼ high, with the brazen sea; ten lavers, five on each side of the entrance of the temple. Immediately westward from these was the porch of the temple, 36½ feet from north to south, and 18¼ from east to west, and about 219 feet high: on each side it had an ornamental pillar of brass, about 33 feet high. This served as a magnificent steeple, and as a place of shelter and prayer for the serving priests. Passing through this porch, you entered into the sanctuary, an apartment about 73 feet long, 36½ broad, and 54¾ high. This was illuminated by at least ten golden candlesticks; each of which had seven curiously adorned branches for lamps: five of these were placed on the north, and as many on the south side of the house. An equal number of golden tables, furnished each with 12 loaves of show-bread, stood on each side of the house, probably between the candlesticks. Close to the west end, in the middle, stood the golden altar of incense: passing by it, through a doorway, hung with a fine vail, and having leaves for shutting it, the high priest, on the day of atonement, entered into the Oracle, or most holy place. It was an apartment 36½ feet in length, and as much in breadth, and 54¾ in height. Here, amidst perpetual darkness, was placed the ark, with its golden cherubims overshadowing it and the whole furniture. Solomon added two new cherubims of olive-trees, which stretched their wings over it, and to the whole breadth of the house, each wing extending about 18 feet. The wall of this temple consisted of alternate rows of cedar planks and hewn stone, probably polished marble. The whole inside of the house was overlaid with fine gold, and curiously ornamented with figures of cherubims and palm-trees. On the outside of the wall were erected ninety chambers in three stories, for the accommodation of the priests who served at it. After Solomon had dedicated it to the service of God, by solemn prayer and sacrifices, and God had taken possession of it, by the entrance of the cloud of glory, the priests, singers, and porters, attended it in the order prescribed by king David. After it had stood about four hundred and sixteen years, and had been frequently pillaged, it was burnt by Nebuchadnezzar. About seventy years after it was rebuilt, with inferior glory, by the captives who returned from Babylon. This had stood about five hundred years, when it was rebuilt with far more magnificence by Herod the Great; and a new court for the Gentiles was added; but, in little more than eighty years after, it was finally destroyed by the Romans, A.D. 72. 1 Chron. xvii, xxii—xxix. 2 Chron. ii—viii. 2 Kings xxv. Jer. iii. Ezra ii—vi. John i.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—How little God regards pomp in his worship, who wanted a temple so long in his holy nation! But, when he calls for our substance, we ought cheerfully to give in proportion to our greatness and wealth.

BUT Solomon was building [a] his own house [b] thirteen years,* and he finished all his house.

2 ¶ He [†] built also the house of the forest of Lebanon;[‡] the length thereof was an hundred cubits, and the breadth thereof fifty cubits, and the height thereof thirty cubits, upon four rows of cedar-pillars, with cedar-beams upon the pillars.

3 And it was covered with cedar above upon the [§] beams, that lay on forty-five pillars, fifteen in a row.

4 And there were windows in three rows, and [||] light was against light in three ranks.

5 And all the * doors and posts were square with the windows: and light was against light in three ranks.

6 ¶ And he made a porch of pillars; the length thereof was fifty cubits, and the breadth thereof thirty cubits: and the porch was [†] before them; and the other pillars and the thick beam were [‡] before them.

7 ¶ Then [§] he made a porch for [c] the throne where he might judge, even the porch [d] of judgment: and it was covered with [||] cedar from one side of the floor to the other.

8 ¶ And his house where he dwelt had * another court within the porch, which was of the like work. Solomon made also an house for Pharaoh's daughter, [e] whom he had taken to wife, like unto this porch.

9 ¶ All these were of [g] costly stones, according to the measures of hewed stones, sawed with saws,* within and without, even from the foundation unto the coping, and so on the outside toward the great court.

10 And the [h] foundation was of costly stones, even great stones, stones of ten cubits, and stones of eight cubits.

11 And above were [i] costly stones (after the measures of hewed stones) and cedars.

12 And the great court round about was [k] with three rows of hewed stones, and a row of cedar-beams, both for the inner court of the house of the LORD, and for the porch of the house.

13 ¶ And [l] king Solomon [†] sent and fetched Hiram[‡] out of Tyre.

14 He was [§] a widow's son of the tribe of Naphtali,[||] and his father was a man of Tyre, a worker in brass; and he was [m] filled with wisdom and understanding, and cunning to work all works in brass: and he came to king Solomon, and wrought all his work.

15 ¶ For he [n] cast two pillars of brass, of eighteen cubits high apiece;* and a line of twelve cubits did compass either of them about.[†]

16 And he made two chapiters of molten brass, to set upon the tops of the pillars: the height of the one chapiter * was [o] five cubits, and the height of the other chapiter was five cubits:

17 And nets of checker-work, and wreaths of chain-work, for the chapiters which were upon the top of the pillars; seven for the one chapiter, and seven for the other chapiter.

18 And he made the pillars, and two rows round about upon the one net-work, to cover the chapiters that were upon the top with pomegranates: and so did he for the other chapiter.

19 And the chapiters that were upon the top of the pillars were of lily-work[†] in the porch, four cubits.

20 And the chapiters upon the two pillars had pomegranates also above, over against the belly which was by the net-work: and the pomegranates were [p] two hundred, in rows round about upon the other chapiter.

21 [q] And he set up the pillars in the porch of the temple: and he set up the right pillar, and called the name thereof [r] Jachin: and he set up the left pillar, and called the name thereof [s] Boaz.[‡]

22 And upon the top of the pillars was lily-work: so was the work of the pillars finished.

23 ¶ And he made a [t] molten sea,[§] ten cubits from the one brim to the other: it was round all about, and his height was five cubits: and a line of [||] thirty cubits did compass it round about.

24 And under the brim of it round about there were knops compassing it, ten in a cubit, [u] compassing the sea round about: the knops were cast in two rows, when it was cast.

27 ¶ And he made ten bases of brass: four cubits was the length of one base, and four cubits the breadth thereof, and three cubits the height of it.

What we do in God's church should be done diligently, orderly, and peaceably. But a hearty obedience to his law is more valuable than the most expensive donations to his church. They, who go forth with a desire to his glory, may confidently expect some tokens of his approbation. And whenever God, by his grace, begins a good work, he will finish it in his time. But great is our mercy that, instead of a magnificent, but carnal temple, we have now an incarnate, an ascended Redeemer! a glorious gospel church, planned, prepared for, erected, fashioned, and furnished, by God:—that every believer is made a living temple for the Lord; and that in heaven we have a house eternal, immovable, incorruptible, and that fadeth not away!

the ledges [a] were lions, oxen, and cherubims: and upon the ledges there was a base above: and beneath the lions and oxen were certain additions made of thin work.

30 And every base had four brazen wheels, and plates of brass: and the four corners thereof had undersetters: under the laver were undersetters molten, at the side of every addition.

31 And the mouth of it within the chapiter and above was a cubit: but the mouth thereof was round, after the work of the base, a cubit and an half: and also upon the mouth of it were gravings with their borders, four-square, not round.

32 And under the borders were four wheels; and the axle-trees of the wheels were [a] joined to the base: and the height of a wheel was a cubit and half a cubit.

33 And the work of the wheels was like the work of a chariot-wheel: their axle-trees, and their naves, and their felloes, and their spokes, were all molten.

34 And there were four undersetters to the four corners of one base: and the undersetters were of the very base itself.†

35 And in the top of the base was there a round compass of a half cubit high: and on the top of the base, the ledges thereof and the borders thereof were of the same.

36 For on the plates of the ‡ ledges thereof, and on the borders thereof, he graved [b] cherubims, lions, and palm-trees, according to the § proportion of every one, and additions round about.

38 ¶ Then made he ten [c] lavers of brass: one laver contained ‖ forty baths; and every laver was four cubits: and upon every one of the ten bases one laver.

39 And he put five bases on the right [a] side of the house, and five on the left side of the house: and he set the sea on the right side of the house eastward, over against the south.

40 ¶ And [d] Hiram made the lavers,† and the shovels, and the basons. So Hiram made an end of doing all the work that he made king Solomon for the house of the LORD:

41 The [e] two pillars, and the two bowls of the chapiters that were on the top of the two pillars; and the two net-works to cover the two bowls of the chapiters which were upon the top of the pillars;

43 And the [f] ten bases, and ten lavers on the bases;

44 And [g] one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea;

45 And the [h] pots, and the shovels, and the basons: and all these vessels, which Hiram made to king Solomon for the house of the LORD, were of † bright brass.

46 In the plain of Jordan did the king cast them, ‖ in the clay-ground ‡ between Succoth and Zarthan.

47 And Solomon left all the vessels unweighed, [k] because they were exceeding many: § neither was the weight of the brass ‖ found out.

48 ¶ And Solomon [l] made all the vessels that pertained unto the house of the LORD: the altar of gold, and the table of gold, whereupon the show-bread was;

49 And the [m] candlesticks of pure gold, five on the right side, and five on the left, before the oracle, with the flowers, and the lamps, and the tongs, of gold;

50 And the bowls, and the snuffers, and the basons, and the spoons, and the [a] censers, of pure gold; and the hinges of gold, both for the doors of the inner-house, the most holy place, and for the doors of the house, to wit, of the temple.

51 So was ended all the [n] work that king Solomon made for the house of the LORD. And Solomon brought in the † things which [o] David his father had dedicated: even the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, did he put among the treasures of the house of the LORD.

§ The clay was not used in the ordinary sense of moulds for the castings, such moulds being made of a species of fine sand, rendered adhesive by pressure. But such moulds can be formed only when there are metallic or wooden models. The clay, in this case, was used, as in bronze castings, to form first the model of the interior of the vessel or figure, then to be covered by a layer of wax, of the proper thickness, and finished in form of the exterior. This being again covered with clay, the clay being dried, the wax is melted, thus leaving between the two surfaces, a perfect mould for the vessel or figure required. In ruder castings of this description, the wax is not required, but the internal and external moulds formed separately, and placed the one over the other. THEN [a] Solomon assembled the elders of Israel, and all the heads of the tribes, the [a] chief of the fathers of the children of Israel, unto king Solomon in Jerusalem, that they might [b] bring up the ark of the covenant of the LORD out of the city of David, which is Zion.

2 And all the men of Israel assembled themselves unto king Solomon at the [c] feast in the month Ethanim, which is the seventh month.

3 And all the [d] elders of Israel came, and the priests [e] took up the ark.

4 And they brought up the [f] ark of the LORD, and the [g] tabernacle of the congregation, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle, even those did the priests and the Levites bring up.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Great men may lodge and live in a manner becoming their station. But great builders had need to beware of neglecting to build up their own souls in their most holy faith, and of forgetting the building not made with hands, the house eternal in the heavens. If therefore we wish to be honoured, let our great and earliest care be to honour God. It is an agreeable thing to have instruments employed in the church who are at once active, honest,

5 And [h] king Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel, that were assembled unto him, were with him before the ark, sacrificing sheep and oxen, that could not be told nor numbered for multitude.*

6 And [i] the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD unto his place, into the oracle of the house, to the most holy place, even under the wings of the cherubims.

7 For the [k] cherubims spread forth their two wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubims covered the ark and the staves thereof above.

8 And they drew out the staves, that the [†] ends of the staves were seen out in the [l] holy place before the oracle, and they were not seen without: and there they are unto this day.[‡]

9 There [m] was nothing in the ark save the two tables of stone, which Moses put there at Horeb, when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the land of Egypt.[§]

10 ¶ And it came to pass, when the priests were come out of the holy place, that [n] the cloud filled the house of the LORD,

11 So that the [o] priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud: for the glory of the LORD[‖] had filled the house of the LORD.

12 ¶ Then spake Solomon, The LORD [p] said that he would dwell in the thick darkness.

13 I have [q] surely built thee an house to dwell in, a settled place for thee to abide in for ever.

14 And the king turned his face about, and [r] blessed all the congregation of Israel: (and all the congregation of Israel stood:)

15 And he said, [s] Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, which spake with his mouth unto David my father, and hath with his hand [t] fulfilled it, saying,

16 [u] Since the day that I brought forth my people Israel out of Egypt, I chose no city out of all the tribes of Israel to build an house, that my name might be therein; but [x] I chose David to be over my people Israel.

17 And [y] it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

18 And the LORD [z] said unto David my father, Whereas it was in thine heart to build an house unto my name, thou didst well that it was in thine heart:

19 Nevertheless thou [a] shalt not build the house; but thy son that shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house unto my name.

* From this it is evident that solemn oaths—oaths rightly understood being acts of worship, were wont to be taken at the altar. This prayer for righteous judgment between man and man is the first of seven distinct cases in which Solomon entreats the divine favour to himself and people.—Ed.

20 And the LORD [b] hath performed his word that he spake; and I am risen up in the room of David my father, and sit on the throne of Israel, as the LORD promised, and have built an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

21 And [c] I have set there a place for the ark, wherein is the [d] covenant of the LORD, which he made with our fathers, when he brought them out of the land of Egypt.

22 ¶ And Solomon [e] stood before the altar of the LORD, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven:*

23 And he said, [f] LORD God of Israel, there is no God like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, who [g] keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that [h] walk before thee with all their heart;

24 Who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast [i] fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

25 Therefore now, LORD God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, [k] † There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel; so that thy children take heed to their way, that they walk before me, as thou hast walked before me.

26 And now, O God of Israel, [l] let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father.

27 But [m] will God indeed dwell‡ on the earth? behold, the heaven, and heaven of heavens, cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded?

28 Yet have [n] thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee to-day:

29 That [o] thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, [p] My name shall be there; that thou mayest hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make [q] toward this place.

30 And hearken thou to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, when they shall pray toward this place:[§] and hear thou in heaven thy [r] dwelling-place; and, when thou hearest, [s] forgive.

31 ¶ If [t] any man trespass against his neighbour, [‖] and an oath be laid upon him* to cause him to swear, and the oath come before thine altar in this house:

and faithful. But great is our mercy, that instead of these material utensils, we have the blessed Jesus as our pillar of stability and strength.—We have him as the great propitiation—and full of grace and truth—to be our sea, our laver, for washing our hearts and hands in our approaches to, and dealings with, God.—We have him to be our altar of incense, our light, and our true bread, which cometh down from heaven.

32 Then hear thou in heaven, and do, and [a] judge thy servants, condemning the wicked, to bring his way upon his head; and justifying the righteous, to give him according to his righteousness.

33 ¶ When thy people Israel be [x] smitten down before the enemy, because they have sinned against thee, and shall [y] turn again to thee, and confess thy name, and pray, and make supplication unto thee in this house:

34 Then hear thou in heaven, and [z] forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and bring them again unto the land which thou [a] gavest unto their fathers.*

35 ¶ When [b] heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; [c] if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, when thou afflictest them:

36 Then hear thou in heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, [d] that thou teach them the good way wherein they should walk, and give rain upon thy land, which thou hast given to thy people for an inheritance.†

37 ¶ If there be in the land [e] famine, if there be pestilence, blasting, mildew, locust, or if there be caterpillar;‡ if their enemy besiege them in the land of their cities,§ whatsoever plague, whatsoever sickness there be;

38 What [f] prayer and supplication soever be made by any man, or by all thy people Israel, which shall know every man [g] the plague of his own heart, and spread forth his hands toward this house:

39 Then hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and forgive, and do, and [h] give to every man according to his ways, whose heart thou knowest; (for thou, even [i] thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men;)

40 That they may [k] fear thee all the days that they live in the land which thou gavest unto our fathers.

41 ¶ Moreover, concerning [l] a stranger, that is not of thy people Israel, but [m] cometh out of a far country for thy name's sake;

42 (For they shall [n] hear of thy great name, and of thy strong hand, and of thy stretched-out arm;) when he shall come and pray toward this house;

43 Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; that [o] all people of the earth may know thy name, to fear thee, as do thy people Israel; and that they may know that this house which I have builded is called by thy name.

54 ¶ And it was so, that, when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the LORD, he arose from before the altar of the LORD, from [c] kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven.

of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant.

57 [g] The LORD our God be with us, as he was with our fathers: let him not leave us, nor forsake us;

58 That he may [h] incline our hearts unto him, to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and his judgments, [i] which he commanded our fathers.

59 And let these my words, wherewith I have made supplication before the LORD, [k] be nigh unto the LORD our God day and night, that he maintain the cause of his servant, and the cause of his people Israel [*] at all times, as the matter shall require;

60 That [l] all the people of the earth may know that the LORD is God, and that there is none else.[†]

61 Let your heart therefore be [m] perfect with the LORD our God, to walk in his statutes, and to keep his commandments, as at this day.

62 ¶ And [n] the king, and all Israel with him, offered sacrifice before the LORD.

63 And Solomon offered a [o] sacrifice of peace-offerings, which he offered unto the LORD, two and twenty thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the king and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORD.[‡]

64 [p] The same day did the king hallow the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings; because [q] the brazen altar that was before the LORD was too little to receive the burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings.

65 ¶ And at that time Solomon [r] held a feast, and all Israel with him, a great congregation, [s] from the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt, before the LORD our God, seven days and seven days, even fourteen days.

66 On [t] the eighth day he sent the people away: and they blessed [§] the king, and went unto their tents [‖] joyful and glad of heart, for all the goodness that the LORD had done for David his servant, and for Israel his people.

a 1 Chr. 7. 11. & 8. 6. Eccl. 2. 20.

2 That the LORD appeared to Solomon the second time, [b] as he had appeared unto him at Gibeon.

3 And the LORD said unto him, [c] I have heard thy prayer and thy supplication that thou hast made before me: I [d] have hallowed this house, which thou hast built, to put my name there for ever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

4 And [e] if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, in integrity of heart, and in uprightness, to do according to all that I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my statutes and my judgments;

5 Then I will establish the throne of thy kingdom upon Israel for ever, [f] as I promised to David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man upon the throne of Israel.

6 But [g] if ye shall at all turn from following me, you or your children, and will not keep my commandments and my statutes, which I have set before you, but go and serve other gods, and worship them;

7 Then [h] will I cut off Israel out of the land which I have given them: and this house, which I have hallowed for my name, will I cast out of my sight; and Israel shall be a proverb and a by-word among all people:

8 And [i] at this house, which is high, every one that passeth by it shall be astonished, and shall hiss; and they shall say, [k] Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and to this house?

9 And they [l] shall answer, Because they forsook the LORD their God, who brought forth their fathers out of the land of Egypt, and have taken hold upon other gods, and have worshipped them, and served them; therefore hath the LORD brought upon them all this evil.[*]

10 ¶ And [m] it came to pass [†] at the end of twenty years, when Solomon had built the two houses, the house of the LORD, and the king's house,

11 (Now Hiram the king of Tyre had furnished Solomon with cedar-trees and fir-trees, and with gold, according to all his desire,) that then king Solomon gave Hiram [n] twenty cities in the land of Galilee.[‡]

12 And Hiram came out from Tyre to see the cities which Solomon had given him; and they [o] pleased him not.[§]

13 And he said, What cities are these which thou hast given me, [p] my brother? And he called them the land of [‖] Cabul unto this day.

ment are the habitation of his throne, and mercy and truth go before his face. When God is present, and his Spirit poured out, with what liveliness do men observe the fulfilment of God's promises, and pour forth their prayers to him. The fervent petitions which are then presented to God, in the name of Christ our true temple, are always effectual, and available to nations, families, and individuals. What pardon—what healing—what purification—what victory—what deliverance, may they obtain! The grateful sense of God's special favours thus enjoyed, the influences of his presence and grace, and the faith of his Son's mediation, most powerfully determine and constrain to a holy obedience to his laws. Such real and lively religion would make our meetings and partings on earth pleasant and happy. But how much more so shall our gathering to Jesus be, never to part, but to feast eternally on him, as our great atonement, our only peace-offering, and our ALL and in ALL.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—The Lord bears the greatest regard to his people's hearty and solemn worship of himself. Everywhere his eyes are on the righteous, and his ears are open to their cry. If we would secure to our children the entail of God's blessings, we must leave them the examples of our fidelity. But if our growth in grace does not correspond with our privileges, the best forms of religion will but delude and destroy us. How gracious are God's rewards of his people's obedience; and how severe his corrections of their transgressions: While we tremble at the ruin of Israel and their temple, let our care be to take fast hold of the better covenant, which is established upon better promises, and in which men are kept, by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation. Generous minds are forward to discharge their obligations, if it be in their power. But very diversified are the sentiments of men concerning worldly things. Nothing but Jesus Christ, and God in him, is answerable to every need, every state, every mind. And it is glorious when great activity in secular business is attended with

BUT king Solomon loved [a] many strange women, (together with the daughter of Pharaoh,) women of the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Zidonians, and Hittites;

2 Of the nations concerning which the LORD said unto the children of Israel, [b] Ye shall not go in to them, neither shall they come in unto you; for surely they will turn away your heart after their gods. Solomon clave unto these in love.

3 And he had seven hundred wives, princesses, and three hundred concubines: and his wives [c] turned away his heart.

4 For it came to pass, when Solomon was [d] old, that his wives turned away his heart after other gods: and [e] his heart was not perfect with the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father.

5 For Solomon went after [f] Ashtaroth the goddess of the Zidonians, and after [g] Milcom the abomination of the Ammonites.

6 And Solomon [h] did evil in the sight of the LORD, and went [i] not fully after the LORD, as did David his father.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—So respectable is true wisdom, that one cannot purchase it too dear, or fetch it too far; nor hath God confined it to one sex more than another. And such as have real knowledge should delight in the communication of it. But especially let us observe, that God, on every occasion, has taken delight to prefigure the gathering of the Gentiles to Jesus Christ, in whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Good order in families, courts, and kingdoms, is extremely amiable and useful; and to enjoy the converse of such as are wise in the things of God is a great and unspeakable mercy: but God, who is the author of all our mercies, deserves the praise of them all. Mutual presents are pledges of friendship: but happiest of all is friendship with God. Prosperity in earthly enjoyments shall attend the active honouring of him, if for the real good of his people, but the most certain prosperity of soul. The Almighty himself is their gold; and they shall have plenty of silver.

But in these labours, these glories of Solomon, let me contemplate the infinitely greater one, even Jesus Christ our Prince of Peace. He is JEDIDIAH, the darling of the Lord. His birth is our consolation against griefs and woes unnumbered. He is infinitely peaceful, prudent, and wise; and to him every thing is naked and open. Notwithstanding oppositions innumerable, he was solemnly chosen, anointed.

7 Then did Solomon build an [k] high place for [l] Chemosh the abomination of Moab, in [m] the hill that is before Jerusalem, and for [n] Molech the abomination of the children of Ammon.

8 And likewise did he for [o] all his strange wives, which burnt incense, and sacrificed unto their gods.

9 ¶ And the LORD was [p] angry with Solomon, because [q] his heart was turned from the LORD God of Israel, [r] which had appeared unto him twice,

10 And had commanded him concerning this thing, [s] that he should not go after other gods: but he kept not that which the LORD commanded.

11 Wherefore the LORD said unto Solomon, Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou [t] hast not kept my covenant and my statutes, which I have commanded thee, [u] I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and will give it to thy servant.

12 Notwithstanding [x] in thy days I will not do it for David thy father's sake: but [y] I will rend it out of the hand of thy son.

13 Howbeit I will not rend away all the kingdom; but will give [z] one tribe* to thy son, [a] for David my servant's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen.

14 ¶ And the LORD [b] stirred up an adversary unto Solomon, Hadad the Edomite: he was of the king's seed in Edom,†

15 [c] For it came to pass, when David was in Edom, and Joab the captain of the host was gone up to bury the slain, after he had smitten every male in Edom,

16 (For six months did Joab remain there with all Israel, until he had cut off every male in Edom,)‡

17 That Hadad fled, he and certain Edomites of his father's servants with him, to go into Egypt; Hadad being yet a [d] little child:§

18 And they arose out of [e] Midian,‖ and came to [f] Paran: and they took men with them out of Paran, and they came to Egypt, unto Pharaoh king of Egypt; which gave him an house, and appointed him victuals, and gave him land.

19 And Hadad found [g] great favour in the sight of [h] Pharaoh, so that he gave him to wife the sister of his own wife, the sister of Tahpenes the [i] queen.

20 And the sister of Tahpenes bare him Genubath his son, whom Tahpenes [k] weaned in Pharaoh's house:* and Genubath was in Pharaoh's household among the sons of Pharaoh.

21 And when Hadad [l] heard in Egypt that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab the captain of the host was dead, Hadad said to Pharaoh, † Let me depart, that I may go to mine own country.

22 Then Pharaoh said unto him, But what hast thou lacked with me, that, behold, thou seekest to go to thine own country? And he answered, ‡ Nothing: howbeit let me go in any wise.

23 ¶ And God stirred him up another adversary, Rezon the son of Eliadah, which fled from his [m] lord Hadadezer king of Zobah:

24 And he gathered men unto him, and became captain over a band, [n] when David slew them of Zobah: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt therein, and reigned in Damascus.

25 And he was an adversary to Israel [o] all the days of Solomon, besides the mischief that Hadad did: and he abhorred Israel, and reigned over Syria.

26 ¶ And [p] Jeroboam the son of Nebat, an Ephrathite of Zereda, Solomon's servant, (whose mother's name was Zeruah, a widow woman,) even he lifted up his hand against the king.

27 And this was the cause that he lifted up his hand against the king: Solomon [q] built Millo,§ and ‖ repaired the breaches of the city of David his father.

28 And the man Jeroboam was a mighty man of valour: and Solomon [r] seeing the young man that he was industrious, he made him ruler over all the [s] charge of the house of Joseph.*

29 And it came to pass at that time, when Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, that the prophet [t] Ahijah the Shilonite found him in the way; and he had clad himself with a new garment; and they two were alone in the field:

30 And Ahijah caught the new garment that was on him, and [u] rent it in twelve pieces.

31 And he said to Jeroboam, Take thee ten pieces: for thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Behold, [x] I will rend the kingdom out of the hand of Solomon, and will give ten tribes to thee:

32 (But [y] he shall have one tribe for my servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel:)

* From Gen. 21. 8, it appears that among the Hebrews, the weaning of a child was accompanied with solemn feasting—a custom which seems to have prevailed in Egypt, and as a public ceremony, somewhat equivalent to the European celebration of a birth-day, has been here deemed worthy of historic notice, as marking the interest that Pharaoh took in cherishing one of Solomon's enemies. CHAPTER XII.

(1) Rehoboam accedes to the throne of Solomon his father, and Jeroboam returns from his exile in Egypt: 1, 2. (2) The Israelites supplicate redress of their grievances. And Rehoboam, rejecting the advice of his aged counsellors, and taking that of the younger, irritates them with a rough and threatening answer: 3—15. (3) Ten of the tribes revolt, and make Jeroboam their king: 16—20. (4) By raising an army out of his two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, Rehoboam intends to reduce the revolters; but the Lord, by a prophet, forbids him, and he obeys: 21—24. (5) To establish himself in his kingdom, Jeroboam introduces an idolatrous worship: 25—33.

A. M. 3029. B. C. 975.

AND [a] Rehoboam went to [b] Shechem:* for all Israel were come to Shechem to make him king.

2 And it came to pass, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who was yet in [c] Egypt, heard of it, (for he was fled from the presence of king Solomon, and Jeroboam dwelt in Egypt;)

3 That they sent and called him: and Jeroboam and all the congregation of Israel came, and spake unto Rehoboam, saying,

4 Thy father made our [d] yoke grievous: now therefore make thou the grievous service of thy father, and his heavy yoke which he put upon us, lighter, and we will serve thee.

5 And he said unto them, Depart yet for three days, then come again to me. And the people departed.

6 ¶ And king Rehoboam [e] consulted with the old men, that stood before Solomon his father while he yet lived, and said, How do ye advise that I may answer this people?

7 And they spake unto him, saying, [f] If thou wilt be a servant unto this people† this day, and wilt serve them, and answer them, and speak good words to them, then they will be thy servants for ever.

8 But he [g] forsook the counsel of the old men, which they had given him, and consulted with the young men that were grown up with him, and which stood before him:

9 And he said unto them, [h] What counsel give ye that we may answer this people, who have spoken to me, saying, Make the yoke which thy father did put upon us lighter?

10 And the young men that were grown up with him spake unto him, saying, Thus shalt thou speak unto this people that spake unto thee, saying, Thy father made our yoke heavy, but make thou it lighter unto us; thus shalt thou say unto them, [i] My little finger shall be thicker than my father's loins.

11 And now whereas my father did lade you with a heavy yoke, I will add to your yoke: my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.‡

12 ¶ So Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam the third day, as the king had appointed, saying, Come to me again the third day.

* The reasons of the assembly being held at Shechem do not appear. The most probable are: (1) It was situated between Ebal and Gerizim, where the blessings and curses of the law had been nationally announced, Deut. 11. 29. (2) It was the place of assembly for Joshua's last charge, Josh. 24. (3) It was an ancient place of coronation, Judg. 9. (4) It was a capacious valley, and much better suited to such a popular assembly than any around Jerusalem. (5) The leaven of disaffection that was evidently working, led, most probably, to the selection of a "mustering place," distant from the influence of Jerusalem. It is at present called Nablous, and is still a considerable town, beautifully situated amidst gardens and groves.—Ed.

‡ The scorpion is a poisonous animal, perhaps considered hideous, because it is known to be dangerous, and whose sting causes exquisite pain, or even death. It is here supposed by the Rabbins to be a name for a scourge with sharp thorny twigs and knots. Others derive the name from an Arabian shrub called the scorpion thorn. It is here the appropriate emblem of folly, cruelty, and tyranny.—Note. How thankful should a people be for a well-ordered government, where law, not will, governs, and where mercy and justice preside in every court and decision!—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Lord, what is man! Is this Solomon—the beloved of the Lord—the miracle of wisdom—the man of prayer—the builder of the temple! How art thou fallen from heaven, O son of the morning! How ensnaring is the inordinate love of women! Every indulgence given to lewd desires only renders them more insatiable: and they who give way to one wilful sin, never know when or where they shall stop. Indulgence of fleshly lusts makes the heart brutish, and stupifies the conscience: and even sumptuous fare too fearfully pampers our lusts. No present attainment of gifts or grace, without continued watchfulness, will secure us against the most shameful falls. How sad, how stumbling, when the old age of once famous saints becomes a long and continued scene of profligacy! Alas! how Solomon's inordinate love of horses issues in an inordinate love of base women; and this in a multiplication of abominable idols! How the aged saint is ensnared by youthful lusts! How the wisest sage is made an arrant fool by silly women! How the man, who so often warned others against levity and whoredom, turns out a monster of vileness! How the man, once so familiar with his God, is plunged into the vilest depths of fellowship with Satan and his most abominable agents! Let me then always suspect my corruptions, and depend on the grace that is in Christ Jesus. Let me never covet great prosperity, which hath so great snares attending it. Nay, if I have made a great profession of religion, let me take heed lest Satan render me a remarkable reproach to it. Never let me expect that base ingratitude, and wilful disobedience, will pass unpunished. But God never deals with his people in such severity as they deserve. For Jesus' sake he defers his anger, and in wrath remembers mercy. But, alas! how sin turns peace into war! From the most abject and low condition God can raise up the most terrible instruments of his wrath: and when he intends to chastise, he never wants a rod, but makes men's sinful ambition the means of his just but awful rebukes. Diligence paves the way to advancement, and advancement inflames ambition. But hopeless is the case when God gives men kings in his anger: and it is impossible to keep down the scourge which the Lord stirs up. God generally renders sinners inexcusable by the fair warnings which he gives them

13 And the king answered the people [j] roughly, and forsook the old men's counsel that they gave him;

14 And spake to them after the counsel of the young men, saying, [k] My father made your yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.

15 Wherefore the king hearkened not unto the people: for the cause was [l] from the LORD, that [m] he might perform his saying, which the LORD spake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

16 ¶ So when all Israel saw that the king hearkened not unto them, the people answered the king, saying, [n] What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David. So Israel departed unto their tents.

17 But as [o] for the children of Israel which dwelt in the cities of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.

18 Then king Rehoboam sent [p] Adoram, who was over the tribute;* and [q] all Israel stoned him with stones, that he died: therefore king Rehoboam [t] made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.

19 So Israel [r] rebelled against the house of David [‡] unto this day.

20 ¶ And it came to pass, when all Israel heard that Jeroboam was come again, that they sent and called him unto the congregation, and made him king over all Israel: there was none [§] that followed the house of David, but the tribe of Judah only.

21 ¶ [u] And when Rehoboam was come to Jerusalem, he assembled all the house of Judah, with the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred and fourscore thousand chosen men, which were warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, to bring the kingdom again to Rehoboam the son of Solomon.

22 But [x] the word of God came unto Shemaiah the [y] man of God, saying,

23 Speak unto Rehoboam the son of Solomon, king of Judah, and unto all the house of Judah and Benjamin, and to the [z] remnant of the people,‖ saying,

24 Thus saith the LORD, [a] Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren the children of Israel: return every man to his house; [b] for this thing is from me.* They [c] hearkened therefore to the word of the LORD, and returned to depart, according to the word of the LORD.

25 ¶ Then Jeroboam [d] built [e] Shechem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein; and went out from thence, and built [f] Penuel.

26 ¶ And Jeroboam [g] said in his heart, Now shall the kingdom return to the house of David:

27 If this people [h] go up to do sacrifice in the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, then shall the heart of this people turn again unto their lord, even unto Rehoboam king of Judah, and they [i] shall kill me, and go again to Rehoboam king of Judah.

28 Whereupon the king [k] took counsel, and made two calves of gold, and said unto them, [l] It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem: behold thy gods, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt.

29 And he set the one in [m] Beth-el,‡ and the other put he in [n] Dan.

30 And this thing [o] became a sin:§ for the people went to worship before the one, even [p] unto Dan.‖

31 And he made an [q] house of high places, and made priests [r] of the lowest of the people, which were not of the sons of Levi.

32 And Jeroboam ordained a [s] feast in the eighth month, on the fifteenth day of the month, like unto the feast that is in Judah; and he offered upon the altar, (so did he in [t] Beth-el,) * sacrificing unto the calves that he had made: and he placed in Beth-el the priests of the high places which he had made.

33 So he † offered upon the altar which he had made in Beth-el the fifteenth day of the eighth month, even in the month which he had [u] devised of his own heart; and ordained a feast unto the children of Israel: and he [x] offered upon the altar, ‡ and burnt incense.

of their danger. But it is shameful, and very depressing, when his people die under divine frowns. To what a tremendous length and degree God may carry the just chastisement of his dearest saints!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Sin is but a bad way of building families. By all his wives Solomon seems to have had but one son, and he a fool. Neither wisdom nor grace run in the blood. And often the best instructions are thrown away upon children; especially if the parent has practically disregarded them himself. Some factious spirits are always ready to blow up the coals of sedition; and often their vile designs lurk under the most specious appearances. It is astonishing that we hear no complaint of Solomon's idolatry, when we hear so much of his oppressive servitude. But most men seek their own, not the things of Jesus Christ. They are more concerned to save their money than their souls. That government is but in a tottering condition which subsists by severity, and where the king does not reign in the hearts of his subjects. They are our best friends who dissuade us from our rash designs, and they our worst enemies who soothe our folly and flatter our pride. It is mad to give true causes of provocation to those who are already provoked without cause. But it is common at courts to study the pleasure of the king more than the profit of the kingdom. And God fulfils his purposes, promises, and threatenings, by the follies, as well as by the crimes, of mankind. When people once become unreasonable, they will not stick to contemn and calumniate the best of kings, and the best of governments. And they, who by oppression drive men into rebellion, must blame themselves for the mischiefs which they incur. Princes, once infatuated in their counsels, readily add one blunder to another, running to the various extremes of haughtiness, silly compliance, and open violence. We often see the miseries which our follies occasion when it is too late to

2 And he [d] cried against the altar in the word of the LORD, and said, O altar, altar! thus saith the LORD, Behold, a child shall be born unto the house of David, [e] Josiah by name, and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be burnt upon thee.*

3 And he [f] gave a sign the same day, saying, This is the sign which the LORD hath spoken; Behold, the altar shall be rent, and the ashes that are upon it shall be poured out.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, when king Jeroboam heard the saying of the man of God, which had cried against the altar in Beth-el, that he [g] put forth his hand from the altar, saying, Lay hold on him. And his hand, which he put forth against him, [h] dried up, so that he could not pull it in again to him.

5 The altar also was rent, and the ashes poured out from the altar, according to the sign which the man of God had given by the word of the LORD.

6 And the king answered and said unto the man of God, [i] Entreat now the face of the LORD thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored me again. And the man of God [k] besought the LORD, and the king's hand was restored him again, and became as it was before.

7 ¶ And the king said unto the man of God, Come home with me, and [l] refresh thyself, and I will give thee a [m] reward.†

8 And the man of God said unto the king, [n] If thou wilt give me half thine house, I will not go in with thee, neither will I eat bread nor drink water‡ in this place:

9 For [o] so was it charged me by the word of the LORD, saying, [p] Eat no bread, nor drink water, nor turn again by the same way that thou camest.§

10 So he went another way, and returned not by the way that he came to Beth-el.

11 ¶ Now there dwelt [q] an old prophet in Beth-el; and his sons came and told him all the works that the man of God had done that day in Beth-el: the words which he had spoken unto the king, them they told also to their father.

12 And their father said unto them, What way went he? For his sons had seen what way the man of God went which came from Judah.

13 And he said unto his sons, [r] Saddle me the ass. So they saddled him the ass: and he rode thereon;

14 And went after the man of God, and found him [s] sitting under an oak: and he said unto him, [t] Art thou the man of God that camest from Judah? And he said, I am.

15 Then he said unto him, [u] Come home with me, and eat bread.

16 And he said, [x] I may not return with thee, nor go in with thee; neither will I eat bread nor drink water with thee in this place:

17 For it was said to me by the word of the LORD, Thou shalt eat no bread nor drink water there, nor turn again to go by the way that thou camest.

18 He said unto him, I am a prophet* also as thou art; and an [y] angel spake unto me by the word of the LORD, saying, Bring him back with thee into thine house, that he may eat bread and drink water. But he lied unto him.

19 So he [z] went back with him, and did eat bread in his house, and drank water.

20 ¶ And it came to pass, as they sat at the table, that the word of the LORD came unto [a] the prophet that brought him back:†

21 And he cried unto the man of God that came from Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD, [b] Forasmuch as thou hast disobeyed the mouth of the LORD, and hast not kept the commandment which the LORD thy God commanded thee,

22 But camest back, and hast eaten bread and drunk water in the place of the which the LORD did say to thee, Eat no bread, and drink no water; [c] thy carcass shall not come unto the sepulchre of thy fathers.

23 ¶ And it came to pass, after he had eaten bread, and after he had drunk, that he saddled for him the ass, to wit, for the prophet whom he had brought back.

24 And when he was gone, [d] a lion met him by the way, and slew him; and his carcass was cast in the way, and the ass stood by it, the lion also stood by the carcass.

25 And, behold, men passed by, and saw the carcass cast in the way, and the lion standing by the carcass: and they came and told it in the city where the old prophet dwelt.

26 ¶ And when the prophet that brought him back from the way heard thereof, he said, It is the man of God, who was disobedient unto the word of the LORD; therefore the LORD hath delivered him unto the lion, which hath [e] torn him, and slain him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake unto him.

27 And he spake to his sons, saying, Saddle me the ass. And they saddled him.

remedy them. Hasty words often produce endless mischiefs. But love to our brethren should make us put up with many injuries, rather than seek to redress them in a manner which may be ruinous to both: and when God's will contradicts our designs, we must submit without delay. If we fight against him, there can be no hope of success. Wicked princes soon forget the express conditions on which God granted them their power. And with infinite infamy, guilt, and danger, to themselves and their subjects, they model the worship of God after patterns of human invention which they have seen, or as they hope will best answer their carnal purposes; or which, by contrariety to what God has appointed, most gratifies their enmity against him. But to secure our safety by sin is only to hasten our ruin. Great men's examples are grievously infectious: and most subjects are ready to comply with any form of religion which their rulers please to appoint.

28 And he went, and found his carcass cast in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the carcass: the lion [f] had not eaten the carcass, nor torn the ass.

29 And the prophet took up the carcass of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and brought it back; and the old prophet came to the city, to mourn and to bury him.

30 And he laid his carcass in his own grave; and they [g] mourned over him, saying, Alas, my brother![*]

31 And it came to pass, after he had buried him, that he spake to his sons, saying, When I am dead, then [h] bury me in the sepulchre wherein the man of God is buried; lay my bones beside his bones:

32 For the saying which he cried by the word of the LORD against the altar in Beth-el, and against all the [i] houses of the high places which are in the cities of [k] Samaria, shall surely come to pass.

33 ¶ After this thing[†] Jeroboam [l] returned not from his evil way, but made again of the lowest of the people priests of the high places: whosoever would, he [m] consecrated him, and he became one of the priests of the high places.

34 And this thing [n] became sin unto the house of Jeroboam, even to cut it off, and to destroy it from off the face of the earth.

AT [a] that time Abijah the son of Jeroboam [b] fell sick.

2 And Jeroboam said to his wife, Arise, I pray thee, and [c] disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam, and get thee to [d] Shiloh: behold, there is Ahijah the prophet, which told me that [e] I should be king over this people.

3 And [f] take with thee ten loaves, and [*] cracknels, and a [†] cruse of honey, and go to him: he [g] shall tell thee what shall become of the child.

4 And Jeroboam's wife did so, and arose, and went to Shiloh, and came to the house of Ahijah: but Ahijah could not see; for his eyes [h] were set by reason of his age.

5 ¶ And the [i] LORD said unto Ahijah, Behold, the wife of Jeroboam cometh to ask a thing of thee for her son; for he is sick: thus and thus shalt thou say unto her: for it shall be, when she cometh in, that she shall feign herself to be another woman.

6 And it was so, when Ahijah heard the sound of her feet, as she came in at the door, that he said, Come in, [k] thou wife of Jeroboam; why feignest thou thyself to be another? for I am sent to thee with [l] heavy tidings.

7 Go, tell Jeroboam, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [m] Forasmuch as I exalted thee from among the people, and made thee prince over my people Israel,

8 And [n] rent the kingdom away from the house of David, and gave it thee; and yet thou hast not been as my servant David, [o] who kept my commandments, and who followed me with all his heart, to do that only which was right in mine eyes;[*]

9 But [p] hast done evil above all that were before thee: for thou hast gone and made thee other gods, and molten images, to provoke me to anger, and [q] hast cast me behind thy back:

10 Therefore, behold, [r] I will bring evil upon the house of Jeroboam, and will cut off from Jeroboam [s] him that pisseth against the wall,[†] and him that is shut up and left in Israel,[‡] and will take away the remnant of the house of Jeroboam, as a man taketh away [t] dung, till it be all gone.

11 [u] Him that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat: for the LORD hath spoken it.

12 Arise thou therefore, get thee to thine own house; and [x] when thy feet enter into the city, the child shall die.

13 And all Israel [y] shall mourn for him, and bury him; for he only of Jeroboam shall come to the grave, because in him there is found [z] some good thing toward the LORD God of Israel in the house of Jeroboam.[§]

14 Moreover, [a] the LORD shall raise him up

§ By what practical means this "remnant according to the election of grace," was converted to the true God, we are not informed; still it is refreshing and delightful to see him as "a brand plucked out of the burning;" and though cut off by a premature death, he was taken home from the evil to come, and doubtless had a "desire to depart and be with Christ," whose day, in common with all believers, he saw and longed for.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—God warns men before he strikes. And his prophets must, without fear of the greatest or the worst, faithfully declare his messages. Nothing, however contingent, or distant in futurity, is unknown to God: his purpose is fixed and unchangeable, with respect to even the smallest circumstances of our lot. Shame and disgrace attend sin and sinners at last. Most daring is their presumption who persecute the faithful messengers of God: but faithful rebukes will often provoke proud wrath. Faithful preachers are the butt of wicked men's malice; but God will protect them. In the way of duty we need fear no danger. But it is infinitely dangerous to contemn God's warnings, when he can so easily make us monuments of his vengeance. They, who in prosperity contemn the messengers of God, may soon be obliged by their troubles to have recourse to their prayers. Nor must saints ever be averse to pray even for them who despitefully use them.—Impenitent sinners are in general more affected with their sufferings than with their sins: neither mercies nor judgments will make any lasting impression upon reprobates. And men are often more ready to thank the instruments of their deliverance than to thank God, the author of them. God and his faithful servants detest false worship, and every thing which contributes to the support of it: and we should rather deny ourselves the common comforts of life, than have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness. How dangerous enemies to God's people are false prophets and unfaithful ministers, who pretend intercourse with God! Men may be seduced to evil by appearances of piety, when no fears of suffering can drive them to it. And none are more ready to upbraid and torment us than those who have seduced us. God severely punishes the disobedience of his dearest saints; and yet how marvellously he bounds their trouble! How great his sovereignty, in permitting the tempter to escape, while the seduced is so awfully punished! How necessary is constant readiness for death! But hypocrites in vain claim kindred to, and connexion with, the people of God, and wish their last end to be like theirs.—God will never want witnesses for his cause. If the man of God be dead, the false prophet must attest his warnings. And how desperate those sinners, who, after repeated warnings, corrections, and mercies, continue impenitent! For, sooner or later, the vengeance of God will overtake the sinner, and he shall perish in his own deceivings.

15 For the LORD [c] shall smite Israel, as a reed is shaken in the water,* and he shall root up Israel out of this good land, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter them † beyond the river, because they have made their groves, provoking the LORD to anger.

16 And [d] he shall give Israel up, because of the sins of Jeroboam, [e] who did sin, and who made Israel to sin.

17 ¶ And Jeroboam's wife arose, and departed, and came to [f] Tirzah: and [g] when she came to the threshold of the door, the child died;

18 And they buried him: and all Israel mourned for him, according to the word of the LORD, which he spake by the hand of his servant‡ Ahijah the prophet.

19 ¶ And [h] the rest of the acts of Jeroboam, how he warred, and how he reigned, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.§

20 And the days which Jeroboam reigned were two and twenty years: and he slept with his fathers;‖ and Nadab his son reigned in his stead.

22 And Judah [m] did evil in the sight of the LORD,‡ and they provoked him [n] to jealousy§ with their sins which they had committed, [o] above all that their fathers had done.

24 And there were also [q] sodomites in the land: and they did according to all the abominations of the nations which the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.

25 ¶ And it came to pass, in the fifth year of king Rehoboam, that [r] Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem:

26 And he took away the [s] treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house; he even took away all: and he took away all [t] the shields of gold which Solomon had made.

27 And king Rehoboam [u] made in their stead brazen shields, and committed them unto the hands of the chief of [x] the guard, which kept the door of the king's house.

28 And it was so, when the king went into the house of the LORD, that the guard bare them, and brought them back into the guard-chamber.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—When God visits our family with his rod, we ought to search out the sinful cause. And as sickness and death are equally the lot of young and old, we should always expect and prepare for it. It is common for sinners to be more anxious about the removal of their troubles than of their sins; and under trouble to apply for the assistance of God's ministers, whom they heartily hate. But it is absolute folly, for those who do evil, to expect from God's faithful ministers an answer of peace. It is daring to attempt imposing upon them, however aged and blind. But, as no covering can hide the hypocrite from the eye of God, no presents, nor compliments, nor flattery, must ever divert a minister from a bold and free declaration of the mind of God. Fearfully confounded will such imposers appear when he discovers them, especially at his awful bar. And ingratitude for singular favours, and seduction of others to sin, entail upon the transgressors the most terrible ruin. God sovereignly bestows his grace upon some in the very worst of families. He takes of such the greatest care, and often removes them from the evil to come by an honourable death. How amiable is early religion! and happy is it to be early ripe for, and transported to, the joy of the Lord! At the same time it is a fearful prelude of destruction to families or nations when the godly die out from among them. Alas! that, notwithstanding warnings and judgments upon the wicked, their pattern should be so greedily followed! Even amidst weakness and distress men will become more and more wicked; while God, to punish former sins, gives them up to their hearts' lusts, till they have ripened themselves for his judgments. God's instruments are always

8 And [k] Abijam slept with his fathers; and they buried him in the city of David: and Asa his son reigned in his stead.

9 ¶ And in the twentieth year of Jeroboam king of Israel reigned Asa over Judah.

10 And forty and one years reigned he in Jerusalem: and his [l] mother's name was Maachah, the daughter of Abishalom.

11 And Asa did that which was [m] right in the eyes of the LORD, as did David his father.

12 And he took away the [n] sodomites out of the land,* and [o] removed all the idols that [p] his fathers had made.

13 And also [q] Maachah his mother, even her he removed from being queen, because she had made an idol in a grove: and Asa [r] destroyed her idol, and burnt it by the brook Kidron.

14 But the [s] high places were not removed:† nevertheless Asa's heart was [t] perfect with the LORD all his days.

15 And he [u] ‡ brought in the [§] things which his father had dedicated, and the things which himself had dedicated, into the house of the LORD, silver, and gold, and vessels.‖

16 ¶ [x] And there was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.

17 And [y] Baasha king of Israel went up against Judah, and built [z] Ramah,* that he might not suffer any to go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

18 Then [a] Asa took all the silver and the gold that were left in the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king's house, and delivered them into the hand of his servants: and king Asa [b] sent them to [b] Ben-hadad, the son of Tabrimon, the son of Hezion, king of Syria, that dwelt at Damascus, saying,

19 There is a [c] league between me and thee, and between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent unto thee a present of silver and gold;‡ come and break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

20 So [d] Ben-hadad hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of the hosts which he had against the cities of Israel, and smote [e] Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-beth-maachah, and all Cinneroth, with all the land of Naphtali.

21 And it came to pass, [f] when Baasha heard hereof, that he left off building of Ramah, and dwelt in [g] Tirzah.

22 Then [h] king Asa made a proclamation throughout all Judah, (none was exempted:) and they took away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha had builded; and king Asa built with them [i] Geba of Benjamin, and Mizpah.

23 ¶ The [k] rest of all the acts of Asa, and all his might, and all that he did, and the cities which he built, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah? Nevertheless [l] in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet.*

24 And Asa slept with his fathers,† and was buried with his fathers in the city of David his father: and [m] Jehoshaphat his son reigned in his stead.

25 ¶ And Nadab the son of Jeroboam‡ began to reign over Israel in the second year of Asa king of Judah, and reigned over Israel two years.

26 And he [n] did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of his father, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

27 ¶ And Baasha the son of [o] Ahijah, of the house of Issachar, [p] conspired against him: and Baasha smote him at [q] Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines; (for Nadab and all Israel laid siege to Gibbethon;)

28 Even in [r] the third year of Asa king of Judah did Baasha [s] slay him, and reigned in his stead.

29 And it came to pass, when he reigned, that [s] he smote all the house of Jeroboam; he left not to Jeroboam any that breathed, until he had destroyed him, according unto the saying of the LORD, which he spake by his servant Ahijah the Shilonite:

30 Because of the sins of Jeroboam which he sinned, and which he made Israel sin, by his provocation wherewith he provoked the LORD God of Israel to anger.

31 [t] Now the rest of the acts of Nadab, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

32 ¶ And there [u] was war between Asa and Baasha king of Israel all their days.‖

33 In the third year of Asa king of Judah [s] began Baasha the son of Ahijah to reign over all Israel in Tirzah, [x] twenty and four years.

34 And he [y] did evil in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin.

ready at hand for chastising even his professed people: and sin quickly reduces the wealthiest to poverty and debasement. Jerusalem is now emptied of her gold and silver; yet not chiefly Shishak, but sin hath done it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—How few great men, especially kings, have any real piety! And what a plague to their subjects is their want of it! Parents' ill example is very pernicious to their children: and it is a double reproach on those who degenerate from the piety of their ancestors. Sin often shortens men's days, and hastens them to an untimely end. But what a remarkable blessing to nations and families are God's noted favourites! Even after their death God often pities, from regard to them, and to his promises made to them. It is a mercy when God shortens the reign of wicked rulers to make way for better, and

THEN the word of the LORD came to [a] Jehu the son of Hanani [*] against Baasha, saying,

2 Forasmuch as I [b] exalted thee out of the dust, and made thee prince over my people Israel, and thou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and hast made my people Israel to sin, to provoke me to anger with their sins;

3 Behold, I will take away the posterity of Baasha, and the posterity of his house; and will make thy house like [c] the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

4 [d] Him that dieth of Baasha in the city shall the dogs eat; and him that dieth of his in the fields shall the fowls of the air eat.

5 ¶ [e] Now the rest of the acts of Baasha, and what he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

6 So [f] Baasha slept with his fathers, † and was buried in Tirzah: [g] and Elah his son reigned in his stead.

7 And also by the [h] hand of the prophet Jehu [‡] the son of Hanani came the word of the LORD against Baasha, and against his house, even for all the evil that he did in the sight of the LORD, in provoking him to anger with the [i] work of his hands, in being like the house of Jeroboam; and because he [k] killed him. [§]

8 ¶ In the twenty and sixth year of Asa king of Judah began Elah the son of Baasha to reign over Israel in Tirzah, two years.

9 And his servant Zimri (captain of half his chariots) [l] conspired against him, as he was in Tirzah, [m] drinking himself drunk in the house of Arza, steward of his house in Tirzah.

10 And Zimri went in and smote him, and killed him, in the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah, and [n] reigned in his stead.

11 ¶ And it came to pass, when he began to reign, as soon as he sat on his throne, that [o] he slew all the house of Baasha: he left him not one that [p] pisseth against a wall, [‖] neither of his kinsfolks, nor of his friends.

12 Thus did Zimri destroy all the house of Baasha, [q] according to the word of the LORD, which he spake against Baasha [*] by Jehu the prophet,

13 [r] For all the sins of Baasha, and the sins of Elah his son, by which they sinned, and by which they made Israel to sin, in provoking the LORD God of Israel to anger with their [*] vanities.

14 [t] Now the rest of the acts of Elah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

15 ¶ In the twenty and seventh year of Asa king of Judah did Zimri reign [u] seven days in Tirzah: [*] and the people were [x] encamped against Gibbethon, which belonged to the Philistines.

16 And the people that were encamped heard say, Zimri hath conspired, and hath also slain the king: wherefore all Israel made [y] Omri, the captain of the host, king over Israel that day in the camp.

17 And Omri went up from Gibbethon, and all Israel with him, and they [z] besieged Tirzah.

18 And it came to pass, when Zimri saw that the city was taken, that he went into the palace of the king's house, and [a] burnt the king's house over him with fire, and died,

19 For his sins which he sinned in doing [b] evil in the sight of the LORD, in walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin which he did, to make Israel to sin. †

20 [c] Now the rest of the acts of Zimri, and his treason that he wrought, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

21 ¶ Then were the people of Israel [d] divided into two parts: half of the people followed Tibni the son of Ginath, to make him king, and half followed Omri.

22 But the people that followed Omri prevailed against the people that followed Tibni the son of Ginath: so Tibni died, and Omri reigned.

23 ¶ In the thirty and first year of Asa king of Judah began Omri to reign over Israel, [e] twelve years: six years reigned he in Tirzah.

24 And he bought the hill Samaria of Shemer [§] for two talents of silver, and built on the hill, and called the name of the city which he built, after the name of Shemer, owner of the hill, [f] Samaria. [‖]

25 ¶ But Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the LORD, and did [g] worse than all that were before him.

26 For he [h] walked in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and in his sin wherewith he made Israel to sin, to provoke the LORD God of Israel to anger with their vanities.

27 ¶ Now [i] the rest of the acts of Omri which he did, and his might that he showed, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

28 So Omri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria: and Ahab his son reigned in his stead.

29 ¶ And in the [k] thirty and eighth year of Asa king of Judah began Ahab the son of Omri to reign over Israel: and Ahab the son of Omri

Many defects are in the best; much imperfection in their works of reformation; and great proneness to rely upon an arm of flesh in the time of trouble. But God generally imbitters to his people the success of their own sinful projects. How wretched are nations when one wicked prince still follows another! when successors murder their wicked sovereigns, but continue cleaving to their ruinous wickedness.

† Baal is not a proper name of any god, but a general title equivalent to Lord, Master, or Husband. 9 Arise, get thee to [i] Zarephath,[*] which belongeth to Zidon, and dwell there: behold, I have commanded a widow woman there to sustain thee.

10 So he arose, and went to Zarephath: and when he came to the gate of the city, behold, the widow woman was there gathering of sticks: and he called to her, and said, [k] Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink.

11 And as she was going to fetch it, he called to her, and said, [l] Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand.

12 And she said, [m] As the LORD thy God liveth,[†] I have not a [n] cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse: and, behold, I am gathering two sticks, that I may go in and dress it for me and my son, that we may eat it, and [o] die.

13 And Elijah said unto her, Fear not; go and do as thou hast said: but [p] make me thereof a little cake first, and bring it unto me, and after make for thee and for thy son:

14 For thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [q] The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail, until the day that the LORD sendeth rain upon the earth.

15 And she [r] went and did according to the saying of Elijah: and she, and he, and her house, did eat [‡] many days.

16 And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail, [s] according to the word of the LORD, which he spake [§] by Elijah.

17 ¶ And it came to pass after these things, that the [t] son of the woman, the mistress of the house, fell sick; and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him.

18 And she said unto Elijah, [u] What have I to do with thee, O thou [x] man of God? [y] art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance,[¶] and to slay my son?

19 And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a [z] loft where he abode, and laid him upon his own bed.

20 And he [a] cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, hast thou also [b] brought evil upon the widow with whom I sojourn, by slaying her son?

21 And he [c] stretched himself upon the child three times,[*] and cried unto the LORD, and said, O LORD my God, I pray thee, let this child's soul come into him again.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—For the wickedness of a land, many and bad are the princes thereof: and they multiply their murders and massacres one of another. But short-lived and troublesome is the power and honour procured by murder. How eagerly do men follow the very sins, or worse, which ruined their predecessors before their eyes! But, if thus they harden themselves in their ingratitude, their blood must be on their own heads. God indeed sometimes permits wicked men to die in their beds, and leave their wicked children to pay off their awful reckoning. Drunkards fearfully expose themselves to death in a thousand forms. And it is terrible to be hurried drunk to the tribunal of a holy God! Rebellious projectors often perish in the flames which they have kindled; and revenge and envy attend them in death. And it is terrible when God punishes men's harmony in wickedness with civil wars and discords. Dreadful is his case who is married to a wicked and abandoned woman: nothing is so base or horrid but she can persuade him to it. When kings are monsters of wickedness, the subjects will strive to outdo them in contempt of God. But such as despise his curse shall feel the weight of it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—God will have his witnesses in the worst of times, and will endue them with gifts and graces proportionable to the difficulties with which they are called to struggle. Great and inexpressible is the power of fervent prayer with God. But it bodes ill for a people when God's prophets are driven into corners, and when obscurity becomes their duty by the call of God. They who dare to be bold for God may trust him with their protection; he will take care that they shall not starve. He can make the most ravenous or the most destitute creatures on earth to provide for them. When one created source runs dry, he can make another to break forth. And plentifully he rewards those who cheerfully supply the wants of his servants. Yet to what straits and perplexity may those who fear his name, or their children, be reduced before he appear for their relief! But, in our deepest distresses God is nearer to relieve us than we think, and faith must silence all objections. A promise of God is instead of a thousand arguments. They, who can trust God with their all, will find themselves no losers by him: and works of piety and charity bring us our own again with usury. God often exercises his people with the heaviest trials after they have met with remarkable favours. And the more unexpected the stroke, the harder it is to be composed under it at first. In our troubles, how apt are we to quarrel with our best friends, and in our haste to speak unadvisedly with our lips! But it is more decent and becoming humbly to search out, confess and acknowledge our sin, which is the cause of them. And, if others be in trouble, our business is to sympathize with them, and intercede with God in their favour. And great is the mercy when troubles and deliverances concur to strengthen our faith and increase our knowledge. But how great the condescension of God—he hath chosen the poor, rich in faith, and heirs of his kingdom! How great his sovereignty in selecting the monuments of his special kindness! A Canaanitish widow is regarded, is honoured with miracles, when multitudes in Israel, as destitute as she, are overlooked!

33 And he [s] put the wood in order, and cut the bullock in pieces, and laid him on the wood, and said, Fill four barrels with water, and [t] pour it on the burnt-sacrifice, and on the wood.

34 And he said, Do it the second time: and they did it the second time. And he said, Do it the third time: and they did it the third time.

35 And the water *ran round about the altar; and he filled the [u] trench also with water.

36 And it came to pass, [x] at the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice,† that Elijah the prophet came near, and said, [y] LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, [z] let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word.

37 [a] Hear me, O LORD, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the LORD God, and that thou hast [b] turned their heart back again.

38 [c] Then the fire of the LORD fell,‡ and consumed the burnt-sacrifice, and the wood, and the stones, and the dust, and licked up the water that was in the trench.§

39 And when all the people saw it, they [d] fell on their faces: and [e] they said, The LORD, he is the God; the LORD, he is the God.

40 And Elijah said unto them, [f] Take the prophets of Baal, let not one of them escape. And they took them: and Elijah brought them down to the brook [g] Kishon, and slew them there.‖

41 ¶ And Elijah said unto Ahab, Get thee up, [h] eat and drink; for there is a sound of abundance of rain.*

42 So Ahab went up to eat and to drink: and [i] Elijah went up to the top of Carmel; and [k] he cast himself down upon the earth, and put his face between his knees,

43 And said to his servant, [l] Go up now, look toward the sea. And he went up, and looked, and said, There is nothing. And he said, [m] Go again seven times.

44 And it came to pass, at the seventh time, that he said, Behold, there ariseth [n] a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand. And he said, Go up, say unto Ahab, †Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not.

45 And it came to pass, in the mean while, that the heaven was black with clouds and wind, and *there was a great rain. And Ahab rode, and went to [p] Jezreel.‡

46 And the [q] hand of the LORD was on Elijah; and he [r] girded up his loins, and ran before Ahab to the entrance of Jezreel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—God can turn a fruitful land into barrenness for the sins of them that dwell therein: but judgments, instead of humbling, enrage the impenitent. When persecutors cannot wreak their malice and fury on God, they do it upon his servants. But what a mercy is it, that God, even in wicked courts, hath those who fear him and protect his ministers. It is very honourable when saints are so faithful in relative duties, that such, who hate their religion, cannot but show them distinguished regard; and when persons in high station lay out their influence or wealth for the support of God's faithful ministers and people. But God often, when his people's condition is seemingly desperate, raises up helpers where they could be least expected. It is proper that saints be cautious in dealing with enraged persecutors: but sometimes they are apt to overdo in their caution. The faithful servants of Christ are often calumniated as enemies to the state: and even when they bring the best of tidings, the impenitent brand them as their troublers. But they, who by their sins provoke God against a nation, are the real troublers of it, and ought faithfully to be told it. God can overrule the hearts of his most inveterate enemies, and make them to grant what his servants demand for his honour. Unsettled notions of religion lead to unsound practices: and there can be no communion betwixt Christ and Belial. Let us then never, in inclination, profession, or practice, halt between God and his rivals. Nor must the ministers of Christ be discouraged when they see multitudes against them: it is enough that God is on their side. He can take the wise in their own craftiness, and turn the counsel of the froward headlong; and the hope of the hypocrite perishes. It is

AND Ahab told Jezebel [a] all that Elijah had done, and withal how he had slain all the prophets with the sword.

2 Then Jezebel sent a messenger unto Elijah, saying, [b] So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by [c] to-morrow about this time.

3 And when he saw that, [d] he arose, and went for his life, and came to [e] Beer-sheba,* which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there.

4 ¶ † But he himself went a day's journey into the wilderness,‡ and came and [f] sat down under a juniper-tree: and he requested [g] for himself that he might die; and said, It is enough; now, O LORD, take away my life; for I am not better than my fathers.§

10 And he said, I have been [q] very jealous for the LORD God of hosts: for [r] the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant, thrown down thine altars, and slain thy prophets with the sword; and [s] I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away.

† The angel of the Lord appears to have either directed or approved of this journey, (ver. 7.) which this question seems to condemn. But the reprehension is not that of the journey, but of the prophet's despondency. The lessons which the narrative conveys are pregnant with instruction. 1. It teaches that "man shall not live by bread alone," since a little can sustain for 40 days. 2. That no retreat is free from danger, since storm, earthquake, and fire, visit the deepest solitudes. 3. That solitude, contemplative inaction, and despondency, are unbecoming the commissioned servants of the Lord. 4. 21 And he returned back from him, and took a yoke of oxen, and slew them, and [q] boiled their flesh with the instruments of the oxen, and [r] gave unto the people, and they did eat: then he arose, and went after Elijah, and ministered unto him.

a poor religion that consists chiefly in externals; and a devilish one that requires inhuman severities. Nothing, neither disappointment nor public shame, will undeceive those whom God hath given up to strong delusions. But how condescending was it in God to put his own pre-eminence, or rather Godhead, to the trial! Graciously he answers the fervent prayers of his zealous servants: and gloriously he overcomes when he is judged. Dreadful is the ruin of such as obstinately dispute his supremacy. But, when false prophets and evil ministers are removed from a land, God will return and refresh it. Secret, importunate, and repeated prayers must indeed be used to draw down the promised blessings; and great mercies may arise from the very smallest beginnings. But distinguished humility, and dependance upon an all-strengthening God, ought to attend upon, and flow from, the receipt of such most distinguishing honours.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—The promoters of false worship desperately hate those who zealously oppose their designs. And no persecutor is more malicious or furious than a profane woman. How weak and spiritless are the greatest zealots for God when left to themselves! Elijah had just commanded both king and subjects: now he shrinks for fear of a dignified harlot. But it is mean to desire death as a refuge from distress; and to seek to die, like a wandering sheep, in the wilderness, while shunning the honourable death of a martyr for God at Jezreel. When men impatiently wish for death, they are ordinarily in a frame very unfit for it; and would be ready to recall their wish if God were to grant it. We ought never to desert the path of duty, though it lead us through the valley of the shadow of death. However dark providences appear, we must never despair. We know not what further work God may have for us. To desire to

CHAPTER XX.

(1) Ben-hadad invades the land of Israel: 1—12. (2) Encouraged and directed by a prophet, Ahab and an handful of Israelites, defeat the huge host of the Syrians: 13—21. (3) The Syrians, imagining that the God of Israel could not assist his people in the plains, again invade the country; but, to punish their blasphemy, are almost entirely cut off: 22—30. (4) By humble supplication, Ben-hadad procures from Ahab a covenant of friendship: 31—34: For which a prophet denounces almost utter destruction to Ahab and his kingdom by the Syrians: 35—43.

A. M. 3103. B. C. 901.

AND [a] Ben-hadad the king of Syria gathered all his host together: and there were [b] thirty and two kings with him, [*] and horses and chariots: and he went up and [c] besieged Samaria, and warred against it.

2 And he [d] sent messengers to Ahab king of Israel into the city, and said unto him, Thus saith Ben-hadad,

3 Thy [*] silver and thy gold is mine; thy wives also and thy children, even the goodliest, are mine.

4 And the king of Israel answered and said, My lord, O king, according to thy saying, [e] I am thine, and all that I have.

5 And the messengers came again, and said, Thus speaketh Ben-hadad, saying, Although I have sent unto thee, saying, [f] Thou shalt deliver me thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives, and thy children;

6 Yet I will send my servants unto thee to-morrow about this time, and they shall search thine house, and the houses of thy servants; [†] and it shall be, that whatsoever is [‡] pleasant in thine eyes, they shall put it in their hand, and take it away.

7 Then the king of Israel called [h] all the elders of the land, and said, Mark, I pray you, and see how this man [i] seeketh mischief; for he sent unto me for my wives, and for my children, and for my silver, and for my gold, and I [k] denied him not.

8 And all the elders, and all the people, said unto him, [l] Hearken not unto him, nor consent.

9 Wherefore he said unto the messengers of Ben-hadad, Tell my lord the king, All that thou didst send for to thy servant at the first I will do; but this thing I may not do. And the messengers departed and brought him word again.

10 And Ben-hadad sent unto him, and said, [m] The gods do so unto me, and more also, [§] if the dust of Samaria shall [n] suffice for handfuls for all the people that [o] follow me.

11 And the king of Israel answered and said, Tell him, [p] Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself [‖] as he that putteth it off.

12 And it came to pass, when Ben-hadad heard this [*] message, (as he was [q] drinking, he and the kings in the [†] pavilions,) that he said unto his servants, [‡] Set yourselves in array: and they set themselves in array against the city.

13 ¶ And, [r] behold, there [§] came a prophet unto Ahab king of Israel, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thine hand this day; and [s] thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

14 And Ahab said, By whom? And he said, Thus saith the LORD, Even by the [t] young men of the princes of the provinces. Then he said, Who shall [‖] order the battle? And he answered, [u] Thou.

15 Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty-two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being [x] seven thousand.[*]

16 And they went out at noon: [†] [y] but Ben-hadad was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions, [‡] he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him.

17 And the young men of the princes of the provinces went out first; and Ben-hadad sent out, and they told him, saying, There are men come out of Samaria.

18 And he said, [z] Whether they be come out for peace, take them alive; or whether they be come out for war, take them alive.[§]

19 So these young men of the princes of the provinces came out of the city, and the army which followed them.

20 And they slew [a] every one his man: [‖] and the Syrians [b] fled; and Israel pursued them: and Ben-hadad the king of Syria escaped on an horse with the horsemen.

21 And the king of Israel [c] went out, and smote the horses and chariots, and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter.

22 ¶ And the [d] prophet came to the king of Israel, and said unto him, Go, [e] strengthen thyself, and mark, and see what thou doest: for [f] at the return of the year the king of Syria will come up against thee.

23 And the servants of the king of Syria said unto him, [g] Their gods are gods of the hills; [*] therefore they were stronger than we: but let us fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they.

be with Christ is laudable; but to be weary of our warfare is sinful. But God kindly overlooks the infirmities of his people; visits them when on the brink of despair; and lays meat before them when they shamefully desert his service. Such as are travelling to Horeb, to the mount of God in heaven, will find strength ministered to them for their journey, and angels to be their ministering spirits. To encourage their own peevish forwardness, saints are apt to think matters in the church worse than they really are. But whom the Lord loves he will rebuke and chasten, he will direct and further employ. No place can exclude his gracious manifestations. It is the folly of human weakness to be discouraged for want of success in God's work. The sufficiency of the power is of God, not of ourselves. They, that would be faithful for God in bad times, must put their lives in their hands, and be ready to die for him.—In the most terrible manner God often introduces his most mild and gracious intimations. God's saints are generally few; but they are often more numerous, in times of general apostasy, than good men think: and all of them are under the special knowledge and care of God. It bodes ill when God's favourites become intercessors against a people. We may expect quickly to see or hear of instruments of God's wrath raised up to destroy them: for in his due time God will avenge his people, and that speedily. Never can he want agents for his work, whether of mercy or judgment. None can resist his effectual and heart-touching call: and no earthly cares can detain them from his service.

24 And do this thing, [h] Take the kings away, every man out of his place, and put captains in their rooms;

25 And number thee an army like the army [*] that thou hast lost, horse for horse, and chariot for chariot; and we will fight against them in the plain, and surely we shall be stronger than they. And he hearkened unto their voice, and did so.

26 And it came to pass at the return of the year,[†] that Ben-hadad numbered the Syrians, and went up [i] to Aphek, [‡] to fight against Israel.

27 And the children of Israel were numbered, and [§] were all present,[‖] and went against them: and the children of Israel pitched before them like two little flocks of kids;[*] but the Syrians [k] filled the country.

28 ¶ And there came [l] a man of God, and spake unto the king of Israel, and said, Thus saith the LORD, [m] Because the Syrians have said, The LORD is God of the hills, but he is not God of the valleys, [n] therefore will I deliver all this great multitude into thine hand, and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

29 And they pitched one over against the other [o] seven days: and so it was, that in the seventh day the battle was joined; and the children of Israel slew of the Syrians [p] an hundred thousand footmen in one day.[†]

30 But the rest fled to Aphek, into the city; [q] and there a wall fell[‡] upon twenty and seven thousand of the men that were left. And Ben-hadad fled, and came into the city, into an [§r] inner chamber.

31 ¶ And his servants said unto him, Behold now, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful kings: let us, I pray thee, put sackcloth on our loins, and ropes upon our heads, and go out to the king of Israel; peradventure he will save thy life.

32 So they girded [s] sackcloth on their loins, and put ropes on their heads,[‖] and came to the king of Israel, and said, Thy [t] servant Ben-hadad saith, I pray thee, let me live. And he said, Is he yet alive? he is my brother.

33 Now the men did diligently observe whether any thing would come from him, and did hastily catch it: and they said, Thy brother Ben-hadad. Then he said, Go ye, bring him. Then Ben-hadad came forth to him; and he caused him to come up into the chariot.

34 And Ben-hadad said unto him, [u] The cities, which my father took from thy father, I will restore; and thou shalt make streets for thee in Damascus,[*] as my father made in Samaria. Then said Ahab, I will send thee away with this covenant. So [x] he made a covenant with him, and sent him away.

35 ¶ And a certain man of the [y] sons of the prophets said unto his neighbour in the word of the LORD, [z] Smite me, I pray thee.[†] And the man refused to smite him.

36 Then said he unto him, [a] Because thou hast not obeyed the voice of the LORD, behold, as soon as thou art departed from me, a lion shall slay thee. And as soon as he was departed from him, a lion found him, and slew him.

37 Then he found another man, and said, [b] Smite me, I pray thee. And the man smote him, [‡] so that in smiting he wounded him.

38 So the prophet departed, and waited for the king by the way,[§] and [c] disguised himself with ashes[‖] upon his face.

39 And as the king passed by, he cried unto the king: and he [d] said, Thy servant went out into the midst of the battle; and, behold, a man turned aside, and brought a man unto me, and said, Keep this man: if by any means he be missing, then shall thy life be for his life, or else thou shalt [*] pay a talent of silver.

40 And as thy servant was busy here and there, [†] he was gone.[‡] And the king of Israel said unto him, [e] So shall thy judgment be; thyself hast decided it.

41 And he hasted, and took the ashes away from his face; and the king of Israel discerned him that he was of the prophets.

42 And he said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, Because [f] thou hast let go out of thy hand a man [§] whom I appointed to utter destruction,[‖] therefore thy life shall go for his life, and thy people for his people.

43 And the king of Israel went to his house [§] heavy and displeased,[*] and came to Samaria.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Weak and defenceless are those who have provoked God to forsake them, however former successes may make them proud or insolent. There is no satisfying the covetous mind: and mean spirits delight to tyrannize over those who they think dare not resist them. But pride and insolent boasting go before destruction. The greatest talkers are seldom the greatest actors. And, the more secure men are, the more certain is their ruin. God often heaps mercies on his sinful people when they are almost ripe for destruction. Inadequate means must be used when God directs, but no means ever trusted to. By the weakest instruments God can abase the proud, and defeat the most powerful armies, even when flushed with victory and success. But we must never on earth think the danger over. Earth and hell cannot long lie quiet. Atheistical apprehensions of God effectually plunge men headlong into misery. For they that fight against him will at last be covered with confusion and despair. Malicious persecutors are in general extremely indulgent to horrid murderers and blasphemers. But sinful indulgence issues in men's own ruin. God's servants have need of great boldness and zeal, that they may declare his mind to the most a garden of herbs, because it is near unto my house; and I will give thee for it a better vineyard than it; or, if it seem [a] good to thee, I will give thee the worth of it in money.

3 And Naboth said to Ahab, The LORD forbid it me, that [d] I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee.[†]

4 And Ahab came into his house [e] heavy and displeased because of the word which Naboth the Jezreelite had spoken to him; for he had said, I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers: and he [f] laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread.[‡]

5 ¶ But [g] Jezebel his wife came to him, and said unto him, Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?

6 And he said unto her, [h] Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it: and he answered, I will not give thee my vineyard.

7 And Jezebel his wife said unto him, [i] Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel? arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry:[§] I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite.

8 So she [k] wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal, and sent the letters unto [l] the elders and to the nobles that were in his city, dwelling with Naboth.

9 And she wrote in the letters, saying, [l] [m] Proclaim a fast,[*] and set Naboth [†] on high among the people:

10 And set two men, [n] sons of Belial, before him, to [o] bear witness against him, saying, Thou didst blaspheme God and the king:[‡] and then [q] carry him out, and stone him, that he may die.

11 And the men of his city, even the elders and the nobles who were the inhabitants in his city, [q] did as Jezebel had sent unto them, and as it was written in the letters which she had sent unto them:

12 They proclaimed a fast, and set Naboth on high among the people.

13 And there came in two men, children of Belial, and sat before him: and the men of Belial [r] witnessed against him, even against Naboth, in the presence of the people, saying, Naboth did [s] blaspheme God and the king. Then they carried him forth out of the city, and stoned him [t] with stones, that he died.

14 Then they sent to Jezebel, saying, [u] Naboth is stoned, and is dead.

15 ¶ And it came to pass, when Jezebel heard that Naboth was stoned, and was dead, that Jezebel said to Ahab, Arise, [x] take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead.

16 And it came to pass, when Ahab heard that Naboth was dead,[*] that Ahab rose up to go down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it.

17 ¶ And the [y] word of the LORD came to Elijah the Tishbite, saying,

18 Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel, which is in Samaria: behold, he is in the vineyard of Naboth, whither he is gone down to possess it.

19 And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, [z] Hast thou killed, and also taken possession? And thou shalt speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD, [a] In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.

20 And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O [b] mine enemy?[†] And he answered, I have found thee; because thou hast [c] sold thyself to work evil[‡] in the sight of the LORD.

21 Behold, [d] I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity, and will cut off from Ahab him that pisseth against the wall,[§] and him that is shut up and left in Israel,[‖]

22 And will make thine house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, and like the house of Baasha the son of Ahijah, for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and made Israel to sin.

23 And [e] of Jezebel also spake the LORD, saying, The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the [*] wall of Jezreel.

24 [f] Him that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat.

25 (But there [g] was none like unto Ahab, which did sell himself to work wickedness in the sight of the LORD, whom [h] Jezebel his wife stirred up.[†]

26 And he [‡] did very abominably in following idols, according to [i] all things as did the Amorites, whom the LORD cast out before the children of Israel.)

27 ¶ And it came to pass, when Ahab heard those words, that he [k] rent his clothes, and put sackcloth upon his flesh, and fasted, and lay in sackcloth, and went softly.[§]

powerful transgressors. And it is peculiarly stinging when men are condemned out of their own mouth.

Learn, O my soul, notwithstanding all my emptiness, to be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. If my spiritual enemies compass me about like bees, let me attack them in the name of the Lord. If I obtain one victory, let me prepare for another assault. But let me never show mercy to the most humble and suppliant lust:—to pity those is to be careless of God's honour, and cruel to myself.

AND they continued [a] three years without war between Syria and Israel.

2 And it [b] came to pass in the third year, that Jehoshaphat the king of Judah came down to the king of Israel.

3 (And the king of Israel said unto his servants, Know ye that [c] Ramoth in Gilead is ours,* and we be [†] still, and take it not out of the hand of the king of Syria?)

4 And he said unto Jehoshaphat, [d] Wilt thou go with me to battle to Ramoth-gilead? And Jehoshaphat said to the king of Israel, [‡] I am as thou art, my people as thy people, my horses as thy horses.

5 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, [e] Inquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.[§]

6 Then the king of Israel gathered the [f] prophets together, about four hundred men,[‖] and said unto them, Shall I go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, Go up; [g] for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

7 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said, [h] Is there not here a prophet of the LORD besides, that we might inquire of him?

8 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet [i] one man (Micaiah the son of Imlah) by whom we may [k] inquire of the LORD: but [l] I hate him; for he doth not prophesy [m] good concerning me, but evil. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

9 Then the king of Israel called an [*] officer, and said, Hasten hither Micaiah the son of Imlah.

10 And the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, sat each on his throne, having [n] put on their robes, in a [*] void place in the entrance of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets [o] prophesied before them.

11 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah made him [p] horns of iron; and he said, [q] Thus saith the LORD, with these shalt thou push the Syrians, until thou have consumed them.

12 And all the prophets prophesied so, [r] saying, Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the king's hand.

13 And the messenger that was gone to call Micaiah spake unto him, saying, Behold now, [s] the words of the prophets declare good unto the king with one mouth: let thy word, I pray thee, be like the word of one of them, and speak that which is good.[†]

14 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, [t] what the LORD saith unto me, that will I speak.

15 ¶ So he came to the king. And the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go against Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall we forbear? And he answered him, [u] Go, and prosper: for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.[‡]

16 And the king said unto him, How many times shall I [x] adjure thee that thou tell me nothing but that which is true in the name of the LORD?

17 And he said, I saw all Israel [z] scattered upon the hills, as sheep that have not a shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master; let them return every man to his house in peace.

18 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, Did [a] I not tell thee that he would prophesy no good concerning me, but evil?

19 And he said, Hear thou therefore the word of the LORD: I saw the LORD [b] sitting on his throne, and all the [c] host of heaven standing by him on his right hand and on his left.

20 And the LORD said, Who shall [§] persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one said on this manner, and another said on that manner.

21 And there came [d] forth a spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will persuade him.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—Nearness to great men often exposes to oppression; and there is need of stedfast adherence to the Lord's command when we meet with strong temptations. How insatiable is a covetous heart! Many great men, in all that they have, can enjoy but small pleasure, because of some fancied want: and proud and discontented spirits terribly torment themselves. What a plague to nations are covetous and tyrannical rulers! Having their heart set on wickedness, the devil quickly furnishes the means: and nothing is too base and hypocritical, or even horrid or blasphemous, for them to stick at. When sin has hardened their heart, men glory in their wickedness, and are lost to shame. But that which is unlawfully gotten, frequently proves a burden instead of a comfort. The very presence of faithful ministers, who cannot endure to see the wicked perishing in their iniquities, is a terror to such, and their faithful rebukes torment them: but how much more, and how often, even in this life, does the distinguished vengeance of God perplex and pursue them! Legal terrors may produce strong professions of repentance, but only a sense of God's pardoning love can convert the heart. And if God mark such regard to apparent repentance, how great is his mercy, and how great is his regard to those who sorrow after a godly sort!

22 And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and I [e] will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, Thou [f] shalt persuade him, and prevail also: go forth, and do so.

23 Now therefore, behold, the LORD hath put a lying spirit* in the mouth of all these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil concerning thee.

24 ¶ But Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near, and [g] smote Micaiah on the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

25 And Micaiah said, Behold, thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt go into † [h] an inner chamber to hide thyself.

26 And the king of Israel said, Take Micaiah, and carry him back‡ unto Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

27 And say, Thus saith the king, [i] Put this fellow in the prison, and feed him with [k] bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I come in peace.

28 And Micaiah said, [l] If thou return at all in peace, the LORD hath not spoken by me. And he said, [m] Hearken, O people, every one of you.

29 ¶ [n] So the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, went up to Ramoth-gilead.§

30 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, ‖ I will disguise myself, and enter into the battle; [o] but put thou on thy robes.* And the king of Israel disguised himself, and went into the battle.

31 ¶ But the king of Syria commanded his [p] thirty and two captains that had rule over his chariots, saying, [q] Fight neither with small nor great, save only with the king of Israel.

32 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, Surely it is the king of Israel. And they [r] turned aside to fight against him; and Jehoshaphat [s] cried out.†

33 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots perceived that it was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from pursuing him.

34 ¶ And a certain man drew a bow [t] at a venture,‡ and smote the king of Israel between the § joints of the harness: wherefore he said unto the driver of his chariot, Turn thine hand, and carry me out of the host; for I am ‖ wounded.

35 And [u] the battle * increased that day:† and the king was stayed up in his chariot against the Syrians, and died at even: and the blood ran out of the wound into the * midst of the chariot.

36 And there went a proclamation throughout the host about the going down of the sun, saying, [x] Every man to his city, and every man to his own country.

37 ¶ So the king died, † and was brought to Samaria; and they buried the king in Samaria.

38 And one washed the chariot in the pool of Samaria; and the dogs licked up his blood; and they washed his armour; [y] according unto the word of the LORD which he spake.

39 ¶ Now [z] the rest of the acts of Ahab, and all that he did, and the [a] ivory house‡ which he made, and all the cities that he built, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

40 So Ahab slept with his fathers; and Ahaziah his son reigned in his stead.

41 ¶ And [b] Jehoshaphat the son of Asa began to reign over Judah in the fourth year of Ahab king of Israel.

42 Jehoshaphat was thirty and five years old § when he began to reign; and he reigned [c] twenty and five years in Jerusalem: and his [d] mother's name was Azubah, the daughter of Shilhi.

43 And he [e] walked in all the ways of Asa his father; he turned not aside from it, doing that which was right in the eyes of the LORD: nevertheless [f] the high places were not taken away; for the people offered and burnt incense yet in the high places.‖

44 And Jehoshaphat [g] made peace with the king of Israel.

45 Now [h] the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, and his might that he showed, and how he warred, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

46 And the [i] remnant of the sodomites, which remained in the days of his father Asa, he took out of the land.*

47 There was then [k] no king in Edom: a deputy was king.

48 Jehoshaphat † made ships of Tharshish‡ [l] to go to Ophir§ for gold: but they went not; for the ships were broken‖ at [m] Ezion-geber.

49 Then said Ahaziah the son of Ahab unto Jehoshaphat, Let my servants go with thy servants in the ships: but [n] Jehoshaphat would not.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Wicked sovereigns pay little regard to the laws either of gratitude or of solemn treaties. It is taking hold of the opportunities which God puts in our hand, not leagues with perfidious princes, that will secure our rights; and least of all ought leagues, extorted by distress, to be trusted to. The worst of men, from selfish motives, will court the friendship of the godly; but, whenever opportunity serves, are sure to expose them to danger. The conscience, the life of saints, yea, and all that they have, are endangered by sinful compliances to evil men: but tender saints can never delight in evil and flattering ministers, nor fail to regard the faithful servants of God. Unity and multitude are poor proofs of a good cause. Nothing is a surer sign of an evil minister than his encouraging wicked and hypocritical men to sleep on in their sin: nor is any thing a more dreadful plague to persons or nations than the united flattery of unfaithful ministers. When flatterers abound, the men of God ought to be the more bold and faithful in opposition to them. Hardened sinners will indeed hate them for dealing faithfully with their conscience, but God will stand by them, when he gives up the lovers of flattery to be imposed on by it to their own ruin; and multitudes of evil spirits are always awaiting his permission to delude into destruction their own most hearty votaries. Faithful ministers are commonly rewarded with persecution and abuse: and none are more bitter enemies than the teachers of lies. But God will quickly vindicate his servants in accomplishing the threatenings which they have denounced. Such as are guileless themselves are unsuspicious of others: but wicked men, to compass their own ends, will not stick to betray their best friends. And indeed, when the godly are out of the way of their duty, they need not wonder that they fall into mischief. But if they cry unto the Lord, they will find him a present help in the time of trouble. When the hour of men is come, there is no avoiding their destiny. By events, which to us are purely accidental, God will execute his purpose and accomplish his word. No character on earth, except Christ's, is perfectly spotless. Even good men are apt to indulge long rooted customs of sinning. But how unwise is it for them to cultivate familiarity with the wicked, even after they have smarted for it! and it is a mercy if repeated strokes make them amend their error at the last.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE FIRST BOOK OF KINGS.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. King David was old.—He was now about his 69th year. For he came to the throne at thirty, and reigned forty years; which extended to about a year after this period. He died therefore at an age, comparatively young. But his fatigues in eluding Saul, during his exile amongst the Philistines, his various harassing campaigns; but above all, his family afflictions, might well bring on a premature old age, and wear out the most vigorous constitution.——Ver. 5. Adonijah the son of Haggith exalted himself.—The sons of David in order, were Amnon, slain by Absalom; Chileab, of whom there is no subsequent mention; Absalom, slain by Joab; and next Adonijah, who, as eldest, might now claim the throne, by right of orderly succession.——Ver. 6. His mother bare him after Absalom.—Absalom's mother was Maacah, Adonijah's Haggith, (2 Sam. 3. 3, 4.), the words therefore mean that Haggith bare Adonijah after Maacah had born Absalom.

CHAP. III. Ver. 1. Solomon made affinity with Pharaoh.—Amongst the religious aberrations into which Solomon, through temptation of his wives, afterwards fell, no mention is made of the superstitions and idolatries of Egypt, (1 Kin. 11. 1—5.), it is not improbable, therefore, that this daughter of Pharaoh may have been, at the time of her marriage, a proselyte to the Jewish religion. This alliance forms a striking example of the progress of events. The descendant of an Egyptian slave, is now the son-in-law of the Egyptian king. Truly, neither pride nor despair were made for man. "The rich and the poor meet together," the Lord is the maker of them all.——Ver. 3. He sacrificed and burnt incense in high places.—All sacrifices in high places were prohibited, (Lev. 26. 30.) unless where the tabernacle of the Lord was located. The occasional exceptions in the cases of Samuel and others, are only to be accounted for, on the principle of necessity and mercy, which alone, as the spirit, can warrant any deviation from the letter of the law, Mat. 12. 4. In the case of Solomon, such sacrificing is charged as a drawback upon his love, and we see from the history, how it afterwards became a snare.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 11. The daughter of Solomon to wife.—Not signifying that he had her to wife when Solomon came to the throne—for Solomon was then too young to have a marriageable daughter—but, who had her to wife before the time when the history was written. But, if this be not admitted, she may, according to Eastern custom, have been betrothed at an early age.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. Began to build the house of the Lord.—Chronologists differ widely respecting this most important epoch, ranging from 330 to 680, but no good reason seems assigned by any for questioning the correctness of the Hebrew text.——Ver. 2. The height thereof thirty cubits.—That is, the height of the body of the house; for, from 2 Chr. 3. 4, it appears that the height of the porch was 120 cubits, or 180 feet. The Codex Alexandrinus of the Septuagint, makes it but 30 cubits, equal to the rest of the building; but there seems no reason whatever to question the existence of the noble tower implied in the Hebrew text.——Ver. 7. There was neither hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron, heard.—The hammer is for breaking, the axe for hewing, but neither were used in building the temple, though both in preparing the materials. Even so, the law and the prophets serve to break in pieces and to slay, but the work of the Spirit in regeneration is merely to build up believers in noiseless peace.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 8. Like unto this porch.—It is difficult, perhaps impossible, for those accustomed to European ideas of architecture, to form any very accurate conception of Solomon's building. According to the still subsisting arrangements of Eastern palaces, it seems to have consisted of three principal departments: a court of justice, with the necessary public offices, (ver. 7.); a court for Solomon and his male attendants, including officers of state and servants, (ver. 8.); and a court for Pharaoh's daughter, and her ladies and servants. The whole is an emblem of the church, the true Solomon's house, with its "thrones of judgment" for the consciences of men, and its residence for the Gentiles whom he has espoused.——Ver. 47. Neither was the weight of the brass found out.—Christ came not to judge and condemn, but to save. But he will come, and every soul shall be judged as if weighed in the balance of the sanctuary.——Ver. 51. Solomon made for the house of the Lord.—Solomon, as a type of Christ, makes "all things new,"—the vessels of Moses, the representative of the law, being now "waxed old, and ready to vanish away," Rev. 21. 5. Heb. 8. 13.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 2. All the men of Israel assembled themselves unto king Solomon.—The building of the temple was finished in the 8th month, (ch. 6. 38.) and, therefore, there were eleven months till the dedication. This time would naturally be employed, in ordering the vessels and other furniture of the interior, and, as Usher supposes, that the dedication might correspond to the jubilee, and the 14 days, (ver. 65.) included the dedication, expiation, and feast of tabernacles.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 1. When Solomon had finished the building of the house of the Lord, and the king's house.—It is recorded that "the king's house" was not finished till thirteen years after the finishing of the temple, (ch. 7. 1.); are we therefore to conclude, that the temple was not dedicated till after the secular works had been completed? We think not. We hold, with Usher, that the dedication took place eleven months after the building had been finished, ch. 8. 2.—Note. There is something peculiarly appropriate in God's appearing immediately after Solomon had finished his own house; for, if ever there be a time when any man specially needs an admonition, it is when he has completed for himself a dwelling place, and, like the monarch of Babylon, is ready to say, "Is not this great Babylon which I have built?" Dan. 4. 30. And, that wise men need this admonition as well as others, the history of Solomon must testify.——Ver. 28. Ophir.—The precise situation of this country is mere matter of conjecture. Some suppose it to be India; others, Africa, opposite Madagascar; others, the island of Ceylon; and some, southern Arabia; some, the coast of Guinea; some, Carthage; others, Armenia; and some have suggested America. That it lay at a great distance is the only point that seems certain, as the fleet took three years for the voyage, ch. x. 22. 2 Chr. 9. 21.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 3. His wives turned away his heart.—Hitherto we have viewed Solomon as the sun in his splendour, now we must view him sadly clouded and eclipsed. Blessed with unexampled and uninterrupted prosperity, he forgets the God who gave it, breaks his law in principle, (comp. Ex. 34. 16. Deut. 7. 3. with ver. 1.) and in the letter, (comp. Deut. 17. 17. with ver. 3.), and forfeits all his character for wisdom by the lowest act of human folly, building temples for idols, and patronizing, if not joining in, their abominable worship, ver. 7, 8.—Note. His falling away is certain, (ver. 4.); God's displeasure revealed, (ver. 9.); of his repentance nothing is said—a silence that speaks volumes of warning to backsliders who have "forgotten their first love." One ray of hope arises from the reservation in the word "fully," (ver. 6.); and the favourable reference to his name by our blessed Redeemer, Mat. 12. 42.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 5. Depart yet for three days, then come again to me.—The man who requires advice before he can decide upon redressing a grievance and showing mercy, is not likely to take good advice when given, and so it was with Rehoboam.——Ver. 28. Made two calves of gold.—The worship of the bull was the chief idolatry of Egypt, where Jeroboam was educated, and a form that Israel was known to be ready to receive, Ex. 32. 4.—Note. He that commits a sin once, is always in danger of being tempted specially to the same sin again.——Ver. 33. Devised of his own heart.—The sin of Cain—not in the offering, which here was a proper sacrifice—but in the principle, a sacrifice in object, place, time, and priesthood, the device of the worshipper's own heart.—Note. God will be worshipped, but in the manner of his own order. "No man cometh to the Father, but by the Son," John 14. 6.

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 28. The lion had not eaten the carcass, nor torn the ass.—The forbearance of the lion, and what may justly be considered either the courage or affection of the ass, made the animals themselves witnesses against the idolatry that had changed the glory of God into the likeness of four-footed beasts.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 2. Disguise thyself, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam.—Jeroboam had openly renounced the Mosaic institutions, by violating the first principles of the decalogue, and yet, in his time of need, he has recourse to a prophet of the Lord. This inconsistency is to be accounted for in three ways. (1) The idea of local gods, common to all idolaters. (2) The admission of superiority in one over another, in oracular responses. (3) The readiness of wicked men to acknowledge the true God, in times of trouble, whom they had forgotten in their day of prosperity.——Ver. 25. Shishak king of Egypt.—See note on ch. 11. 40. Besides what is there stated, it is worthy of remark, that, amongst the sculptures is one representing thirty conquered nations at the feet of the conqueror, and one of these inscribed "Jouda-ha-Melek," the king of Judah, or the Jews.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 6. Rehoboam.—Some translations and MSS. read Abijam. But, instead of gratuitously pronouncing it the mistake of a transcriber, may we not as well conclude that Abijam was also called Rehoboam, but that the name was generally dropped for sake of distinction?

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 33. Ahab made a grove.—When a grove is said to be planted or cut down, there is no difficulty in the interpretation; but, when the word occurs as in 2 Kin. 21. 7. & 23. 6, it must be understood of an image, such as was ordinarily worshipped by the heathen in a grove.——Ver. 34. He laid the foundation thereof in Abiram his first-born, &c.—This grievous family judgment is noted at the distance of 800 years from the utterance of the prediction. Let believers remember in adversity, that "the Lord is not slack concerning his promise;" but let sinners recollect, that "though sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily," the judgment is but deferred, and not laid aside.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 6. Ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning.—There was a rock called "Oreb," (Judg. 7. 25.) and there may have been a village of the same name, whose inhabitants secretly supplied the prophet; and the same word may be translated "ravens," or as it would be in English, "people of Ravenstown." But against this interpretation (1) we have—no mean authority—nearly all translations. (2) If any people brought food, they could have brought water, see ver. 7. (3) Hence we conclude he was literally supplied by ravens carrying away the flesh and bread dedicated in the groves to heathen idols. Thus the worship of the false, ministers to the prophet of the true God.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 21. If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him.—The heathen are sometimes praised by infidels and semi-infidels for their toleration, a praise which Ahab and Jezebel have badly earned; see ver. 12, 13. The fact is, heathenism was never tolerant, but it readily amalgamated the worship of various gods, and, in this way, and in this only, was tolerant to those who could degrade the worship of Jehovah, by joining it with idols; a junction which the prophet publicly denounces.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 12. After the fire a still small voice.—A realized parable intended to teach (1) That wind, earthquake, and fire—the most terrible agents of destruction—are all in the hand of God. (2) That as "the kingdom of heaven cometh not with observation," it was not by these terrible powers God intended to work, but by a "still small voice," audible only to the attentive listener, Is. 55. 3.——Ver. 18. Have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him.—The heathen kissed several of their idols, either by touching them with the right hand, (Plin. lib. 28. c. 2.), or by actually saluting them with the lips, (Cic. in Verrem). A similar practice has been transferred into those superstitious forms of Christianity where the images of saints have displaced the ancient idols, and set up modern idolatry.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 29. I will not bring the evil in his days.—God had said, (ver. 21.) "I will bring evil upon thee." How does he now transfer it to his posterity? He did bring evil upon him by his threatening the excision of his house; but lays upon him no more than the certain anticipation, and on his impenitent son the dreadful reality.

CHAP. XXII. Ver. 6. The Lord shall deliver it into the hand of the king.—Their reply is, in the Hebrew, not JEHOVAH but ADONAI, a word which would not offend Jehoshaphat as Baal would, but which enables them to avoid honouring Jehovah, the true God.—Note. Equivocal expressions are amongst the surest marks of heresy, whereas it ever stands self-condemned by avoiding to discover its real meaning, Tit. 3. 11.——Ver. 22. Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also.—This relation is either a parable or vision, representing, as by a picture, more vividly than by words, the utter falsehood of Ahab's prophets. No one ever mistakes a parable for a literal fact, or accuses the narrator of untruth; and infidels only stultify themselves when they accuse the Bible, by applying a rule that, in no other case, is ever, for a moment, applied.

THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS.

THE Second Book of Kings is but a continuation of the former, from the death of Ahab to the death of Jehoiachin, which is about three hundred and forty years. The principal events recorded are, (1) The miracles of Elijah and Elisha; i—vii, xiii. (2) The destruction of the family of Ahab by Jehu; viii—x. (3) The misery of Israel under Jehu and Jehoahaz, from the oppressions of the Syrians, and their restoration by Joash and Jeroboam; xiii, xiv; and, in fine, their civil wars, harassment and captivity by the Assyrians; xv, xvii. (4) The history of Judah under fifteen kings; of whom Jehoram, Ahaz, Manasseh, and Amon, were most wicked, and Hezekiah and Josiah most pious and reforming; and, in fine, of their harassment and captivity by the Chaldeans; viii—xxv.

2 And Ahaziah fell down through a lattice in his upper chamber that was in Samaria, and was [b] sick: and he sent messengers, and said unto them, Go, inquire of [c] Baal-zebub, the god of [d] Ekron, whether I shall recover of this disease.

3 But the angel of the LORD said to [e] Elijah the Tishbite, Arise, go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and say unto them, [f] Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that ye go to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron?

4 Now therefore thus saith the LORD, [†] Thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, [g] but shalt surely die. And Elijah departed.

5 ¶ And when the messengers turned back unto him, he said unto them, Why are ye now turned back?

6 And they said unto him, There came a man up to meet us, and said unto us, Go, turn again unto the king that sent you, and say unto him, Thus saith the LORD, [h] Is it not because there is not a God in Israel, that thou sendest to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down from that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

7 And he said unto them, [i] What manner of man was he which came up to meet you, and told you these words?

8 And they answered him, He was an [k] hairy man,* and girt with a girdle of leather about his loins. And he said, It is Elijah the Tishbite.

9 Then the king [1] sent unto him a captain of fifty with his fifty: and he went up to him: (and, behold, he sat [m] on the top of an hill:) and he spake unto him, [n] Thou man of God, [*] the king hath said, Come down.

10 And Elijah answered and said to the captain of fifty, If I be a man of God, then [o] let fire come down from heaven, [†] and consume thee and thy fifty. And there came down fire from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

11 [p] Again also he sent unto him another captain of fifty with his fifty: and he [q] answered and said unto him, O man of God, thus hath the king said, Come down quickly.

12 And Elijah answered and said unto them, [r] If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and consume thee and thy fifty. And the fire of God came down from heaven, and consumed him and his fifty.

13 ¶ And he sent [s] again a captain of the third fifty with his fifty: and the third captain of fifty went up, and came and [t] fell on his knees before Elijah, and besought him, and said unto him, [u] O man of God, I pray thee, let my life, and the life of these fifty thy servants, be precious in thy sight.

14 Behold, there came fire down from heaven, and burnt up the two captains of the former fifties with their fifties: therefore let my life now be precious in thy sight.

15 And the angel of the LORD said unto Elijah, Go down with him; [x] be not afraid of him. And he arose, and went down with him unto the king.

16 And he said unto him, [y] Thus saith the LORD, Forasmuch as thou hast sent messengers to inquire of Baal-zebub the god of Ekron, (is it not because there is no God in Israel to inquire of his word?) therefore thou shalt not come down off that bed on which thou art gone up, but shalt surely die.

17 ¶ So he died, according to the word of the LORD which Elijah had spoken: and [z] Jehoram reigned in his stead, in the second year of Jehoram [‡] the son of Jehoshaphat king of Judah; because he [§] had no son.

AND it came to pass, when the LORD would [a] take up Elijah into heaven [*] by a whirlwind, that Elijah went [b] with Elisha from [c] Gilgal.

2 And Elijah said unto Elisha, [d] Tarry here, I pray thee; [†] for the LORD hath sent me to Beth-el. And Elisha said unto him, [e] As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, [f] I will not leave thee. So they went down to [g] Beth-el.

3 And the [h] sons of the prophets that were at Beth-el came forth to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master [i] from thy head to-day? And he said, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

4 And Elijah said unto him, Elisha, tarry here, I pray thee; for the LORD hath sent me to [k] Jericho. [‡] And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. So they came to Jericho.

5 And the sons of the prophets that were at Jericho came to Elisha, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the LORD will take away thy master from thy head to-day? And he answered, Yea, I know it; hold ye your peace.

6 And Elijah said unto him, [l] Tarry, I pray thee, here; for the LORD hath sent me to Jordan. And he said, As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And they two went on.

7 And fifty men of the sons of the prophets went, and stood [m] to view afar off: and they two stood by Jordan.

8 And Elijah took [n] his mantle, and wrapped it together, and smote the waters, and they were [o] divided hither and thither; so that they two went over on dry ground.

9 ¶ And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, [p] Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a [q] double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

10 And he said, [‖] Thou hast asked a hard thing: [*] nevertheless, if thou [r] see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so. [†]

11 And it came to pass, as they still went on and talked, that, behold, there appeared [s] a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

12 ¶ And Elisha saw it; and he cried, [t] My father, my father! the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof. [‡] And he [u] saw him no more:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—If we apostatize from God we need not wonder that our inferiors revolt from, or rebel against us. Death often apprehends men when and where they least expected it. And much more ready are men curiously to inquire when they shall die, than to prepare for a happy death. Many choose rather to risk their expense and toil, nay their damnation, in consulting the devil, than to consult God freely, to their present and eternal advantage. Persecutors and mockers of God's faithful prophets and messengers shall not escape unpunished. Such as have turned aside to idolatry, even after miraculous demonstrations of the wickedness of it, richly deserve death for their punishment: and if they will harden their heart against the terrors of God, it is just that their destruction be uncommonly terrible. The way to prevail with God, is not to insult him, but humbly to bow before him; and the sufferings of others should be our warning. God can endow his servants with such honourable boldness, that captains and kings look contemptible before them. And those who consult the devil, if superabounding mercy prevent not, may expect soon to have their lodging with him in hell.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—What honour God delights to put upon his faithful servants! The least of them shall lack nothing of Elijah's happiness, but that they must lodge a little in the grave on their way to the perfect felicity above. Faithful saints have the good of the rising generation much on their heart; and we should make the most of their conversation while we can have it. It is very distressing, though hopeful, to part with dear friends, high in favour with God. And how easy and majestic is their composed retirement to the heavenly state, even in their passage through Jordans of trouble and of death! The removal of such is indeed a great loss to churches and nations, especially if iniquity be come to a great height. But when God removes one eminent servant, he can raise up another equally endowed with the Holy Ghost. And when an animating pattern, a powerful prayer of faith, and the distinguished presence of God, concur, there is great ground of hope. They whom God honours ought to be honoured; and the strong must bear with the infirmities of the weak. A people ought to make all the profitable improvement of their ministers they can while they have them: for what bitterness, barrenness, and death, can God cure by their gospel ministrations! They often bring, even to accursed places, the most distinguished mercies where Providence orders their lot. But how terrible are the consequences of idolatry, and of careless education of children! For parents are often punished for their neglect, or bad example, in the loss, the wretchedness, or ruin, of their seed.

But stop, thou ascending Elijah, till, in thy character and work, I contemplate the glories of my Redeemer. His call to his mediatorial office was solemn; and was remarkably confirmed by miracles of mercy and judgment. His condition on earth was mean, afflicted, and persecuted. His holy zeal was ardent; his rebukes pungent; his denunciations of wrath terrible and effective: his prayers for mercy to his friends, or destruction to his foes, were always prevalent; his fast was long and afflicting; his great sacrifice was inflamed by infinite and unquenchable love from within, and by infinite wrath from above: and by means of it he showed the Lord to be God, restored the true worship of God in the world, and made the unclean spirits and false prophets to pass out of the land. By him kings are appointed to death or dominion; and prophets, apostles, and ministers, called to, and furnished for, their office. In high sovereignty he removed his ordinances from the Jews, that he might dwell with raven-like publicans and sinners; dwell with long-widowed Gentiles, and restore to life their children, dead in trespasses and sins. Baptized in Jordan, and travelling through trouble and death, he of Judah, and the king of Edom; and they fetched a compass of seven days' journey: and there was no water for the host, and for the cattle [m] that followed them.

10 And the king of Israel said, [n] Alas, that the LORD hath called* these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab!

11 But Jehoshaphat said, [o] Is there not here a prophet of the LORD, that we may inquire of the LORD by him? And one of the king of Israel's servants answered and said, Here is Elisha the son of Shaphat, which [p] poured water on the hands of Elijah.

12 And Jehoshaphat said, [q] The word of the LORD is with him. So the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat, and the king of Edom, [r] went down to him.

13 And Elisha said unto the king of Israel, [s] What have I to do with thee? get thee to the prophets of thy father, and to the prophets of thy mother. And the king of Israel said unto him, Nay; [t] for the LORD hath called these three kings together, to deliver them into the hand of Moab.†

14 And Elisha said, [u] As the LORD of hosts liveth, before whom I stand, surely, were it not [x] that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee, nor see thee.

15 But now [y] bring me a minstrel.‡ And it came to pass, when the minstrel played, that the [z] hand of the LORD came upon him.

16 And he said, Thus saith the LORD, [a] Make this valley full of ditches:

17 For thus saith the LORD, [b] Ye shall not see wind,§ neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water, that ye may drink, both ye, and your cattle, and your beasts.

18 And this [c] is but a light thing in the sight of the LORD: he will deliver the Moabites also into your hand.

19 And ye shall [d] smite every fenced city, and every choice city, and shall fell every good tree,‖ and stop all wells of water, and [e] mar every good piece of land with stones.

20 ¶ And it came to pass in the morning, [f] when the meat-offering was offered, that, behold, there came water by the way of Edom, and the country [f] was filled with water.†

21 And when all the Moabites heard that the kings were come up to fight against them, they [g] gathered all that were able to [h] put on armour, and upward, and stood in the border.

22 And they rose up early in the morning, and the sun shone upon the water, and the Moabites saw the water on the other side as red as blood:‡

23 And they said, This is blood: the kings are surely [i] slain, and they have smitten one another: now therefore, Moab, to the spoil.

24 And when they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them: but [k] they went forward smiting the Moabites, even in their country.

25 [l] And they beat down the cities, and on every good piece of land cast every man his stone, and filled it; and they stopped all the wells of water,* and felled all the good trees: [h] only in Kir-haraseth left they the stones thereof; howbeit the slingers went about it, and smote it.

26 ¶ And when the king of Moab saw that the battle was too sore for him, he took with him seven hundred men that drew swords, to break through even unto the king of Edom: but they could not.

27 Then he took [i] his eldest son, that should have reigned in his stead, and offered him for a burnt-offering upon the wall. And there was great indignation against Israel:† and they [k] departed from him, and returned to their own land.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—To be better than monsters in crimes is no evidence of real goodness: and a partial reformation is often made without real conversion. To forbear the sins which we no longer love, while we cleave to those which are more pleasing and profitable, shows the insincerity of our pretended repentance. Sinners prefer the recovery of outward losses to all the advantages of real godliness; and they readily court the friendship of such saints as are remarkably prosperous in outward things. Rash counsels generally drive men into great straits; and these into murmuring against the providence of God. And, if we keep company with sinners, we are in danger of smarting under their rod. Afflictions often drive those to God who in their prosperity neglected him. His mercies are not only beyond our desert, but beyond our expectation; and others fare the better for their connections with his people: for he will not leave his own who cry unto him: even in the straits into which their folly has plunged them. What a remarkable blessing are pious commanders and faithful ministers to armies! and the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. How composed 21 And she went up, and laid him [e] on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.

22 And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may [f] run to the man of God, and come again.

23 And he said, Wherefore wilt thou go to him to-day? it is neither [g] new-moon, nor sabbath. And she said, It shall be [h] well.[*]

24 Then she [i] saddled an ass, and said to her servant, Drive, and go forward; [k] slack not thy riding for me, except I bid thee.

25 So she went, and came unto the man of God [l] to mount Carmel. And it came to pass, when the man of God saw her afar off, that he said to Gehazi his servant, Behold, yonder is that Shunammite:

26 [m] Run now, I pray thee, to meet her, and say unto her, Is it well with thee? is it well with thy husband? is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well.

27 And when she came to the man of God to the hill, she caught [n] him by the feet:[†] but Gehazi came near to [o] thrust her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is [p] vexed within her: and the LORD hath [q] hid it from me, and hath not told me.[‡]

28 Then she said, [r] Did I desire a son of my lord? did I not say, Do not deceive me?

29 Then he said to Gehazi, [s] Gird up thy loins,[§] and take [t] my staff in thine hand, and go thy way: if thou meet any man, [u] salute him not; and if any salute thee, answer him not again:[‖] and lay my staff upon the face of the child.

30 And the mother of the child said, [x] As the LORD liveth, and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her.

31 And Gehazi passed on before them, and laid the staff upon the face of the child; but [y] there was neither voice, nor [*] hearing:[†] wherefore he went again to meet him, and told him, saying, The child is not awaked.[‡]

32 And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed.

33 He went in therefore, [z] and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the LORD.

34 And he went up, and [a] lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands; and he stretched himself upon the child, and the flesh of the child waxed warm.

ought our minds to be in all our approaches to God! and never must we expect a gracious answer to our requests, but only through Jesus' offering of himself a sacrifice for sins. How strangely men fancy what they wish! for God often infatuates those whom he intends to destroy, and makes them to rush headlong upon their own destruction. What inhuman and bloody courses will people take to procure the favour of their idol, or to mark themselves desperately obstinate.

35 Then he returned, and [b] walked in the house [*] to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the [c] child sneezed seven times,[†] and the child opened his eyes.

36 And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her: and, when she was come in unto him, he said, [d] Take up thy son.

37 Then she went in, and [e] fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and [f] took up her son, and went out.

38 ¶ And Elisha [g] came again to Gilgal:[‡] and there was a [h] dearth in the land; and the [i] sons of the prophets were [k] sitting before him: and he said unto his servant, Set on the great pot, and seethe pottage for the sons of the prophets.

39 And one went out into the field to gather herbs, and found a wild vine, and gathered thereof wild gourds[§] his lapfull, and came and shred them into the pot of pottage: for they [l] knew them not.

40 So they poured out for the men to eat: and it came to pass, as they were eating of the pottage, that they cried out, and said, O [m] thou man of God, there [n] is death in the pot: and they could not eat thereof.

41 But he said, Then bring meal: and he [o] cast it into the pot; and he said, Pour out for the people, that they may eat: and there was [‖] no harm in the pot.*

42 ¶ And there came a man from [p] Baal-shalisha, and [q] brought the man of God bread of the first-fruits, twenty loaves of barley, and full ears of corn [†] in the husk thereof: and he said, Give unto the people, that they may eat.

43 And his servitor said, What! [r] should I set this before an hundred men? He said again, Give the people, that they may eat: for thus saith the LORD, [s] They shall eat, and shall leave thereof.

44 So he set it before them, and they did eat, and left thereof, according to the word of the LORD.

(1) Elisha cures Naaman the Syrian's leprosy, ordering him to wash seven times in Jordan: 1—14. (2) Naaman's grateful acknowledgments to Elisha, and resolutions to serve the true God: 15—19. (3) He inflicts the leprosy upon Gehazi, his own servant, and entails it on his seed: 26, 27.

A. M. 3110. B. C. 894.

NOW [a] Naaman, captain of the host of the king of Syria, was a [b] great man [*] with his master, and [†] [‡] honourable, because by him the LORD had given [c] deliverance unto Syria: he was also a mighty man in valour; [§] but he was [d] a leper.

2 And the Syrians had gone out [] by companies,[‖] and had brought away captive out of the land of Israel a little maid; and she [] [e] waited on Naaman's wife.

3 And she [f] said unto her mistress, Would God my lord were [†] [h] with the prophet that is in Samaria! for he would [i] recover him of his leprosy.

4 And one[‡] went in, and told his lord, saying, Thus and thus said the [k] maid that is of the land of Israel.

5 And the king of Syria said, Go to, go, and I will send a letter unto the king of Israel. And he departed, and [l] took [§] with him [‖] ten talents of silver, and six thousand pieces of gold, and [m] ten changes of raiment.

6 And he brought the letter to the king of Israel, saying, Now when this letter is come unto thee, behold, I have therewith sent Naaman my servant to thee, that thou mayest recover him of his leprosy.*

7 And it came to pass, when the king of Israel had read the letter, that he rent his clothes, and said, [n] Am I God, to kill and to make alive, that this man doth send unto me to recover a man of his leprosy? wherefore consider, I pray you, and [o] see how he seeketh a quarrel against me.

8 ¶ And it was so, when Elisha the man of God had heard that the king of Israel had [p] rent his clothes, that he sent to the king, saying, Wherefore hast thou rent thy clothes? let him come now to me, and he shall [q] know that there is a prophet in Israel.

9 So Naaman came with his horses and with his chariot, and [r] stood at the door of the house of Elisha.

10 And Elisha [s] sent a messenger unto him, saying, Go and [t] wash in Jordan seven times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee, and thou shalt be clean.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Parents ought carefully to avoid dying in debt, as it may render their children miserable. Yet, when persons are involved in debt, not by their own rashness, prodigality, or sloth, but by the afflicting providence of God, they deserve our pity, not our censure. Unforeseen providences may involve the most honest man in debts which he cannot pay. And how grievous is it (though not unjust) when Providence obliges a faithful minister to die indebted to rigid creditors! But, if Providence distress a good man, it will also relieve him. Let husbands then fear God, and he will take care of their widows and children. Let poor distressed widows and fatherless children cast all their care upon him: he is ready to relieve them in the most destitute case. And, if we wish or expect God to do for us, we must do all that is in our own power. It is only in our diligent endeavours that we can rightly expect his blessing: and then let us believe, and we shall quickly find, that God is more ready to give than we are to receive. To our utmost let us endeavour to clear our debts, though what remains should prove a very scanty livelihood: for nothing is properly our own till this be done. Acquaintance and friendship with God's servants is a principal ornament of the great: and happy are those families where both heads agree in it. Happy and wise those rich persons who desire no advancement. And nothing is more comely, than for those who receive favours to be earnest in expressing their gratitude: but effectual fervent prayers are the best returns that we can make. How welcome and dear are children to such as have long wanted them! and yet how quickly they may be lost! We need always to stand ready for a sudden stroke. Death often seizes at a short warning. But in every affliction the view of God's hand should silence us. If he who gives takes away, we are called to be thankful for the length of the loan; and not to murmur that God resumes his gift. And we have need to be careful attendants on the ordinances of God, and to secure abiding comforts there, since the joys of earth so ebb and flow, and are but born and die. What sympathy do tender mothers, bereaved of their children, need at our hand! But the effectual fervent prayers of faith are prevalent even over death; for in his sovereign authority God kills and makes alive. Such as God sends to awaken dead sinners had need to be men of prayer and patience. Prophets should be content with common fare;—examples of and said, Behold, *† I thought, He will surely come out to me, and stand, and call on the name of the LORD his God, and ‡ strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper.

12 Are not § Abana and Pharpar, ‖ rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean? So he turned, and [x] went away in a rage.

13 And his servants came near, and spake unto him, and said, [y] My father, if the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it? how much rather then, when he saith to thee, Wash, and be clean?

14 Then [z] went he down, and dipped himself seven times in Jordan, according to the saying of the man of God: and his flesh came again like unto the flesh of a little child, and he was clean.

15 ¶ And he [a] returned to the man of God, he and all his company, and came and stood before him: and he said, Behold, [b] now I know that there is no God in all the earth but in Israel; now therefore, I pray thee, take [c] a blessing * of thy servant.

16 But he said, [d] As the LORD liveth, before whom I stand, I * will receive none. And he urged him to take it; but he refused.

17 And Naaman said, Shall there not then, I pray thee, be given to thy servant two mules' burden of earth? † for thy servant [f] will henceforth offer neither burnt-offering nor sacrifice unto other gods, but unto the LORD.

18 In this thing the LORD pardon thy servant, that when my master goeth into the house of Rimmon to worship there, and he leaneth on my hand, and ‡ I bow § myself in the house of Rimmon: when I bow down myself in the house of Rimmon, the LORD pardon thy servant in this thing.

19 And he said unto him, [g] Go in peace. ‖ So he departed from him [h] a little way.

20 ¶ But Gehazi, the servant of Elisha the man of God, said, Behold, my master hath spared Naaman this Syrian, in not receiving at his hands that which he brought; but, as the LORD liveth, [i] I will run after him, and take somewhat of him.

21 So Gehazi followed after Naaman: and when Naaman saw him running after him, he lighted down from the chariot to meet him, and said, [k] Is all well?

22 And he said, All is well. [l] My master hath sent me, saying, Behold, even now there be come to me from mount Ephraim two young men of the sons of the prophets: give them, I pray thee, a talent of silver, and two changes of garments.

23 And Naaman said, Be content, take two talents. And he urged him, and bound * two talents of silver in two bags, with two changes of garments, and laid them upon two of his servants; and they bare them before him.

24 And when he came to the † tower, ‡ he took them from their hand, and bestowed them in the house; and he let the men go, and they departed.

25 But he went in, and stood before his master: and Elisha said unto him, Whence comest thou, Gehazi? And he said, Thy servant went [m] no whither.

26 And he said unto him, Went [n] not mine heart with thee, when the man turned again from his chariot to meet thee? [o] Is it a time to receive money, and to receive garments, and oliveyards, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and men-servants, and maid-servants?

27 The [p] leprosy therefore of Naaman shall cleave unto thee, and unto thy seed for ever. And he went out from his presence a leper [q] as white as snow.

mortification, while they preach it to others; and they should be ready to communicate to others who are in need. But, alas! how sin has rendered our tables snares and traps, and our provision poisonous! It is of the Lord's mercies that our meat nourisheth us. And he can easily make a little coarse, or even bitter food, a plentiful and pleasant feast.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Greatness and wealth avail so little to make men happy, that they cannot preserve them from the sorest and most loathsome calamities. God can make the captivity and distress of his people an useful mean for spreading the knowledge of himself, and even out of the mouths of babes and sucklings he can perfect praise. It is a great privilege to have servants who know God, and seek the welfare of the family. Men are generally willing to try every expedient, and bestow the utmost expense and trouble, to obtain a cure of their bodily distempers: but how few regard the worth or welfare of their souls! and how readily carnal men fancy that supernatural benefits must be purchased by carnal profits! Men who are conscious of their ill deserts often tremble at every shadow, and disquiet their minds, by misinterpreting the most innocent intentions of their neighbours. But God, in mercy, oftentimes helps the wicked far beyond what they have reason to expect. And ministers ought to seize upon every opportunity of manifesting the power and grace of God: but never ought they to sully their character, by a complaisant crouching to the pride of great men. Proud spirits readily interpret the least suspected slight into an heinous affront: and the wise in their own conceit often ruin themselves by contempt of the simple dictates and ordinances of God. But O the riches of his grace, that stops our course when we forsake our own mercy! It is happy for proud and passionate masters to have servants faithful, calm, and prudent, to offer them an advice: and we see here the happy consequences of sometimes attending to it. Hopeful is our case if we once submit to God's method of relief: for by what simple means can he

5 But as one was felling a beam, the [] axe-head fell into the water: and he cried, and said, [] Alas, master![†] for it was borrowed.

6 And the man of God said, Where fell it? And he showed him the place. And he [e] cut down a stick, and cast it in thither; and the iron did swim.

7 Therefore said he, Take it up to thee. And he put out his hand, and took it.

8 ¶ Then the king of Syria warred against Israel, and [g] took counsel with his servants, saying, In such and such a place shall be my [‡] camp.[§]

9 And the man of God sent unto the king of Israel, saying, [h] Beware that thou pass not such a place; for thither the Syrians are come down.

10 And the king of Israel [i] sent to the place which the man of God told him and warned him of, and saved himself there, not once nor twice.[‖]

11 ¶ Therefore the heart of the king of Syria was [k] sore troubled for this thing; and he called his servants, and said unto them, [l] Will ye not show me which of us is for the king of Israel?

12 And one of his servants said, [*] None, my lord, O king: but [m] Elisha, the prophet that is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel the words that thou speakest [n] in thy bed-chamber.

13 And he said, Go and [o] spy where he is, that I may send and fetch him. And it was told him, saying, Behold, he is in [p] Dothan.[†]

14 Therefore sent he thither [q] horses, and chariots, and a great host: and they came by night, and [‡] compassed the city about.

15 ¶ And when the [r] servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host compassed the city, both with horses and chariots: and his servant[§] said unto him, [*] Alas, my master! how shall we do?

16 And he answered, [t] Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them.

17 And Elisha [u] prayed, and said, LORD, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the LORD opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was [x] full of horses and chariots[‖] of fire round about Elisha.

18 ¶ And when they came down to him, Elisha prayed unto the LORD, and said, Smite this people, I pray thee, with [y] blindness.[*] And he smote them with blindness, according to the word of Elisha.

19 And Elisha said unto them, [*] This is not the way, neither is this the city:[†] follow me, and I will bring you to the man whom ye seek. But he led them to Samaria.

20 And it came to pass, when they were come into Samaria, that Elisha said, LORD, open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And the LORD [z] opened their eyes, and they saw; and, behold, they were in the midst of Samaria.

21 And the king of Israel said unto Elisha, when he saw them, [a] My father, shall I smite them? shall I smite them?

22 And he answered, [b] Thou shalt not smite them: wouldest thou smite those whom thou hast taken captive with thy sword and with thy bow? Set bread and water[‡] before them, that they may eat and drink, and go to their master.

23 And he prepared great provision for them: and when they had eaten and drunk, he sent them away, and they went to their master. So the [c] bands of Syria[§] came no more into the land of Israel.

24 ¶ And it came to pass after this, that Ben-hadad king of Syria gathered [d] all his host, and went up,[‖] and besieged [e] Samaria.

25 And there was [f] a great famine in Samaria: and, behold, they besieged it, until an ass's head[*] was sold for [†] fourscore pieces of silver, and the [‡] fourth part of a cab of dove's dung for [§] five pieces of silver.

26 ¶ And as the king of Israel was passing by upon the wall, there cried a woman unto him, saying, [g] Help, my lord, O king!

27 And he said, [‖] [h] If the LORD do not help thee, whence shall I help thee? out of the barn-floor, or out of the wine-press?

28 And the king said unto her, [i] What aileth thee? And she answered, This woman said unto me, Give thy son, that we may [k] eat him to-day, and we will eat my son to-morrow.

29 So we boiled my son, and did eat him: and I said unto her on the [*] next day, Give thy son, that we may eat him:[†] and she hath hid her son.

30 ¶ And it came to pass, when the king heard the words of the woman, that he [l] rent his clothes; and he passed by upon the wall, and the people looked, and, behold, he had sackcloth within upon his flesh.[‡] effect the most wonderful deliverance! Never then let me, through the pride of my heart, reject his means of salvation, or stumble at the simplicity of a crucified Redeemer: his blood and spirit can cleanse the foulest leprosy of sin, and restore the most diseased sinner; and I am bid only to wash and be clean. Never let me wish to prescribe to him, in the paths of his providence, who can thus, by the weakest means, produce the greatest ends, and manifest his power and glory. That knowledge of God, which is obtained by such an experience of his goodness, will always be most fruitful, while holy gratitude disposes us to a careful performance of duty both towards God and men, leads us to regard the prayers of God's people, to remember past transgressions with grief, and to resolve for the future to abstain from all appearance of evil. But alas! that those, who have most and best instructions and examples, should have all lost upon them! Parents and masters cannot convert their children or servants. Covetousness tempts to lying, and almost every other evil: and one sin always leads on to another. Hope of concealment and impunity is a great encouragement to do evil. But short-lived, transitory, and bitter in the end, is prosperous wickedness: and how often men, by their covetousness and falsehood, entail plagues on themselves and their posterity!

* We learn from Josh. 11. 3, 4, that the northern nations of Canaan had multitudes of horses and chariots in the days of Joshua, and from 1 Kin. 10. 29, we discover, that an extensive transit trade in horses was carried on with them in the days of Solomon. It is further evident from the text, that notwithstanding their expulsion from Palestine, they were still in great force on the borders, probably towards the south-east, as they are mentioned in conjunction with the Egyptians. —Ed.

7 Wherefore they arose and [l] fled in the twilight, and left their tents, and their horses, and their asses, even the camp as it was, and fled for their life. [†]

8 And when these lepers came to the uttermost part of the camp, they went into one tent, and did eat and drink, and carried thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went and [m] hid it; and came again, and entered into another tent, and carried thence also, and went and hid it.

13 And one of his servants answered and said, Let some take, I pray thee, five of the horses that remain, which are left in the city, (behold, they are [*] as all the multitude of Israel that are left in it; behold, I say, they are even as all the multitude of the Israelites that are consumed,) [†] and let us send and see.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—It is comfortable to see Christ's disciples increase in the worst of times; but often his chief favourites are in very poor outward circumstances. Nor in evil times ought a minister to grudge if his own hands must minister to his necessities: but it ill becomes him to be an idle vagabond, or slothful loiterer. Things borrowed ought to be carefully preserved. And it is extremely galling to an honest or generous mind to hurt his neighbour. How restless are the enemies of God's people! But it is easy for God, who knows all things, to frustrate their counsels, by warning his servants of them; and it is salutary to attend exactly to his admonitions. On the contrary, it is mad impiety for the mightiest to attempt fighting against God and his servants. When there is at best but little faith, the mind is easily overwhelmed with consternation, and tempted to despair of divine protection. But they who are strong ought to pray for the weak, and bear with their infirmities. Clear views of God's sovereignty, power, and kindness, and of his angelic guards, can effectually remove our slavish fear of temporal calamities. How often they, who fight against God, are given up to stupidity and strong delusions; and find themselves conquered or ruined where they hoped to triumph! But, if we have our enemies at our mercy, it is best to render them good for evil, and thus soften and captivate their hearts. But no kindness will long impress a hardened and obstinate foe. And how dreadful is the scourge of a furious war! It may quickly render us destitute of our necessary food; and raging hunger may prevail against the strongest natural affections. None know what miseries await them before they die. And in our distresses, particularly those of our soul, if God be not our friend, vain is the help of man. Unhumbled sinners are apt to attribute their troubles to any cause but the real one, their sins; and to turn that revenge on the innocent which is due to their sinful self. The sole suspenders of God's judgments are often calumniated and persecuted, as if they were the guilty cause thereof: and the most useful are reckoned the very pests of society. But dreadful is the case when disappointments render men desperate with rage against God; the view of whose hand should make them resigned, and whose abundant mercy should encourage their patience and hope.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Remarkable relief is often near when there is no appearance of it. But sinners, and especially infidel courtiers, are bent to discredit and ridicule God's promises and purposes to their own ruin. Nothing more provokes God against men than an unbelieving contempt of his gifts and promises. But the terrors of God can soon make the stoutest to tremble, and to flee when no man pursueth, in order to work deliverance for his people.—Hard necessity will compel men to the most dangerous adventures; and, if God grant us relief, we ought to publish our mercies, that others may share with us in our comforts. But how terrible is their destruction who have contemned the promises of God! The means of deliverance to others prove ruinous to them. No human greatness, or favour of kings, can protect them from the arm of God; nay, nor even from being victims of popular rage. Stand in awe, my soul; always believe that it shall be unto thee as God hath said: for is there any thing too hard for the Lord? In depths of distress cast thyself on his mercy. None perish that ‖ Ahaziah (2 Chr. 22. 2.) begins to reign at 42; and as Jehoram appears from ver. 17. to have lived but 40 years, this would seem to make the son two years older than his father. MSS. and translations are adduced accordingly, to pronounce the 42 incorrect. But may not the discrepancy be reconciled thus:—(1) Jehoram was 32 when he began to reign as co-regent with Jehoshaphat, who reigned 25 years. If co-regent during 20 years, and then sole monarch for 8, he died not at 40 but 60. (2) Suppose Ahaziah admitted to the co-regency at 22, (2 Kin. 8. 25.), and to continue in that office 20 years, he comes to the sole monarchy at 42. (2 Chr. 22. 2.), in which he reigns one year. The co-regency was early adopted by David to secure the succession to Solomon; and one emperor, and two Cæsars were sometimes judged necessary to secure the tranquillity of Rome. —ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—How severely God corrects apostate professors. His providences make us sometimes glad to leave the most commodious settlement on earth. And how ready are most to take advantage against, and to seize on, the property of the absent or distressed! But it is a mercy if we have magistrates to whom we may safely appeal from the injustice of friends or neighbours. God in his providence remarkably connects things for the welfare of those who fear him, and have shown kindness to his servants. He can raise up friends in our difficulties where we least expected them. And it is the glory of a government to administer justice impartially to the oppressed. Diseases and death, without ceremony, attack the most great and powerful: and affliction often changes men's minds, and makes them to regard ministers and prayers, which they had formerly contemned and hated. But, ah! the bloody and barbarous rage of war! Enraged saying, Thus saith the LORD, I have anointed thee king over Israel.

13 Then they hasted, and took every man his garment,[a] and put it [p] under him on the top of the stairs,[†] and [q] blew with trumpets, saying, Jehu [‡] is king.

14 So Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, [r] conspired against Joram: (now Joram had [§] kept Ramoth-gilead,[s] he and all Israel, because of Hazael king of Syria:

15 But [t] king [‖] Joram was returned to be healed in Jezreel of the wounds which the Syrians had given him, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria:) and Jehu said, If it be your minds, then [u] let none go forth nor escape out of the city, to go to tell it in Jezreel.

16 ¶ So Jehu rode in a chariot, and went to Jezreel; (for Joram lay there:) and [x] Ahaziah king of Judah was come down to see Joram.

17 And there stood [y] a watchman on the tower in Jezreel, and he spied the company of Jehu as he came, and said, I see a company. And Joram said, Take an horseman, and send to meet them, and let him say, Is it peace?

18 So there went one on horseback to meet him, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu said, [†] What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me. And the watchman told, saying, The messenger came to them, but he cometh not again.

19 Then he sent out a second on horseback, which came to them, and said, Thus saith the king, Is it peace? And Jehu answered, What hast thou to do with peace? turn thee behind me.

20 And the watchman told, saying, He came even unto them, and cometh not again: and the [‡] driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; for he driveth [§] furiously.[‖]

21 And Joram said, [*] Make ready. And his chariot was made ready. And Joram king of Israel, and Ahaziah king of Judah, went out, each in his chariot, and they went out against Jehu, and [†] met him [a] in the portion of Naboth the Jezreelite.

22 And it came to pass, when Joram saw Jehu, that he said, [b] Is it peace, Jehu? And he answered, What peace, so long as the [c] whoredoms of thy mother Jezebel and her witchcrafts[‡] are so many?

23 And Joram [d] turned his hands, and fled, and said to Ahaziah, There is treachery, O Ahaziah.

24 And Jehu [§] drew a bow with his full strength, [e] and smote Jehoram between his arms, and the arrow went out at his heart, and he [*] sunk down in his chariot.

25 Then said Jehu to Bidkar his captain, Take up, and cast him in the portion of the field of Naboth the Jezreelite: for remember how that, when I and thou rode together after Ahab his father, [f] the LORD laid this burden upon him;[†]

26 Surely I have seen yesterday the [‡] blood of Naboth, and the blood of his [§] sons,[‖] saith the LORD; and I will requite thee in this [‖] plat, saith the LORD. Now therefore take and cast him into the plat of ground, according to the word of the LORD.

27 ¶ But when [h] Ahaziah the king of Judah saw this, he fled by the way of the garden-house: and Jehu followed after him, and said, Smite him also in the chariot. And they did so at the going up to Gur, which is by [i] Ibleam: and he [k] fled to Megiddo, and died there.

28 And his [l] servants carried him in a chariot to Jerusalem, and buried him in his sepulchre with his fathers in the city of David.

29 And in the [m] eleventh[*] year of Joram the son of Ahab began Ahaziah to reign over Judah.

30 ¶ And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, Jezebel heard of it; and she [†n] painted her face,[‡] and tired her head, and looked out at a window.

31 And as Jehu entered in at the gate, she said, Had [o] Zimri peace, who slew his master?

32 And he lifted up his face to the window, and said, Who is on my side? who? And there looked out to him two or three [§] eunuchs.

33 And he said, Throw her down. So they threw her down: and some of her blood was sprinkled on the wall, and on the horses: and he [p] trode her under foot.

34 And when he was come in, he did eat and drink,[‖] and said, Go, see now this [q] cursed woman, and [r] bury her: for she is [s] a king's daughter.

35 And they went to bury her: but they found no more of her than the skull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands.

36 Wherefore they came again, and told him: and he said, This is the word of the LORD, which he spake [*] by his servant Elijah the Tishbite,[†] saying, [t] In the portion of Jezreel shall dogs eat the flesh of Jezebel:

37 And the carcass of Jezebel shall be as [u] dung upon the face of the field in the portion of Jezreel; so that they shall not say, This is Jezebel.

pride sticks at nothing. In high stations men will, without remorse, perpetrate what would have shocked them when in low conditions: and nothing is too horrid for the human heart left to itself, and violently tempted. Few courtiers report the naked truth to their sovereigns: and flatterers are most to be suspected for enemies. They who flatter us with hopes of life hinder our serious preparation for death. The inordinate desire of power will prompt men to villany and murder. And the sinful indulgence of children, or too early trusting them with power, and especially their unequal marriages with wicked women, entail upon families and nations the most certain misery. But death and hell infallibly meet with tyrants at last. And, alas! in their way to it, how often are the wounds of their body taken care of, while those of their soul are neglected!

AND Ahab had [a] seventy sons* in Samaria. And Jehu wrote letters, and sent to Samaria, unto [b] the rulers of Jezreel,† to the elders, and to ‡ them that brought up Ahab's children, saying,

2 Now, [c] as soon as this letter cometh to you, seeing your master's sons are with you, and there are with you chariots and horses, a fenced city also, and armour,

3 Look even out [d] the best and meetest of your master's sons, and set him on his father's throne, and fight§ for your master's house.

4 But they were exceedingly afraid, and said, Behold, [e] two kings stood not before him; how then shall we stand?

5 And he that was over the house, and he that was over the city, the elders also, and the bringers-up of the children, sent to Jehu, saying, [f] We are thy servants, and will do all that thou shalt bid us; we will not make any king: do thou that which is good in thine eyes.

6 Then he wrote a letter the second time to them, saying, If ye be ‖ mine, and if ye will hearken unto my voice, take ye [g] the heads of the men your master's sons, and come to me to Jezreel by to-morrow this time. (Now the king's sons, being seventy persons, were with the great men of the city, which brought them up.)

7 And it came to pass, when the letter came to them, that they took the king's sons, and [h] slew seventy persons, and put their heads in baskets, and sent him them to Jezreel.

8 ¶ And there came a messenger, and told him, saying, They have brought the heads of the king's sons. And he said, [i] Lay ye them in two heaps* at the entering in of the gate until the morning.

9 And it came to pass in the morning, that he went out, and stood, and said to all the people, Ye be [k] righteous:† behold, I conspired against my master, and slew him; but who slew all these?

10 Know now, [l] that there shall fall unto the earth nothing of the word of the LORD, which the LORD spake concerning the house of Ahab: for the LORD hath done that which he spake * by his servant Elijah.

11 So Jehu slew [m] all that remained of the house of Ahab in Jezreel, and all his great men, and his † kinsfolks, and [n] his priests, until he left him none remaining.

12 ¶ And he arose, and departed, and came to Samaria: and as he was at the ‡ shearing-house§ in the way,

13 Jehu ‖ met with [o] the brethren of Ahaziah king of Judah, and said, Who are ye? And they answered, We are the brethren of Ahaziah; and we go down to * salute the children of the king, and the children of the queen.

14 And he said, [p] Take them alive. And they took them alive, and slew them at the pit† of the shearing-house, even two and forty men; neither left he any of them.

15 ¶ And when he was departed thence, he ‡ lighted on [q] Jehonadab the son of Rechab coming to meet him: and he [r] saluted him, and said to him, [s] Is thine heart right, as my heart is with thy heart? And Jehonadab answered, It is. If it be, give me thine hand. And he gave him his hand; and he took him up to him into the chariot.§

16 And he said, Come with me, and see [t] my zeal for the LORD. So they made him ride in his chariot.

17 And when he came to Samaria, he slew all that remained unto Ahab in Samaria, till he had [u] destroyed him, according to the saying of the LORD, which he spake to Elijah.

18 ¶ And Jehu gathered all the people together, and said unto them, [x] Ahab served Baal a little, but Jehu shall serve him much.

19 Now therefore call unto me all [y] the prophets of Baal, all his servants, and all his priests, let none be wanting; for I have a great sacrifice to do to Baal: whosoever shall be wanting, he shall not live. But Jehu did it [z] in subtilty, to the intent that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal.

20 And Jehu said, [a] Proclaim a solemn assembly for Baal. And they proclaimed it.

21 And Jehu sent through all Israel; and all the worshippers of Baal came, so that there active, and disinterested manner, let men account them mad, or any thing they please. To what terrible lengths professors of the true religion go, before God entirely rejects them from being his people! But such as rule, ought to consider God as the source of their power, and to use it humbly for his glory. To what fearful work God sometimes appoints magistrates! and there is need of great singleness and steadiness in executing it. To ask advice from our equals or inferiors is the most effectual method to procure their consent; and matters of importance ought to be transacted with proper secrecy and despatch. Tottering is the throne of wicked kings; and terrible destruction hangs over the sinner's head! But persecutors of God's people are reckoned by him the most heinous offenders; and they who persist in their impenitence shall be rooted out at last; and companions of fools shall be destroyed along with them. Solid peace can never consist with wilful sinning, let sinners wish and expect it as they will; and whoredoms, which are now men's pleasure, will shortly issue in everlasting pain. Providence strangely connects the circumstances of men's punishment with those of their crimes and his own threatenings; and all things work for their overthrow whom he hath devoted to destruction. Themselves are made to rush on their ruin: and God's instruments of wrath may be insulted, but will not be intimidated. Wickedness and wretchedness are really inseparable, and at last meet in fearful forms. Painting and pampering do but ripen for tremendous wo. And though, for a time, sinners may lift their heads high, they will shortly be brought low in death, and still lower in hell: and not only their corpse, but their memory, shall rot and perish. And whether instruments intend it or not, the word of the Lord shall have its full accomplishment.

And they smote them with [§] the edge of the sword; and the guard and the captains cast them out, and went to the city [‖] of the house of Baal.

26 And they brought forth the [*] images out of the house of Baal, and burned them.

27 And they [f] brake down the image of Baal, and brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draught-house[†] unto this day.

28 Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel.

29 ¶ [g] Howbeit from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, Jehu departed not from after them, to wit, the golden calves that were in Beth-el, and that were in Dan.

30 And the LORD said unto Jehu, [h] Because thou hast done well in executing that which is right in mine eyes, and hast done unto the house of Ahab according to all that was in mine heart, thy children of the [i] fourth generation shall sit on the throne of Israel.[‡]

31 But Jehu [§] took no [k] heed to walk in the law of the LORD God of Israel with all his heart: for he [i] departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, which made Israel to sin.[‖]

32 ¶ In those days [*] the LORD [m] began [†] to cut Israel short:[‡] and Hazael smote them in all the coasts of Israel;

33 From Jordan [§] eastward, all [n] the land of Gilead, the Gadites, and the Reubenites, and the Manassites, from Aroer, (which is by the river Arnon,) [*] even Gilead and Bashan.

34 ¶ [o] Now the rest of the acts of Jehu, and all that he did, and all his might, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

35 And Jehu slept with his fathers;[†] and they buried him in Samaria: and Jehoahaz his son reigned in his stead.

36 And [‡] the time that Jehu reigned over Israel in Samaria was twenty and eight years.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Obstinate sinners lay up terrible judgments for themselves and their seed: and loads of guilt extirpate numerous and flourishing families. But none are more ready to imbrue their hands in the blood of a sovereign's children than those who have been his instruments in murdering the innocent. No regard to their prince will afterwards restrain those whose hands have by his order been drenched in blood. They who debauch men's consciences will find the effects of it return on their own heads. Guilt makes men spiritless cowards when brought to a trial: they will be always ready to side with the strongest: and when they want an excuse to cover their shame, any shadow of argument will stand. It is common for wicked men to lessen their guilt, by comparing it with that of others. But friendship and intimacy with sinners involves us in their punishment: and such as have been instruments in wickedness share in the ruin of their wicked encouragers. How righteous are the judgments of God, even when the executors act wickedly! But it is ill-boding when pretended reformers are proud of their work, and indulge themselves in hypocrisy and falsehood to accomplish it. They who boast of their zeal give ground to suspect their sincerity. And though the godly, whom they caress for their selfish interests, cannot but approve what is apparently good, the Lord will at last discover their hypocrisy and evil. False religion ought to be extirpated, and obstinate idolaters slain: and, if men overlook them, Jesus will at last convene them to execute his vengeance upon them. It shows the great evil of the heart when the wisdom of the serpent meets with its poison in our work; and when with severity we extirpate one form of false worship, yet cleave at the same time to another. Real converts must put away all sin without reserve. For how awful will be our state, if, when we have done good to the souls of others, we should lose our own by our negligence in the service of God! If hypocrites receive their temporary reward

9 And the captains over the hundreds did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest commanded: and they took every man his men that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that should go out on the sabbath, and came to Jehoiada the priest.

10 And to the captains over hundreds did the priest give king [m] David's spears† and shields, that were in the temple of the LORD.

16 And they laid hands on her: and she went by the way by the which the horses came into the king's house; and there [b] was she slain.

17 ¶ And Jehoiada [c] made a covenant between the LORD and the king and the people, that they should be the LORD's people; between [d] the king also and the people.‡

18 And all the people of the land [e] went into the house of Baal, and brake it down; his altars and his images brake they in pieces thoroughly, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars: and the priest appointed § officers over the house of the LORD.‖

19 And he took the rulers over hundreds, and the captains, and the guard, and all the people of the land; and they brought down the king from the house of the LORD, and came by the way of the [f] gate of the guard to the king's house: and he sat on the throne of the kings.

of good deeds on earth, how much more glorious the reward of the diligent saint! And, while God rewards men for what they do well, it is just that he should severely punish them for what they do amiss.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Mad ambition to reign steels the heart against the most natural affections: and men would be devils incarnate, were it not for the restraining grace of God. Even women would do every thing horrid to secure their unlawful power, or wreak their malice against God and his favourites. What terrible bloodshed, and ruin to a family, does the introduction of one wicked woman produce! [Comp. 2 Chron. xxi. 4. and xxii. 1. 2 Kings x. 14. and xi. 1.] But, however sinners triumph in their wickedness, their judgment lingers not; and believers shall be plucked as brands out of the burning. The promise of God shall be fulfilled, let Satan and his agents do their worst: and all the activity of sinners shall but hasten their own ruin. God shall hunt out the remains of accursed families till they be utterly destroyed; and neither wicked calumnies nor loud cries shall avail them. But what a blessing is one great man to a church and nation, when he is active, prudent, and pious! They, who first give themselves to the Lord, may comfortably hope for his blessing upon their undertakings: and civil establishments are best founded in a due care of true religion. CHAP. XIII.

(1) Jehoahaz, Jehu's son, reigns as wickedly as himself; his kingdom is almost ruined by Hazael king of Syria; 1—3, 7, 22: but, crying to God, he obtains some relief; 4, 5, 23: yet at last dies, obstinate in his idolatries: 6, 8, 9. (2) Jehoash his son reigns wickedly; but gains several advantages over the Syrians: 10, 13, 24, 25. (3) Elisha is, in his last sickness, visited by Jehoash, whom, by the symbolical shooting of an arrow, and smiting thrice with others on the ground, he assures of three victories over the Syrians: 14—19: he dies, and is buried; and a dead man is restored to life by touching his bones: 20, 21.

IN [a] the three and twentieth year of Joash the son of Ahaziah king of Judah, Jehoahaz the son of Jehu began to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned seventeen years.[*]

2 And he [b] did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, and [†] followed the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, which made Israel to sin; he departed not therefrom.

3 ¶ And [c] the anger of the LORD was kindled against Israel; and he delivered them into the hand of Hazael king of Syria, and into the hand of Ben-hadad the son of Hazael, all their days.

4 And Jehoahaz [d] besought the LORD,[‡] and the LORD hearkened unto him:[§] for he [e] saw the oppression of Israel, because the king of Syria oppressed them.

5 (And the LORD gave Israel a [f] saviour, so that they went out from under the hand of the Syrians:[‖] and the children of Israel dwelt in their tents,[*] as beforetime.[†]

6 Nevertheless [g] they departed not from the sins of the house of Jeroboam, who made Israel sin, but [‡] walked therein: and there [§] remained the [h] grove also in Samaria.)

7 Neither did he leave of the people to Jehoahaz but fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen; for the king of Syria [i] had destroyed them, and had made them like the dust by thrashing.

8 ¶ Now [k] the rest of the acts of Jehoahaz, and all that he did, and his might, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

9 And Jehoahaz slept with his fathers; and [l] they buried him in Samaria: and Joash his son reigned in his [‖] stead.

10 ¶ In the thirty and seventh [*†] year of Joash king of Judah began Jehoash the son of Jehoahaz [m] to reign over Israel in Samaria, and reigned sixteen years.

11 And [n] he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD; he departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel sin, but he walked therein.

government, and of the people's obedience: and, when religion comes in fashion, every man will appear zealous; and religion, liberty, and order, will support one another.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Old and evil customs are hard to root out: and rarely is the reformation of religion exactly answerable to the divine standard of God's word. Fear of men, or hopes that corruptions will die away of their own accord, often make good men to stop short. What a mercy it is for youth, particularly princes, to have pious, prudent, and faithful tutors! And often young hypocrites, under such care, manifest for a time more forwardness in the work of reformation than the aged servants of God. How hopeful it is when liberality, in contributing for sacred purposes, meets with prudence and fidelity in the disposal! But, when men are only restrained from evil by the influence of others, their wickedness readily breaks out at last, and they destroy what they have built. Hypocrites will not always call on God, but will become foolish in their imaginations, and hasten their own ruin by the means which they use to prevent it. And upon none does God more readily imprint distinguished marks of his vengeance than upon apostate hypocrites, who chiefly dishonour his cause.

12 [o] And the rest of the acts of Joash,* and all that he did, and his might wherewith he fought against Amaziah king of Judah, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel?

13 And Joash [p] slept with his fathers;† and Jeroboam [q] sat upon his throne: and Joash was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel.

14 ¶ Now Elisha was fallen sick of his sickness whereof [r] he died. And Joash the king of Israel came down unto him, and wept over his face, and said, [s] O my father, my father! the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof!‡

15 And Elisha said unto him, Take bow and arrows. And he took unto him bow and arrows.

16 And he said to the king of Israel, [t] Put thine hand upon the bow. And he put his hand upon it: and Elisha [t] put his hands upon the king's hands.

17 And he said, Open the window eastward:|| and he opened it. Then Elisha said, Shoot: and he shot. And he said, [u] The arrow of the LORD's deliverance, and the arrow of deliverance from Syria: for thou shalt smite the Syrians in [x] Aphek, till thou have consumed them.

18 And he said, Take the arrows: and he took them. And he said unto the king of Israel, [y] Smite upon the ground: and he smote thrice, and stayed.

19 And the man of God was wroth* with him, and said, Thou shouldest have smitten five or six times; then hadst thou smitten Syria till thou hadst consumed it: whereas now thou shalt [z] smite Syria but thrice.

20 ¶ And [†] Elisha died,‡ and they buried him. And the [a] bands of the Moabites invaded the land at the coming in of the year.

21 And it came to pass, as they were burying a man,§ that, behold, they spied a band|| of men; and they cast the man into the sepulchre of Elisha: and when the man* was let down, and [b] touched the bones of Elisha, he †revived,‡ and stood up on his feet.

22 ¶ But [c] Hazael king of Syria oppressed Israel all the days of Jehoahaz.

23 And [d] the LORD was gracious unto them, and had compassion on them, and had respect unto them, because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob,§ and would not destroy them, neither cast he them from his presence as yet.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—How obstinately do men cleave to that which is evil! When idolatry is once rooted in a nation, nothing but the power of God can extirpate it: and, when men make themselves wicked, God will make them base and miserable. But he is ready to hear the prayer of distress. His mercy abounds even to the chief of sinners. But they, who, after both judgments and mercies, continue in their sin, may expect to have at last judgment without mercy. How sovereignly God magnifies his servants, or renders them obscure, as he pleases! In what diversified forms they leave this world! Evident marks of God's favour and image are impressed upon some ministers and saints, that even wicked magistrates or others are in conscience constrained to honour them, and lament the loss of them; and what instruction, deliverance, and victory might kings obtain by an intimacy with such! The death-beds of noted ministers are useful schools of important wisdom: but the removal of the few faithful is a great weakening to the defence of a nation. Their loss is felt in death, who when alive were neglected. God himself, however, liveth as our protector and deliverer; and, when his everlasting arms are employed in our favour, nothing can detain or withstand us. But, alas! our confined desires and expectations often cramp our distinguished mercies. We improve not the offers and advantages which God puts into our hands, and often we grieve him and his servants, by losing our mercies for want of desire to obtain them. The death of God's eminent a 2 Chr. 26. 1, 3, 4. ch. 14. 21. & 12. 2, 3. Is. 56. 9, 10.

* Perhaps the twenty-seventh year of Jeroboam's partnership in the kingdom with his father, who made him consort at his going to the Syrian wars; but the 16th year of Jeroboam's monarchy.

IN the * twenty and seventh year of Jeroboam king of Israel began Azariah son of Amaziah king of Judah to reign.

2 [a] Sixteen years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem.

servants is frequently marked with tokens of wrath against their nation or church. And even a prospect of victory over one enemy is attended with trouble from another. But what blessings are good men, by their former examples, instructions, and prayers, even after they are dead! And quickly is the fate of the most powerful and conquering nations reversed when God pleases.

But does not this Elisha present before us a figure of the great God our Saviour? How abundant his fitness for his work! He was endowed with the Spirit above measure. Ardent was his zeal for God, and tender his compassion towards destitute, grieved, fainting, and endangered men. How express and solemn was his call to his offices, which was confirmed by numerous and diversified miracles! Coming after the New Testament Elijah, John Baptist, he was solemnly initiated to his work on Jordan's bank. By his complete robe of righteousness he divided the depths of wrath, and Jordans of trouble. By his new covenant of salt, and the grace thereof, he rectifies the bitter waters and barren soil of law precepts and curses, and of multiplied troubles. By him streams of gospel truths, ordinances, and influences, break forth in the wilderness for perishing sinners; and the barren Gentile world he makes a joyful mother of Christians, and these fruitful in good works. To destitute souls and churches, he multiplies their oil of grace, till there be no more room to receive it. By his word he often quickened the dead; and many such his death discharged from their graves. By his death and intercession he quickens millions dead in trespasses and sins. By his word he sweetens our bitter lots of temptations and troubles; he restores our sinking spirits, and supplies our famished souls. Multitudes of Gentile sinners he freely cures of their sinful leprosy, by complete purification in the river of his blood and Spirit; and renders them hearty worshippers of the true God. He is the strength and protector of his church, who gives his people victories, ruins their enemies, and manages the nations around for their good. How terrible is the resentment of heaven against his injurers! They that mock him are rent in pieces, while there is none to deliver them. Those ministers, who preach for filthy lucre, or who, by error and falsehood, wound his honour, shall infamously perish in their sin. They, who attend his ordinances with malignant intentions, shall be smitten with spiritual blindness and delusion. They who discredit his word, or despise his promised fulness, shall see it with their eyes, but never share of its benefits. Tremendous vengeance befell Judas, who betrayed him: and awful is the curse that has fallen on the Jews, who reviled, disbelieved, and persecuted him; and which shall at last fall on all his obstinate despisers.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—It is an easy thing to be a formalist in religion—but God tries the heart. How short-lived is the prosperity of traitors and murderers! Vain minds are proud of little, and are obstinate against good advice.

3 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Amaziah had done;*

4 Save that the [b] high places were not removed: the people sacrificed and burnt incense still on the high places.

5 ¶ And the LORD [c] smote† the king,‡ so that he was a leper unto the day of his death, and dwelt in a several house:§ and Jotham the king's son was over the house, judging the people of the land.

6 And the [d] rest of the acts of Azariah, and all that he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

7 So Azariah slept with his fathers;‖ and they buried him with his fathers in the city of David: and Jotham his son reigned in his stead.

10 And Shallum the son of Jabesh conspired† against him, and [g] smote him before the people,‡ and slew him, and reigned in his stead.

11 And the rest of the acts of Zachariah, behold, they are written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Israel.§

12 This was [h] the word of the LORD which he spake unto Jehu, saying, Thy sons shall sit on the throne of Israel unto the fourth generation. And so it came to pass.

16 ¶ Then Menahem smote Tiphsah,‡ and all that were therein, and the coasts thereof from Tirzah: because they [m] opened not to him, therefore he smote it; and all the women therein that were with child he [n] ripped up.

But others will be found proud enough to mortify them, and strong enough to render them miserable. It is madness for the people of God to weaken themselves before their common enemy by their mutual contentions. They who are least fond of war have ordinarily the best success in it: and they who govern ill raise discontents among their subjects, that issue in their ruin. But, whatever refuge sinners flee to, it will be found incapable to protect them. God will take care that his providence shall exactly correspond with his purpose and word. Often indeed wicked persons, families, or nations, are allowed a transient blaze of prosperity just before their final fall into lasting misery and ruin: but death and hell shall quickly overtake the most prosperous transgressors.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Formality in religion, and imperfections in reformation, continue often from generation to generation: and even the best of periods are marked with some token of the Lord's displeasure. He abases them that walk in pride; and by one stroke of disease can make the mightiest monarchs loathsome to others, and a burden to themselves; and, after all their glory, bring them with shame to the grave. For the transgression of a land, how many are the princes thereof! But few traitors and murderers die in their beds. Wicked men are generally fond of power; and in the worst of times will push themselves into it by perjury and murder, and to the perpetual hazard of their own life. And often the most cruel are the most cowardly. But what a mercy is it to enjoy religion, liberty, peace, and safety, under a mild government! By civil wars, by murders of princes, and by occasional ravages, God hurries wicked nations into lasting ruin. And often they, who were most forward in securing their settlements, share with the first in desolating judgments. And no less frequently godly magistrates and ministers are taken away from the evil to come, just when the storm is gathering against hypocritical professors.

IN the twelfth year of Ahaz king of Judah began [a] Hoshea the son of Elah to reign in Samaria over Israel nine years.

2 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, [b] but not as the kings of Israel that were before him.*

3 ¶ Against him came up Shalmaneser† [c] king of Assyria; and Hoshea became his servant, and ‡ gave him § presents.

4 And the king of Assyria found [d] conspiracy in Hoshea: for he had sent messengers to So‖ king of Egypt, and brought no present to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year: therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and [e] bound him in prison.

5 ¶ Then [f] the king of Assyria came up throughout all the land, and went up to Samaria, and besieged it three years.

6 [g] In the ninth year of Hoshea the king of Assyria took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria,* and placed them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the [h] Medes.

7 For so it was, [i] that the children of Israel had sinned against the LORD their God, which [k] had brought them up out of the land of Egypt, from under the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt, and had feared other gods,

8 And [l] walked in the statutes of the heathen, (whom the LORD cast out from before the children of Israel,) and of the kings of Israel, which they had made.

9 And the children of Israel did [m] secretly those things that were not right against the LORD their God, and they built them high places in all their cities, [n] from the tower of the watchmen to the fenced city.*

10 And they [o] set them up images and groves† in every high hill, and under every green tree:

11 And there they burnt incense in all the high places, as did the heathen whom the LORD carried away before them; and wrought wicked things to provoke the LORD to anger:

12 For they served idols, [p] whereof the LORD had said unto them, Ye shall not do this thing.

13 Yet the LORD testified against Israel, and against Judah, ‡ [q] by all the prophets, and by all the seers,§ saying, Turn ye from your evil ways, and keep my commandments and my statutes, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers, and which I sent to you by my servants the prophets.

14 Notwithstanding they would not hear, but [r] hardened their necks, like to the neck of their fathers, that did not believe in the LORD their God.

15 And they rejected his statutes, and his covenant that he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he *testified against them; and [t] they followed vanity, and became vain, and went after the heathen that were round about *them, concerning whom the LORD had charged them, that they should not do like them.

16 And they left all the commandments of the LORD their God, and [u] made them molten images, even two calves, and made a grove,‖ and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal.

17 And they caused their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire,* and used [x] divination and enchantments, and [y] sold themselves to do evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

18 Therefore the LORD was very angry with Israel, and removed them [z] out of his sight:† there was none left but [a] the tribe of Judah only.

19 Also [b] Judah kept not the commandments of the LORD their God, but walked in the statutes of Israel which they made.

20 And the LORD rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of [c] spoilers, until he had cast them out of his sight.

21 For he [d] rent Israel from the house of David; and they made Jeroboam the son of Nebat king: and Jeroboam drave Israel from following the LORD, and made them sin a great sin:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—What monsters of children have some of the best of saints! Grace must be infused by God, not conveyed by parents. Who can know the desperate wickedness of the human heart if left to itself! It can extinguish natural affections, and turn men into monsters: it can make them rush headlong into the very sins which ruined their neighbours before their eyes. In the day of distress, sinners are bent upon turning themselves every way for relief, but from God alone can they have it. They will stick at nothing slavish, dishonest, or shameful, to obtain that from men which they might have from him in the most honourable manner. Yea, they will choose those very idols for saviours, whose insufficiency to save has been manifested as with a sunbeam. What a plague to 22 For the children of [e] Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam which he did; they departed not from them;

23 Until the LORD removed Israel out of his sight, as he had said by [f] all his servants the prophets. So was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria unto this day.

24 ¶ And the king of Assyria brought* men [g] from Babylon, and from Cuthah, and from Ava, and from Hamath, and from Sepharvaim, and placed them in the cities of Samaria instead [h] of the children of Israel; and they possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof.

25 And so it was, at the beginning of their dwelling there, that [i] they feared not the LORD: therefore the LORD sent [k] lions† among them, which slew some of them.

26 Wherefore they spake to the king of Assyria, saying, The nations which thou hast removed, and placed in the cities of Samaria, know not the manner of the God of the land: therefore he hath sent lions among them, and, behold, they slay them; because they know not the manner of the God of the land.

27 Then the king of Assyria commanded, saying, Carry thither one of the [l] priests whom ye brought from thence; and let them go and dwell there, and let him teach them the manner of the God of the land.‡

28 Then one of the priests, whom they had carried away from Samaria, came and dwelt in [m] Beth-el, and taught them how they should fear the LORD.

29 Howbeit every nation [n] made gods of their own, and put them in the houses of the high places which the [o] Samaritans had made, every nation in their cities wherein they dwelt.

30 [p] And the men of Babylon made Succoth-benoth,§ and the men of Cuth made Nergal,‖ and the men of Hamath made Ashima, 31 And the Avites made Nibhaz and Tartak, and the Sepharvites burnt their children in fire to Adrammelech and Anammelech,* the gods of Sepharvaim.

32 So they [q] feared the LORD,† and made unto themselves of the [r] lowest of them priests of the high places, which sacrificed for them in the houses of the high places.

33 They feared the LORD, and served their own gods, after the manner of the nations ‡ whom they carried away from thence.

34 Unto this day they do after [s] the former manners: they fear not the LORD, neither do they after their statutes, or after their ordinances, or after the law and commandment which the LORD commanded the children of Jacob, [t] whom he named Israel;

35 With whom the LORD had [u] made a covenant, and charged them, saying, Ye shall not fear other gods, nor bow yourselves to them, nor serve them, nor sacrifice to them:

36 But the LORD, [x] who brought you up out of the land of Egypt with great power, and a stretched-out arm, him shall ye [y] fear, and him shall ye worship, and to him shall ye do sacrifice.

37 [z] And the statutes, and the ordinances, and the law, and the commandment, which he wrote for you, ye shall observe to do for evermore; and [a] ye shall not fear other gods.

38 And the covenant that I have made with you ye shall not forget; neither shall ye fear other gods.

39 But the LORD your God ye shall fear; and he shall deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies.

40 Howbeit [b] they did not hearken, but they did after their former manner.

41 So these nations [c] feared the LORD,* and served their graven images, both their children, and their children's children: as did their fathers, so do they unto this day.†

princes are those ministers who flatter them in their impiety, and readily comply therewith! And the most abandoned profligates are often very fond of that devotion which themselves have devised.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—God tries men with lesser judgments before he strikes the final blow. But such as continue selling themselves to the service of sin will at last share its wages in ruin. How sovereignly God times his tremendous judgments!—In the days of a king better than his fellows, and even by his treachery to a tyrant, the nation is plunged into misery and ruin. What an exact account God keeps of men's sin, and every aggravation of it! He marks against what mercies, warnings, and judgments it has been committed; and in what different forms: and what influence it has had in the seduction of others. And certain, however slow, is the destruction of apostates from God; and even at distant periods God is preparing for it.—Great is the instability of earthly settlements: and who knows whither the Lord may toss us in life? Yet men carry their sins closely with them, go where they will. And easily can God punish those

10 And at the [n] end of three years they took it; even in the sixth year of Hezekiah, (that is, the ninth year of Hoshea king of Israel,) Samaria was taken.

11 And the king of Assyria did carry away Israel unto Assyria, and [o] put them in Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes;

12 [p] Because they obeyed not the voice of the LORD their God, but transgressed his covenant, and all that Moses the servant of the LORD commanded, and would not hear them, nor do them. [‖]

13 ¶ Now [q] in the fourteenth year of king Hezekiah did [*] Sennacherib king of Assyria come [†] up against all the fenced cities of Judah, and took them. [‡]

14 And Hezekiah king of Judah sent to the king of Assyria to Lachish, saying, [r] I have offended; return from me: that which thou puttest on me will I bear. And the king of Assyria appointed unto Hezekiah king of Judah [§] three hundred talents of silver, and thirty talents of gold.

15 And Hezekiah [*] gave him all the silver that was found in the house of the LORD, and in the treasures of the king's house.

16 At that time did Hezekiah cut off the gold [‖] from the doors of the temple of the LORD, and from the pillars which Hezekiah king of Judah had overlaid, and gave [§] it to the king of Assyria.

17 ¶ [u] And the king of Assyria sent [*] Tartan, and Rabsaris, and Rab-shakeh, [†] from Lachish to king Hezekiah with a [‡] great host against Jerusalem: and they went up, and came to Jerusalem. And when they were come up, they came and stood by the [x] conduit of the upper pool, which is in the highway of the fuller's field.

18 And when they had called to the king, there came out to them [y] Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, which was over the household, and Shebna the [*] scribe, and Joah the son of Asaph the recorder.

19 And Rab-shakeh said unto them, Speak ye now to Hezekiah, [z] Thus saith the great king, [†] the king of Assyria, [a] What confidence is this wherein thou trustest?

24 How then wilt thou turn away the face of one captain of the least of my master's servants, and put thy trust on Egypt for chariots and for horsemen?

25 Am I now come up without the LORD against this place to destroy it? The LORD [*] said to me, Go up against this land, and destroy it. [†]

26 Then said Eliakim the son of Hilkiah, and Shebna, and Joah, unto Rab-shakeh, Speak, I pray thee, to thy servants in the Syrian language; (for we understand it;) and talk not with us in the Jews' language in the ears of the people that are on the wall.

27 But Rab-shakeh said unto them, Hath my master sent me to thy master, and to thee, to speak these words? hath he not sent me to the men which sit on the wall, that they may [f] eat their own dung, and drink [‡] their own piss with you? [§]

28 ¶ [g] Then Rab-shakeh stood and cried with a loud voice in the Jews' language, and spake, saying, Hear the word of the great king, the king of Assyria:

29 Thus saith the king, Let not Hezekiah deceive you; for [h] he shall not be able to deliver you out of his hand:

30 Neither let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD, saying, The LORD will surely deliver us, and this city shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

5 So the servants of king Hezekiah came to Isaiah.

6 ¶ And Isaiah said unto them, Thus shall ye say to your master, Thus saith the LORD, [i] Be not afraid of the words which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed me.

7 Behold, I will send a [k] blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumour, and shall return to his own land; and I will cause‡ him to fall by the sword in his own land.

8 ¶ So Rab-shakeh returned, and found the king of Assyria warring against [l] Libnah: for he had heard that he was departed from Lachish.

9 And when [m] he heard say of Tirhakah king of Ethiopia, Behold, he is come out to fight against thee; he sent messengers again unto Hezekiah, saying,

10 Thus shall ye speak to Hezekiah king of Judah, saying, [n] Let not thy God in whom thou trustest deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hand of the king of Assyria.

11 [o] Behold, thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands, by destroying them utterly; and shalt thou be delivered?

15 And Hezekiah [u] prayed before the LORD, and said, O LORD God of Israel, which [x] dwellest between the cherubims,‖ thou art [y] the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth; thou hast made heaven and earth.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—God never makes a full end of his people, however sinful; but provides them relief in one part of the world, when he almost extirpates them in another. Nay, in the darkest times, he can raise up the most burning and shining lights. His grace can enable them to overcome the strongest obstacles, and to persevere to the end. Never therefore need they fear who boldly trust on God in the path of duty. No length of custom can ever consecrate an evil practice. If our parents have dishonoured God, it is our honour to be unlike them. And fidelity in God's service will be ever accompanied with his blessing. And yet, to prove their faith and constancy, and to punish an hypocritical generation, they who are most zealous for God may be reduced to such difficulties as will make them stagger, and sinfully yield. But flying to human confidences instead of God will but bring on us the ruin which we seek to avoid. The most solemn treaties, or largest ransoms, make little impression on conquering tyrants. Never then let any rob God to procure temporal advantages. What an unruly evil is an insolent tongue! It casts forth firebrands, arrows, and death, against God and men: and readily it upbraids the people of God with their greatest honours. Little reason has one power to vaunt against another; for soon may they be equally weak, as well as equally treacherous. Great boasters are seldom even ordinary actors; and flattering tongues and pompous promises ought never to be trusted. How affecting is it to hear, though often improper to answer, virulent reproaches of God and his people! Silence is the best answer to insolent abuse. It but exasperates a fool to answer him according to his folly.

words of Sennacherib, which hath sent him to reproach the living God.

17 Of a truth, LORD, the kings of Assyria have [a] destroyed the nations and their lands;

18 And have cast their gods into the fire: for they [b] were no gods, but the work of men's hands, wood and stone: therefore they have destroyed them.

19 Now therefore, O [c] LORD our God, I beseech thee, save thou us out of his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that thou art the LORD God, even thou only.

20 ¶ Then Isaiah the son of Amoz sent to Hezekiah, saying, [d] Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, That which thou hast prayed to me against Sennacherib[e] king of Assyria I have heard.

21 This is the word that the LORD hath spoken concerning him; [e] The virgin the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee, and laughed thee to scorn; the daughter of Jerusalem hath shaken her head at thee.

22 Whom [f] hast thou reproached and blasphemed? and against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes on high? even against [g] the Holy One of Israel.

23 By thy messengers thou hast reproached the LORD, and hast said, [h] With the multitude of my chariots I am come up to the height of the mountains, to the sides of Lebanon, and will cut down the tall cedar-trees thereof, and the choice fir-trees thereof; [†] and I will enter into the lodgings of his borders, and into [i] the forest of his Carmel.

24 I have digged and drunk strange waters, and with the sole of my feet have I dried up all the rivers of [‡] besieged places.

25 [§] Hast thou not heard long ago [k] how I have done it, and of ancient times that I have formed it? now have I brought it to pass, that thou shouldest be to lay waste fenced cities into ruinous heaps.

26 Therefore their inhabitants were of [l] small power, they were dismayed and confounded; they were as the grass of the field, and as the green herb, as the grass on the house-tops, and as corn blasted before it be grown up.

27 But [m] I know thy abode, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy rage against me.

28 Because [n] thy rage against me and thy tumult is come up into mine ears, therefore [o] I will put my hook in thy nose, and my bridle in thy lips, and I will turn thee back by the way by which thou camest.

29 And this shall be a [p] sign unto thee, Ye shall eat [q] this year such things as grow of themselves,[*] and in the second year that which springeth of the same; and in the third year sow ye, and reap, and plant vineyards, and eat the fruits thereof.

30 And [r] the remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward.

31 For [s] out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant, and they that escape out of mount Zion: [t] the zeal of the LORD of hosts shall do this.

32 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the king of Assyria, He shall not come into this city, nor shoot an arrow there, nor come before it with shield, nor cast a bank against it.

33 [u] By the way that he came, by the same shall he return, and shall not come into this city, saith the LORD.

34 [x] For I will defend this city, to save it, [y] for mine own sake,[†] and for my servant David's sake.[‡]

35 ¶ And [z] it came to pass that night, that the angel of the LORD went out,[§] and smote in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred fourscore and five thousand: and when they arose early in the morning, behold, they were all dead corpses.[‖]

36 So Sennacherib king of Assyria departed, and went and [a] returned, and dwelt at [b] Nineveh.

37 And it came to pass,[*] [c] as he was worshipping in the house of Nisroch his god, that Adrammelech and Sharezer his sons smote him with the sword; and they escaped into the land of [d] Armenia: and Esarhaddon his son reigned in his stead.

e The Old Testament authorizes prayer against an enemy: the New Testament commands us to pray for him. Are these contradictory? are they of different spirits? Is the New Testament a new law? By no means. The command that enjoins us to pray for our enemies, requires us to pray for his conversion; the example that authorizes us to pray against him, is not against him, personally, but against his wicked designs and plans. We pray for the spiritual welfare of the most wicked enemy, but we pray against the diabolical plots, and plans, and combinations of his subtilty, malice, and cruelty.—Note. To pray for the conversion of a sinner, is to pray with God—to pray for the success of a sinner in his sinful purposes, would be to pray against God.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Sore troubles should deeply affect us, and render us earnest in calling upon God for relief. But, while our helper is almighty, we ought never to despair. Let us, however, always interest in our behalf the prayers of Jesus Christ and his ministers and people. Thus trusting in God, we shall never be confounded; while those who lift up their tongues against him, shall bring down swift vengeance on their own heads. Wicked men dare to defy God, and are fond of trumpeting forth their own praise. Just before their ruin their blasphemy and pride ordinarily swell to the highest. But, while we have a prayer-hearing God to address in our trouble, let us always be confident. If the great object of our requests be the manifestation of his glory, we shall certainly be heard; and often God's returns to the prayers of faith are speedy as well as comfortable. How honourable, in God's view, are his people in their greatest distress! and contemptible in his sight are the greatest of his opposers—an empty noise, a proud puff, and no more! Nor hell nor earth can rage any further than his limits permit them. He protects, delivers, and provides for his people above what they think or ask, and all for Jesus' sake. But what a speedy regard to his promise! What terrible majesty is with him! How fearful to fall into his hands! How great the power of his angels! and how safe those who have millions of such guardians and protectors! But miserable is the end of blasphemers! Often their very gods or children, from whom they expected support, become the instruments of their ruin.

3 I beseech thee, O LORD, [c] remember now how I have walked before thee in [f] truth, and with a perfect heart, and have done that which is good in thy sight. And Hezekiah [g] wept [*] sore.

4 And it came to pass, [h] afore Isaiah was gone out into the middle [†] court, that the word of the LORD came to him, saying,

5 Turn again, and tell Hezekiah the [i] captain of my people, Thus saith the LORD, the God of David thy father, [k] I have heard thy prayer, I have seen thy tears: behold, I will heal thee: on the third day [l] thou shalt go up unto the house of the LORD.

6 And I will [m] add unto thy days fifteen years; [n] and I will deliver thee and this city out of the hand of the king of Assyria; and I will defend this city for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake.

7 And Isaiah said, Take a [o] lump of figs: [‡] and they took and laid it on the boil, and he recovered.

8 ¶ And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the [p] sign that the LORD will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the LORD the third day?

9 And Isaiah said, [q] This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, that the LORD will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten [§] degrees?

10 And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees.

11 And Isaiah the prophet [r] cried unto the LORD; and [s] he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the [‖] dial of Ahaz.[*]

12 ¶ [t] At that time Berodach-baladan, the son of Baladan, king of Babylon, [†] sent letters and a present unto Hezekiah: for he had heard that Hezekiah had been sick.

13 And Hezekiah hearkened unto them, and [u] showed them all the house of his [‡] precious things, the silver, and the gold, and the spices, and the precious ointment, and all the house of his [§] [‖] armour, and all that was found in his treasures: there was [x] nothing in his house, nor in all his dominion, that Hezekiah showed them not.

14 ¶ Then [y] came Isaiah the prophet unto king Hezekiah, and said unto him, [z] What said these men? and from whence came they unto thee? And Hezekiah said, They are come from a far country, even from Babylon.

15 And he said, What have they seen in thine house? And Hezekiah answered, [a] All the things that are in mine house have they seen: there is nothing among my treasures that I have not showed them.[*]

16 And Isaiah said unto Hezekiah, Hear the word of the LORD.

17 Behold, the days come, that all that is in thine house, and that which thy fathers have laid up in store unto this day, [b] shall be carried into Babylon: nothing shall be left, saith the LORD.

18 And of [c] thy sons that shall issue from thee, which thou shalt beget, shall they take away; and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon.

19 Then said Hezekiah unto Isaiah, [d] Good is the word [†] of the LORD which thou hast spoken. And he said, [‡] Is it not good, if peace and truth [§] be in my days?

20 ¶ [e] And the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and all his might, and how [f] he made a pool, and a conduit, and brought water into the city, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

21 And Hezekiah slept with his fathers: [‖] and Manasseh his son reigned in his stead.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Neither greatness nor goodness can exempt from sickness or death. Not a moment of life but the present is certain. And often God lays men aside from their work when we think there is most need of them. But, oh! the vast preparation of state, frame, and exercise, that is necessary for a comfortable entrance into eternity! There is need for ministers to inculcate this in the most earnest and solemn manner. In dying moments it is the greatest mercy, and should be our greatest desire, to have all our hopes founded on Jesus' blood, and attended with the testimony of a good conscience: and to have the consolations of God enabling us to triumph over the natural fears and pains of death. How useful is prayer; it can prepare us for death, and recover us from distempers which are in themselves deadly. And God grants with pleasure his people's requests, and bestows on them exceedingly above what they ask or think. At best, our life is limited: it is short, and had need to be well improved. In sickness we ought to use proper remedies, otherwise we but tempt God in desiring or expecting recovery: and the prayers and advices of God's prophets do us more good than the prescriptions of our physicians. How God condescends to the weakness of his saints! He will work wonders to strengthen their faith. Prosperous favourites of heaven are ordinarily courted into friendship by the wicked: and the best of men are apt to be thus ensnared, especially by their own pride. But, if we walk in pride, God will certainly abase us or our seed. And what has ministered to our vanity and self-confidence will ere long cover us with confusion. May God then make us to accept of the punishment of LORD, of which the LORD said, [e] In Jerusalem will I put my name.

5 And he built [f] altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And [g] he made his son pass through the fire, [*] and observed times, and used enchantments, and dealt with familiar spirits and wizards: he [h] wrought much wickedness in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set [i] a graven image of the grove [†] that he had made in the house, of which the LORD said to David, and to Solomon his son, [k] In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither will I make the feet of Israel move [l] any more out of the land which I gave their fathers; [m] only if they will observe to do according to all that I have commanded them, and according to all the law that my servant Moses commanded them.

9 But [n] they hearkened not: and Manasseh [o] seduced them to do more evil than did the nations whom the LORD destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake [‡] by his servants the prophets, saying,

11 [p] Because Manasseh king of Judah hath done these abominations, and hath done wickedly above all that the Amorites did, which were before him, and hath made Judah also to sin with his idols;

12 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, [q] I am bringing such evil upon Jerusalem and Judah, that whosoever heareth of it, both his ears shall tingle.

13 And I will [r] stretch over Jerusalem the line [§] of Samaria, and the plummet [‖] of the house of Ahab: and I will wipe Jerusalem, as a man wipeth a dish, wiping it, and turning it upside down. [*]

14 And I will forsake the [†] remnant [†] of mine inheritance, and deliver them into the hand of their enemies; and they shall become a prey and a spoil to all their enemies;

15 Because they have done that which was evil in my sight, and have provoked me to anger, [t] since the day their fathers came forth out of Egypt, even unto this day.

16 Moreover, [u] Manasseh shed innocent blood very much, [*] till he had filled Jerusalem [†] from one end to another; besides [x] his sin wherewith he made Judah to sin, in doing that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

17 ¶ Now [y] the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and all that he did, and his sin that he sinned, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

18 And Manasseh slept with his fathers, [‡] and was buried in the garden [§] of his own house, in the garden of Uzza: and Amon his son reigned in his stead.

19 ¶ [z] Amon was twenty and two years old when he began to reign; and he reigned [a] two years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Meshullemeth, the daughter of Haruz of Jotbah.

20 And he did [b] that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as his father Manasseh did.

21 And he walked in all the way that his father walked in, and served the idols that his father served, and worshipped them:

22 And he [c] forsook the LORD God of his fathers, and walked not in the way of the LORD.

23 ¶ And the servants of Amon [d] conspired against him, and slew the king in his own house.

24 And the people of the land [e] slew all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land [f] made Josiah his son king in his stead.

25 ¶ [g] Now the rest of the acts of Amon which he did, are they not written in the book of the Chronicles of the kings of Judah?

our iniquity! We have cause of thankfulness if we are but out of hell. But outward quietness and gospel preaching are singular mercies, which we can never sufficiently acknowledge.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—It is extremely dangerous to arrive too early at dignity and power: so many are lying in wait to flatter such to their ruin. And novices, being lifted up with pride, fall into the condemnation of the devil. None are apt to be more abandoned profligates than those who trample on a religious education. Irreligion, and a violent attachment to devilish devices and false worship, are often closely connected. The bad example of great men, particularly kings, is often extremely infectious; and those who set it will, in the last judgment, have to answer for thousands or millions of souls which they have seduced or destroyed: for the greatest kings must shortly stand on a level with the meanest criminals at God's bar. When men abandon themselves to sin, the former public sins of their nation are all brought into their account, as approved and reacted by them. And nothing sooner fills up the measure of a nation's sins than the persecution of God's people. Terrible are the miseries which wicked magistrates and ministers bring on those under their charge. And they who imitate them in their wickedness must share in their punishment. They who forsake God must expect to be forsaken by him. But great must be the strength of that inward corruption which renders men daring in wickedness, notwithstanding the most awful warnings and judgments. Often men's forwardness in sinning hurries them into hell. And it is a great mercy for a nation when the career of a wicked king is short.

3 ¶ And it came to pass in the [d] eighteenth year* of king Josiah, that the king sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, the son of Meshullam, the scribe, to the house of the LORD, saying,

4 Go up to [e] Hilkiah the high priest, that he may sum the silver which is brought into the house of the LORD, which the keepers of the [f] door have gathered of the people:

5 And let them deliver it into the hand of the doers of the work, that have the [g] oversight of the house of the LORD: and let them give it to the doers of the work which is in the house of the LORD, to repair the breaches of the house,

6 Unto carpenters, and builders, and masons, and to buy timber and hewn stone to repair the house.

7 Howbeit [h] there was no reckoning made with them of the money that was delivered into their hand, because they dealt [i] faithfully.†

8 ¶ And Hilkiah the high priest said unto Shaphan the scribe, I have found the [k] book of the law in the house of the LORD.‡ And Hilkiah gave the book to Shaphan, and he read it.

9 And Shaphan the scribe came to the king, and brought the king word again, and said, Thy servants have [§] gathered the money that was found in the house, and have delivered it into the hand of them that do the work, that have the oversight of the house of the LORD.

10 And Shaphan the scribe showed the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath delivered me a book: and Shaphan [l] read it before the king.

11 And it came to pass, when the king had [m] heard the words of the book‖ of the law, that he rent his clothes.

12 And the king commanded Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and [n] Achbor the son of Micaiah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asahiah a servant of the king's, saying,

13 [o] Go ye, inquire of the LORD for me, and for the people, and for all Judah, concerning the words of this book that is found: for great is the wrath of the LORD that is kindled [p] against us, because our fathers have not hearkened unto the words of this book, to do according unto all that which is written concerning us.

14 So Hilkiah the priest, and Ahikam, and Achbor, and Shaphan, and Asahiah, went unto Huldah the [q] prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of Tikvah, the son of Harhas, keeper of the [r] wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem [s] in the college;†) and they communed with her.

15 ¶ And she said unto them, [t] Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell the man that sent you to me,

16 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, [t] I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the words of the book which the king of Judah hath read:

17 Because they have [u] forsaken me, and have burnt incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the [x] works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be kindled against this place, and shall not be [y] quenched.

18 But to the king of Judah, which sent you to inquire of the LORD, thus shall [z] ye say to him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, As touching the words which thou hast heard;

19 Because thine [a] heart was tender,‡ and thou hast humbled thyself before the LORD, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, that they should become a desolation and a curse, and hast rent thy clothes, and wept before me; I also have [b] heard thee, saith the LORD.

20 Behold therefore, [c] I will gather thee unto thy fathers, and thou shalt be gathered into thy grave [§] in peace;‖ and thine eyes shall not see all the evil which I will bring upon this place. And they brought the king word again.

Reflections upon Chap. XXII.—God can easily raise up eminent patterns of piety in the most profane family. And sovereign is the display, and abundant the riches of his grace. It bodes well when princes begin their cares with the reformation of religion. And it is extremely honourable when the most untainted honesty prevails in the management of public funds and general affairs. But how dreadful is it when the oracles of God are thrust into corners! and much more so when they are little known or regarded by those who have them daily in their hands! It is very unbecoming for great men to live ignorant of, and unconcerned about, their Bibles. For the time is at hand when their contents shall make the most careless and hardened despisers and neglecters tremble: and God's word, when blessed by his Spirit, is quick and powerful to the piercing and conviction of men's consciences. And when we see the wrath of God hanging over our heads, it is full time to think how to prevent it. Such as are under deep convictions, or oppressive fears, ought to consult the Lord's prophets. Holy men and women, are the fittest to be our friends and advisers. And it is a great benefit to courts when they have heaven's favourites at hand. How dreadful is it for a ments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all their heart, and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book: and all the people [f] stood to the covenant.

4 ¶ And the king commanded Hilkiah the high priest, and the [g] priests of the second order, and the keepers of the door, to bring forth out of the temple of the LORD all the [h] vessels that were made for Baal, and for the grove, and for all the host of heaven:[*] and he burnt them without Jerusalem [i] in the fields of Kidron, and carried the ashes of them unto [k] Beth-el.

5 And he [†] put down [i] the idolatrous priests, whom the kings of Judah had ordained to burn incense in the high places in the cities of Judah, and in the places round about Jerusalem; them also that burnt incense unto [m] Baal, to the sun, and to the moon, and to the [‡] planets, and to all the host of heaven.

6 And he brought out the [n] grove[§] from the house of the LORD, without Jerusalem, unto the brook Kidron, and burnt it at the brook Kidron, and stamped it small to powder, and cast the powder thereof upon the graves[‖] of the children of the people.

7 And he brake down the houses of the [o] sodomites, that were by the house of the LORD, where the women wove [p] hangings[*] for the grove.

8 And he brought all the priests out of the cities of Judah, and defiled the high places where the priests had burnt incense, from [q] Geba to Beer-sheba, and brake down the high places of the gates that were in the entering in of the gate of Joshua the governor of the city, which were on a man's left hand at the gate of the city.

9 Nevertheless the [r] priests of the high places came not up to the altar of the LORD in Jerusalem, but they did eat of the unleavened bread among their brethren.

10 And he defiled [s] Topheth,[†] which is in the valley of the children of Hinnom, [t] that no man might make his son or his daughter to pass through the fire to Molech.

11 And he took away the horses that the kings of Judah had given to the [u] sun,[‡] at the entering in of the house of the LORD, by the chamber of Nathan-melech the [§] chamberlain, which was in the suburbs, and burnt the chariots of the sun with fire.

12 And the altars that were [x] on the top of the upper chamber of Ahaz, which the kings of Judah had made, and the altars which [y] Manasseh had made in the two courts of the house of the LORD, did the king beat down, and [*] brake them down from thence, and cast the dust of them into the brook Kidron.

13 And the high places that were before Jerusalem, which were on the right hand of [z] the mount of Corruption,[†] which [a] Solomon the king of Israel had builded for Ashtoreth the abomination of the Zidonians, and for Chemosh the abomination of the Moabites, and for [b] Milcom the abomination of the children of Ammon, did the king defile.

14 And he [c] brake in pieces the [‡] images, and cut down the groves, and filled their places [d] with the bones of men.

15 ¶ Moreover, [e] the altar that was at Beth-el, and the high place which Jeroboam the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin, had made, both that altar and the high place he brake down, and burnt the high place, and stamped it small to powder, and burnt the grove.

16 And as Josiah turned himself, he spied the sepulchres that were there in the mount, and sent, and took the bones out of the sepulchres, and [f] burnt them upon the altar, and polluted it, according to the word of the LORD which the man of God proclaimed, who [§] proclaimed these words.

17 Then he said, What title[‖] is that that I see? And the men of the city told him, It is [g] the sepulchre of the man of God, which came from Judah, and proclaimed these things that thou hast done against the altar of Beth-el.

18 And he said, Let him alone; let no man move his bones. So they let his bones [h] alone, with the bones of the [i] prophet that came out of Samaria.

19 ¶ And [k] all the houses also of the high places that were in the cities of Samaria,[*] which the kings of Israel had made to provoke the LORD to anger, Josiah took away, and did to them according to all the acts that he had done in Beth-el.

20 And he [l] slew all the priests of the high places that were there upon the altars, and burnt men's bones upon them, and returned to Jerusalem.

21 ¶ And the king commanded all the people, saying, [m] Keep the passover unto the LORD your God, as it is written in the book of this covenant.

22 Surely there was not holden [n] such a passover from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah;

23 But in the eighteenth year of king Josiah,

32 And [c] he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

33 And Pharaoh-nechoh [d] put him in bands at [e] Riblah, in the land of Hamath, [§] that he might not reign in Jerusalem; and put the land to a tribute of [‖] an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

34 And Pharaoh-nechoh made Eliakim the son of Josiah king in the room of Josiah his father, and [f] turned his name to [g] Jehoiakim,[*] and took Jehoahaz away: and he came [h] to Egypt, and died there.

35 ¶ And Jehoiakim [i] gave the silver and the gold to Pharaoh; but he taxed the land to give the money, according to the commandment of Pharaoh: he exacted the silver and the gold of the people of the land, of every one according to his taxation, to give it unto Pharaoh-nechoh.

36 ¶ [k] Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Zebudah, the daughter of Pedaiah of Rumah.

37 And he did that which was [l] evil in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his fathers had done.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—When God's wrath hangs over our head, it is high time to attend to and learn his law; and to concur in hearty and cheerful covenanting with God in Christ. But it is principally God's love and covenant of grace that binds men fast to him, not their most solemn vows and promises. Nothing tends more to the welfare of princes than their zealous promoting of the true knowledge and worship of God. But, alas! what fearful abominations may be found among people who have not entirely abandoned the worship of the true God! and shameful discoveries of these are made whenever reformation is thoroughly attempted. There is therefore need of much knowledge, prudence, courage, and zeal, to carry reformation to a proper pitch. God's promises and threatenings are all fulfilled at last, notwithstanding the longest delays. Such as truly covenant with God must not only remove corruptions, but restore the purity and strict observation of the ordinances of God; and particular regard must be had to the exact observation of the instituted seals of his covenant. God takes a peculiar pleasure to perpetuate their honour who have been sincere and active for him in their generation. But irreversible is the doom of nations when once

AND it came to pass [a] in the ninth year of his reign, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came, he, and all his host, against Jerusalem, and pitched against it; and they built forts against it round about.

ripened by wickedness. Often the best of princes must taste a little of their cup, especially if they attempt to help their ungodly neighbours. When those who stood in the gap to retard deserved judgments are removed by death, with what tremendous speed do those judgments hasten to ruin the guilty! and when neither warnings restrain, nor good examples influence, destruction is evidently near.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—By their own means God infatuates those whom, in his purpose or threatening, he has marked out for ruin. Multitudes of wicked men, for their own selfish purposes, are always ready to execute the threatened vengeance of God: and all resistance is vain when God will destroy. If men mourn not for their fathers' iniquities, they will smart for them: and not one jot or tittle of God's threatenings shall fail. In a day of wrath, the vain confidences of sinners shall utterly fail them; and the mightiest arm of flesh will be a weak support against an angry God. In his sovereign power he nips wicked princes in the bud, and lifts them up, that their fall may be the more ruinous and miserable. How craftily conquerors weaken the nations which they purpose to keep enslaved!

‖ In times and countries abounding with petty sovereignties, we need not be surprised to hear of many captive kings being congregated at Babylon. England, at a period comparatively modern, contained seven distinct kingdoms. Providence, by thus distinguishing the captive monarch of Judah, had the great end in view of drawing the attention of the Babylonian monarch to the revealed word and divine ordinances of Moses and the prophets, and of thus preparing the way for the development of those instructions and warnings which, through Babylon, continue to be still addressed by Daniel and other prophets, to the mighty kings and proud cities of the earth.—ED.

But there is no evil in the city which the Lord hath not done. Hardened indeed must men be in wickedness, when the repeated miseries of their fellow transgressors deter them not at all from treading in their steps. And a nation is on the verge of ruin, when God gives up her rulers to infatuation; and when, for the sin of a land, many and wicked are the princes thereof.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—How dreadful are the fruits of sin, in persons, cities, and nations! And fearful is the case of those in cities which are long besieged, or taken by force. But no contrivance for safety will at last avail them who have contemned the counsels of God. The final doom of impenitent sinners is to be bound with chains of darkness unto the judgment of the great day! How terribly the ordinances of God suffer for the sin of their attendants! And wo to that city or kingdom from which they are removed! Dreadful is the universal overthrow that surely follows: and men of rank, in the time of such public calamities, are exposed to the most distinguished miseries, answerable to their distinguished influence in the sinful causes thereof. But observe here how exactly the threatenings of God by Moses and the prophets are now fulfilled. Notwithstanding Nebuchadnezzar's intentions, not a remnant of Jews is left in the land of Canaan: and yet, in the very midnight of their captivity, he grants them a token of their future deliverance.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE SECOND BOOK OF KINGS.

CHAP. I. Ver. 2. Baal-zebub.—"The fly-god," either because worshipped under that form, or as protecting from the annoyance of flies. The Greeks worshipped Jupiter Apomyius, or the fly-expeller. The Hindoo Vrayavar is represented as assuming the form of a wasp, for annoyance of his enemies; and, like Baal-zebub, is applied to in time of sickness.

CHAP. II. Ver. 9. Let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me.—If the translation fully represent the original, it may be a reference to the double portion of the first-born, Deut. 21. 17. And, if it were so, it was no vain ambition that dictated the desire; for, if the spirit of Elijah was a spirit of power, it was also a spirit of much affliction, which no worldly mind can desire.

But it has been translated "a repetition," or continuance, a sense that seems to be favoured by ver. 15.——Ver. 23. There came forth little children.—Not necessarily little children, but young persons. Isaac was so called (in the Hebrew) when 28, and Joseph when 39, Gen. 25. 6. & 45. 9. See also Gen. 14. 24. & 18. 7.——Go up, thou bald head.—Marking the idea of Elijah's ascent into heaven in a manner that proves they were not "little children," in the literal sense, but infidel sons of Belial, with thoughts only for earth, and contempt of eternity and glory.——Ver. 24. There came forth two she-bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two.—It is not said whether any were killed, or how much they were torn. The bears were probably mothers "robbed of their whelps," (Prov. 17. 12.) whose maternal fondness is a lesson to humanity; but whose fierceness would be immeasurably increased by the destruction of their young.

Chap. III. Ver. 11. Poured water on the hands of Elijah.—In most Eastern countries they eat with the fingers; and, pouring water on the hands, after meals, is an act which, in what Europeans would call "the learned professions," indicates not a servant, but a disciple. The Orientals have a great objection to washing the hands in a basin, holding the water polluted after one contact; the hands are therefore held over the basin, while the water is poured out of a ewer with a narrow neck, but otherwise much like an ordinary British coffee-pot.

Chap. V. Ver. 11. Strike his hand over the place, and recover the leper.—A superstition still common in the East, where even a European physician is expected to pass his hand over a diseased part. In England, the royal touch was held to be a remedy for scrofula, so late as the days of Queen Anne. The light, not of philosophy—for philosophy never grappled with a popular superstition—but the light of the Bible, in the hands of protestantism, has banished these fond imaginations, and led the sick to the throne of grace alone (Heb. 4. 16.); but similar, or identical superstitions are still fostered, as instruments of popular control, by the votaries of Romanism. And even while this is being written, (March, 1841) persons, of all forms of disease, are being touched for healing by a Romish priest, who, while he in words denies any miraculous power, in acts lays claim to it, by sinful compliance with the popular fanaticism.

Chap. VI. Ver. 25. Doves' dung.—A kind of dried pulse, much used by the Arabs, is still called by this name, and it is largely stored at Cairo and Damascus; and this is the interpretation of Bochart and many others. The literal article is, according to Morier, largely used for manure for melons, and sold at a high price; he concludes, therefore, that it was used for this purpose in the siege. In whatever sense, however, we understand the phrase "Ass's head," it means certainly an article of food; we can therefore see no reason for supposing the "doves' dung" to be a manure, and for no other purpose could the literal article be used; we therefore adopt the opinion of Bochart, that it was a kind of dried pea.

Chap. VIII. Ver. 2. Sojourned in the land of the Philistines seven years.—It appears strange to many that there could be a famine in Israel and plenty in Palestine, countries between which there was no difference of soil or climate, and that lay so contiguous to each other. Those who either wonder or object, show little knowledge or observation in agriculture. Such occurrences are common in all countries, and arise from various causes, such as, (1) Diversity of agricultural skill. (2) Variety in the staple crop, which people are not easily induced to change to suit seasons. (3) From the local nature of drought and rain, which, though generally equalized, are sometimes very unequal. (4) From the destructive powers of insects, generated at particular degrees of temperature and moisture. (5) From facilities of import—which last was altogether in favour of the Philistines, who dwelt along the borders of the Mediterranean.——Ver. 15. He took a thick cloth, and dipped it in water, and spread it on his face.—There is a difficulty in deciding whether Benhadad took the cloth or Hazael. But had Benhadad taken the wet cloth as a means of cure, he would scarcely have waited till next day; it seems much more probable that Hazael took that time to prepare for the succession by the murder.

Chap. XII. Ver. 3. But the high places were not taken away.—Private altars on high places, where sacrifices were offered, and, no doubt, generally endeared by some interesting recollection of Joshua, Samuel, or some of the prophets or judges. They were not taken away, either for want of power, or from the unsettled state of the country, or were permitted to remain out of deference to popular prejudice, or the neighbourhood and interests of Levitical cities. Still, as they were contrary to the law, testimony continues to be borne against them.—Note. If you cannot reform sinners, at least testify against their sin. Your testimony may be unavailing now, it will work hereafter.

Chap. XVII. Ver. 6. Halah and in Habor.—"Halah," the Calachena of Ptolemy in the north of Assyria. "Habor," the Chaboras of Ptolemy, a mountain between Media and Assyria. Between this mountain and the Caspian sea lies the city Gouzonia, between the two branches of the river Cyrus.——Ver. 8. Statutes of the heathen.—Statutes which the idolatrous kings of Israel, and not God, had made.——Ver. 17. Divination.—Various pretended methods of prying into futurity, such as an examination of the entrails of sacrificed animals, the flight of birds, palmistry.——Enchantments.—The various impostures in which the eyes are deceived by great dexterity, or the mind subdued by the wonderful effects produced by the concealed knowledge of natural causes, also various pretended secret means of acquiring affection or inflicting revenge.——Sold themselves to do evil.—These pretended arts were, and, even in Christian lands, still are practised for money, especially by the people called Gypsies, whom happily, at last, Christian care is beginning to reach, and settle in fixed habitations and useful employments.

Chap. XVIII. Ver. 2. Zachariah.—Most probably the pious man who exercised such happy influence in the days of Uzziah, (2 Chr. 26. 5.) and whose pious daughter might preserve her son from the idolatry of his father Ahaz.—Note. All history attests the incalculable blessing of a pious mother. "A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised," and her acts shall be read in the life and prosperity of her children.——Ver. 7. He rebelled against the king of Assyria.—Had the kingdom been his own by any principle of right, Ahaz might have alienated, or rendered it tributary. But it belonged not to man, but to God, and therefore God, who had given it to Abraham, had a right to resume it from the idolatrous and persecuting usurpers.

Chap. XIX. Ver. 28. I will put my hook in thy nose.—Oxen and dromedaries are usually guided by a ring which runs through the division between the nostrils and which abides permanently, only requiring the fastening of a rein, or by means of an open hole in the same place, into which a hook with a rein is occasionally inserted.

Chap. XX. Ver. 18. For thou shalt die, and not live.—"The natural tendency of thy disease is certain and speedy death;" a fact that no more precluded God's miraculous interference to prolong his days, than the death of Lazarus, and the certain and speedy tendency of his body to corruption, precluded Christ from raising him from the grave.——Ver. 5. I will heal thee.—God is always the healer of disease, (Ps. 103. 3.); but, in some cases, the vis medicatrix naturæ is his agent, and medicine his means. In other cases the disease, in an attained stage, is naturally incurable, and then miracle is his agent, his word the means.——Ver. 6. I will add unto thy days fifteen years.—Not fifteen years beyond the time I had appointed thee, but fifteen years beyond what the state of disease, left to its course, would have allowed thee, Job 7. 1. & 14. 6—14.

Chap. XXI. Ver. 6. Dealt with familiar spirits.—Dealt with such as pretended to possess power over spirits, either to render them visible or audible, and so to obtain from them information concerning hidden treasure, things lost or stolen, or the knowledge of future events—a miserable example of imposture and credulity, which even the light of Christianity has not entirely banished from the world.

Chap. XXIII. Ver. 3. The king stood by a pillar.—The pillar itself being an emblem of stability and sustaining power. See ch. 11. 14.

Chap. XXIV. Ver. 3. Remove them out of his sight, for the sins of Manasseh.—Not punishing them for the personal sins of Manasseh, but for those sins he taught them to practise, and in which they became such expert and infamous adepts.——Ver. 6. Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.—It is necessary to remark that this king is called by other names, 1 Chr. 3. 16. Jer. 22. 24. and Matt. 1. 11. But nothing is more common in all ages, than for the same person to be called by different names. Napoleon and Bonaparte, is the most striking modern example—that conquering scourge of the nations being indiscriminately called by the one or the other title.

This and the following book were probably written by Ezra, the noted reformer after the captivity. They comprehend a history of about 3500 years from the creation till after the Jews returned from Babylon. Their manifest scope is to fix the genealogies of the Jewish nation, and to narrate the noted transactions of David and his royal descendants. As the ancient names of persons or places are sometimes altered in whole or in part, and a number of circumstances, not formerly mentioned, inserted, there is sometimes a seeming, but not a real, contradiction between them and the preceding books; particularly II. Samuel, and the two books of Kings. If we are at any loss to reconcile some of these passages, let us blame our own weakness, but never the oracles of God. Things relative to these mere circumstances might be obvious to the ancient Jews, which are now to us obscure or unknown. The first book contains (1) A collection of sacred genealogy for about 3600 years from Adam till long after the captivity, mingled with some shreds of history not formerly inserted; i—ix. This genealogy was of great use to the Jews who returned from Babylon, to fix them in their respective tribes and families; and is of use to us, to manifest our Redeemer to be the promised seed of David, Judah, Abraham, and Eve, according to the flesh. And now that he is come, for whose sake the registers were chiefly preserved, no genealogy of the Jews, for more than 1700 years backwards, is in the least to be depended on. (2) A repeated view of the translation of the kingdom of Israel from Saul to David, and of the triumphs of the latter, with several additions; x—xii. xviii—xxi. (3) An account of David's settling the ark at Jerusalem; fixing the orders of the priests, Levites, singers, porters, and other ecclesiastical officers; appointing the officers of his property and trained bands; of the vast preparations he made for building the temple; and the directions he gave to Solomon and others concerning it; most of which is not before narrated; xiv—xvii. xxii—xxix.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—What ground have all men to be humble, when they are sprung of Adam, the covenant-breaker! and it is necessary to love all as our neighbours and brethren, since God has made of one blood all nations of the earth. How contemptible and short the years of all generations appear before the everlasting God! Quickly men post into death and eternity: and scarcely are they born, in God's reckoning, when they die. Remarkably trodden are the paths of death, though still unknown. What multitudes have gone before us, as there are innumerable that follow: and how great and awful will be that assembly, in which all the dead, small and great, shall stand before God! Not one existing, from the foundation of the world till Christ's second coming, shall then be missing! But of little account with God are all nations in respect of his chosen people and church. honours of priesthood and royalty; and the last of these to produce an incarnate God.—Not of works, lest any man should boast! The most distinguished sinners are often rendered the most remarkable monuments of his saving grace, or of usefulness in the church! And often the families which God intends for uncommon honours are first dishonoured with the vilest characters, and marked with distinguished strokes of wrath. How rare is it to find four brothers in a family all famed for wisdom and grace!—But frequent enough to find families almost desolated by the sword. God takes peculiar pleasure to exalt the low, and abase that which is high. David, the youngest son of Jesse, is raised to the throne.—Even so, Father, because so it seemed good in thy sight! By what incontestible sovereignty God orders the condition of families, giving or withholding children, or of this or that sex, as it pleaseth him! Let all therefore learn, in whatever state he places them, to be therewith content. Let parents learn rather to marry their children to pious servants than to the ungodly rich. And let those who, like the Kenites, join God's people in their warfare, expect to dwell with them in their Canaan above.

* That is—the sons of Shechaniah were six, reckoning to him Shemaiah and his five sons, as Jacob reckoned to himself Ephraim and Manasseh the sons of Joseph; Gen. 48. 5, 6. This is evident from the word sons of Shechaniah, for only one proper son, Shemaiah, is mentioned, (ver. 22.) and as sons are ascribed to him, they must be his son and grand-sons, by the virtue of patriarchal adoption. There is thus no use for the violent and unauthorized substitution of five, without authority of MSS. as Houbigant would read.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Even good men may have large families with little appearance of piety or wisdom among most of them, while there is plenty of crosses: and often children die and leave their names to others. But it is highly becoming when we so love our reprovers, and especially our God, as to commemorate them * in the names of our children. What distinguished respect God pays to his promise, and to the noted piety of his servants! Never, perhaps, but in David's family, did a crown go directly from father to son for seventeen generations! But great indeed is our mercy that we now have Jesus, the King eternal, immortal, and invisible, to complete and crown the list.

* David called one of his sons Nathan; and many of them had EH (My God) in their names.

children from whom they at first expected least of it! What honour doth learning, and especially piety, put upon men! But it is a singular mercy to have a new covenant God to address in our prayers. To set out in the world with much earnest supplication to God is a hopeful beginning; and the most extensive and substantial blessings may boldly be asked at his throne of grace, who takes pleasure in hearing and answering the fervent prayers of faith. They that wait upon him shall renew their strength, and be protected from all their enemies.

How differently God disposes of men in respect of their callings and stations on earth! He advances them to honour and power, or degrades them to the meanest employments, as seemeth good in his sight. This world is a changing scene: nothing substantial or enduring is to be expected in it. Let it quicken our diligence to secure a better, where our dignity will be secure, without variableness or shadow of turning. brethren, who joined the kingdom of Israel, are carried into captivity. If I firmly adhere to God and my duty, he will always provide for me what I need; and that which appears an afflictive separation, shall at last prove a comfortable deliverance. But the curse of God shall hunt out the sinners, as it did the Amalekites, till they are utterly destroyed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Behold how sin degrades men, and thrusts them down from their excellency! And one false step often leaves an indelible stain upon their memory. But God does not utterly cast off those who fall foully at first, and are severely punished in the flesh. Behold how he divides the honours which had been sinfully forfeited, that no flesh may glory in his presence!—how 48 Their brethren also the Levites were appointed unto all manner of service of the tabernacle of the house of God.

49 ¶ But [z] Aaron and his sons offered upon the altar of the burnt-offering, and on the altar of incense, and were appointed for all the work of the place most holy, and to make an atonement for Israel, according to all that Moses the servant of God had commanded.

54 ¶ Now [b] these are their dwelling-places throughout their castles in their coasts, of the sons of Aaron, of the families of the Kohathites; for theirs was the lot.*

55 [c] And they gave them Hebron in the land of Judah, and the suburbs thereof round about it.

56 But the fields of the city, and the villages thereof, they gave to Caleb the son of Jephunneh.

57 [d] And to the sons of Aaron they gave the cities of Judah, namely, Hebron, the city of refuge, and Libnah with her suburbs, and Jattir, and Eshtemoa, with their suburbs, 63 Unto the [k] sons of Merari were given by lot, throughout their families, out of the tribe of Reuben, and out of the tribe of Gad, and out of the tribe of Zebulun, twelve cities.

64 [l] And the children of Israel gave to the Levites these cities, with their suburbs.

65 And they [m] gave by lot out of the tribe of the children of Judah, and out of the tribe of the children of Simeon, and out of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, these cities which are called by their names.§

66 [n] And the residue of the families of the sons of Kohath had cities of their coasts out of the tribe of Ephraim.

67 And they gave unto them, of the cities of refuge, Shechem in mount Ephraim with her suburbs; they gave also [o] Gezer with her suburbs, he casts out the enemy from before his people by little and little, and gives them residence and substance as they have need of it! Behold these Gadites in their pride; and see how God, in his wisdom, to mark them not utterly cast off, takes up their names just before their removal into a long captivity! But what mighty things the people of God can do when they take him along with them! With ease they tread down their enemies, and gather their spoils, when they go forth crying to and trusting in him. But sin is pregnant with the greatest mischief to the temporal as well as the eternal interests of professors. God can effectually serve his own purposes by the ambition of the most proud, tyrannical, and murderous princes. And the most lasting destruction follows those who are cut off in their sins. They, who are governed more by sense than by faith in the choice of their settlement, find often, when it is too late, that they have made a very disadvantageous one. Their first settlement issues in their being first wretched and miserable.

‡ The number of cities and extended suburbs allotted to Levi, may seem a large, and even undue proportion to so small a tribe; but it is to be recollected that these cities and suburbs were evidently held, not in exclusive possession by the Levites, but in some species of co-partnership with the secular tribe by whom they were granted, and that, consequently, the Levitical possessions were reduced to little more than a mere residence.—Ed.

(7) Of Asher: 30—40. Perhaps the Danites are omitted, at least as to express mention, to disgrace them for their early introduction of idolatry: but why Zebulun is omitted, whether because none of them returned to Canaan after the Chaldean captivity, I know not.

NOW the sons of Issachar were, Tola, and [a b] Puah, Jashub, and Shimron, four.

2 And the sons of Tola; Uzzi, and Rephaiah, and Jeriel, and Jahmai, and Jibsam, and Shemuel, heads of their father's house, to wit, of Tola: they were valiant men of might in their generations; [c] whose number was, in the days of David two and twenty thousand and six hundred.*

3 And the sons of Uzzi; Izrahiah: and the sons of Izrahiah; Michael, and Obadiah, and Joel, Ishiah, five: † all of them chief men.

4 And with them, by their [d] generations, after the house of their fathers, were bands of soldiers for war, six and thirty thousand men: for * they had many wives and sons.

5 And their brethren among all the families of Issachar were valiant men of might, reckoned in all, by their genealogies, [e] fourscore and seven thousand.

7 And the sons of Bela;‡ Ezbon, and Uzzi, and Uzziel, and Jerimoth, and Iri, five; heads of the house of their fathers, mighty men of valour, and were reckoned by their genealogies twenty and two thousand and thirty and four.

‡ Zelophehad was not literally the son, but the descendant of Manasseh, in the third generation. Zelophehad was the son of Hepher (Num. 26. 33.) the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, (Num. 26. 29.) This, with the apparent want of connexion with the genealogy, has induced some expositors to reject it as a fragment unaccountably interpolated. Such a criticism is both rash and unwarranted. The narrative was a legal conveyance of family property, and were we acquainted with all the family history, the cause of its insertion would, no doubt, appear, and the obscurity of the whole passage be dissipated.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. VI.—If God so care for the remembrance of Levites, singers, and ceremonial priests, how fixed in his book of life must be the names of those who are loved, and washed in Jesus' blood, and made kings and priests to him and his Father! With exact care ought every one in the church, particularly ministers, to see to the regular observation of the ordinances of God. These Levites were most commodiously stationed for the instruction of the Israelites, when they were thus, according to Jacob's threatening, divided and scattered. But what comfortable provision God requires for his ministers; and what joint concurrence of his people in procuring it according to their several abilities!

* Expositors are divided as to whether the Ephraimites made the inroad upon the Philistines, or the Philistines upon the Ephraimites. But it being evident from ver. 22. that the murder took place in the life of Ephraim, it must have been in Egypt; for the phrase came down, would never characterise the going up from the level of the Nile to the mountains of Philistia; but is the constant geographical description of the descent from the higher to the lower country. See Gen. 43. 4. The word translated because, must therefore be rendered when.—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. VII.—How God multiplies a people amidst hard country labour, as he did that of Issachar! He can multiply families after they had been almost utterly extirpated, as were the Benjamites: Judg. xx. How early the Hebrews, even in Egypt, began to contract marriages with the heathen: We go astray from the womb, speaking lies. The families and nations for which God intends peculiar honour often meet with singular breaches and discouragements in their way to it. Providence often seems to contradict promises: but the counsel of the Lord, that shall stand. We are nowhere safe from danger; nor are good causes always successful. Children are certain cares and griefs to parents, but uncertain pleasures. They who live long only live to see their sorrows multiplied, REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—The more closely we adhere to God and his people, the greater will be our honour at last. How little great kings and warriors appear before God! Not one king of Israel, after the division of the kingdom, is marked in these registers of heaven; but the family of Jonathan the saint is marked with distinguished honour.

‡ Great irregularity in the tabernacle service must have prevailed during the unsettled times that followed the death of Joshua, especially during a period, not only of neglect of the divine ordinances, but frequently of idolatry and apostasy. To the reformation of these abuses, Samuel and David seem to have directed their attention, and instituted a regular routine of porters, not merely to open and shut the gates, for that had been an easy work, but as guards against idolatry and licentiousness, and conservators of good order around the entrance of the sanctuary.—Note. They that would reform the church of God, must begin at the door—the door of examination and discipline, both in the admission and exclusion of its membership.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—God never distresses or unsettles men but for their sin. And it is comely and joyful when the once discordant tribes of God harmoniously unite in asking and travelling the way to Zion; and when the priests and Levites, the ministers of Christ, are remarkable in their attachment to, and zeal for, re-establishing the worship of God, and order of his church! God graciously proportions men's strength for the work to which he calls them. But residence, labour, and zeal, are indispensably required from every minister of God: and, if they begin with God, they may hope to prosper in their undertakings. Happy is it for the church when every one knows and waits on his proper work, and when the meanest offices and services are reckoned truly honourable. Better be door-keepers in the house of God than dwell in palaces of wickedness. It is pleasant to be always rejoicing in and praising God, who is continually doing us

[‡] The might here ascribed to Abishai, and Jashobeam, ver. 11. seems so much beyond the ordinary power of man, that while infidels have found them occasion for question, expositors have sought, by various means, to bring them within the limits of historical probability. The difficulty, however, seems most easily removed by observing, that in ver. 11, the words by him, and in ver. 20, the word them, is supplied; and that the acts ascribed to these worthies is not the actual destruction of the hundreds by their own hands, but their personal boldness in "lifting up the spear against them," and boldly, it may be, defending some pass against them, till assistance arrived.—ED.

11 And this is the number of the mighty men[†] whom David had; [n] Jashobeam, an Hachmonite, the chief of the captains: he lifted up his spear [o] against three hundred slain by him at one time.

12 And after him was Eleazar the son of Dodo, the [p] Ahohite, who was one of the three mighties.

13 He was with David at [q] Pas-dammim, and there the Philistines were gathered together to battle, where was a parcel of ground full of barley;[‡] and the people [r] fled from before the Philistines.

14 And they [§] set themselves in the midst of that parcel, and delivered it, and slew the Philistines; and the LORD [‖] saved them by a great [¶] deliverance.

16 And David was then in the [x] hold, and the Philistines' [y] garrison was then at Bethlehem.

17 And David longed,[†] and said, Oh that one would give me drink of the [z] water of the well of Beth-lehem, that is at the gate!

18 And the three brake through the host of the Philistines, and drew water out of the well of Beth-lehem, that was by the gate, and took it, and brought it to David: but David would not drink of it, [a] but poured it out to the LORD,

19 And said, My God forbid it me, that I should do this thing: shall I drink the blood of these men [b] that have put their lives in jeopardy? for [c] with the jeopardy of their lives they brought it: therefore he would not drink it. These things did these three mightiest.

20 And [d] Abishai the brother of Joab, he was chief of the three: for lifting up his spear against three hundred,[‡] he slew them, and had a name among the three.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Behold how God stains the pride of human glory! He is sovereign, but righteous and terrible, in all his judgments! The hands of sinners often make the snares with which themselves are caught. And disobedience to God, and intimacy with the devil, most certainly bring to ruin persons, families, and nations.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Here let me observe, that God's counsels will be fulfilled, whatever difficulties lie in the way; that pride goeth before destruction; and that men, after long wearying themselves in vain, are sometimes made to understand the things which belong to their peace, and return to their own mercy. There is a real contract between kings and their subjects, which both parties ought religiously to observe. Hopes of preferment strongly induce carnal men to their duty; and the strength and prosperity of kings depend, under God, chiefly upon their servants. But the providential or spiritual presence of God with men is the true cause of their strength and fortitude; and the way to be great and famous is to do remarkable services to our God, our king, and our country. Great men ought never to be prodigal of the lives of their subjects; but, if their rashness hath brought others into danger, they ought bitterly to repent of it, and to study more self-denial; and if we have any thing super-excellent, the Lord ought to be honoured with it. But were not these chiefs typical of Jesus Christ's apostles, his banks; and they put to flight all them of the valleys, both toward the east, and toward the west.

16 And there came of the children of Benjamin and Judah [o] to the hold unto David.[*]

17 And David went out [†] to meet them, and answered and said unto them, If ye be come peaceably unto me to help me, mine heart shall [p] be knit unto you: but if ye be come to betray me to mine enemies, seeing there is no [q] wrong in mine hands, the God of our fathers look thereon, and [r] rebuke it.

18 Then [s] the spirit came upon [t] Amasai, who was chief of the captains, and he said, Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers; for thy God helpeth thee. Then David received them, and made them captains of the band.

19 And there fell some of Manasseh to David, when he came with the Philistines against Saul to battle; but they helped them not: for [u] the lords of the Philistines, upon advisement, sent him away, saying, He will fall to his master Saul, [‡] to the jeopardy of our heads.

20 As he [x] went to Ziklag, there fell to him of Manasseh, Adnah, and Jozabad, and Jediael, and Michael, and Jozabad, and Elihu, and Zilthai, captains of the thousands that were of Manasseh.

21 And they helped David [y] [§] against the band[‖] of the rovers: for they were all [z] mighty men of valour, and were captains in the host.

22 For at that time, [a] day by day, there came to David to help him, until it was a great host, like the host of God.[*]

23 ¶ And [b] these are the numbers of the [†] [‡] bands that were ready armed to the war, and came to David to Hebron, to turn the kingdom of Saul to him, [c] according to the word of the LORD.[§]

24 [d] The children of Judah, that bare shield and spear, were six thousand and eight hundred, ready [‖] armed to the war.

25 [e] Of the children of Simeon, mighty men of valour for the war, seven thousand and one hundred.

26 Of [f] the children of Levi, four thousand and six hundred.

27 And Jehoiada was the leader of the Aaronites, and with him were three thousand and seven hundred;

28 And [g] Zadok, a young man mighty of valour, and of his father's house twenty and two captains.

29 [h] And of the children of Benjamin, the [*] kindred of Saul, three thousand: for hitherto [†] the greatest part of them [i] had kept the ward of the house of Saul.

30 [k] And of the children of Ephraim, twenty thousand and eight hundred, mighty men of valour, [l] famous throughout the house of their fathers.

31 And of the [m] half-tribe of Manasseh, eighteen thousand, which were expressed by name, [‡] to come and make David king.

32 And [n] of the children of Issachar, which were men that had [o] understanding of the times, [§] to know what Israel ought to do; the heads of them were two hundred; and all their brethren were at their commandment.

33 [p] Of Zebulun, such as went forth to battle, [‖] expert in war, with all instruments of war, fifty thousand, which could keep rank: [*] they were [q] not of double heart.

34 And [r] of Naphtali a thousand captains, and with them, with shield and spear, thirty and seven thousand.

35 And of the Danites, expert in war, twenty and eight thousand and six hundred.

36 And of Asher, such as went forth to battle, [†] expert in war, forty thousand.

37 And [s] on the other side of Jordan, of the Reubenites, and the Gadites, and of the half-tribe of Manasseh, with all manner of instruments of war for the battle, an hundred and twenty thousand.

38 [t] All these men of war, that could keep rank, came with a perfect heart to Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: and all the rest also of Israel were of one heart to make David king.

39 And there they were with David three days, [u] eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them.

40 Moreover, they that were nigh them, even unto Issachar, and Zebulun, and Naphtali, brought bread[‡] on asses, and on camels, and on mules, and on oxen, and [x] meat, meal, cakes of figs, and bunches of raisins, and wine, and oil, and oxen, and sheep abundantly: for there was [y] joy in Israel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—The Lord can easily bow the hearts of men, and turn them whithersoever he pleases, to accomplish his purposes. And, when we are in the way to Jesus and our duty, no high-swelled Jordans of difficulty ought to hinder or discourage us. Swiftly ought we to flee from evil, and boldly to maintain the cause of truth. Such as have once been endangered by false friends, had need to be cautious. And with great prudence, and the kindest affection, should great men receive and entertain those who come to their help in a time of distress. With prudent earnestness ought we to join those whom the Lord plainly favours, helps, and protects; and much more to join with Jesus Christ, in whom his soul delights, and who exalts all his servants to high and eternal honours. How often God raises up help for his people in the very moments in which they most need it! And hopeful is the state of a kingdom, when kings ascend their throne to the universal satisfaction of their subjects, especially the most pious and prudent. Thus may the nations quickly flock to Jesus, when he

AND David [a] consulted with the captains of thousands and hundreds, and with every leader.

2 And David said unto all the congregation of Israel, [b] If it seem good unto you, and that it be of the LORD our God, let us send abroad unto our brethren every where, that are [c] left in all the land of Israel, and with them also [d] to the priests and Levites which are in their cities and suburbs, that they may gather themselves unto us:

3 And let us bring again the ark of our God to us: for we [e] inquired not at it in the days of Saul.*

4 And all the congregation said that they would do so: for the thing was [f] right in the eyes of all the people.

5 So [g] David gathered all Israel together, from Shihor of Egypt, even unto the entering of Hemath,† to bring the ark of God from Kirjath-jearim.

6 And David went up, and all Israel, to [h] Baalah, that is, to Kirjath-jearim, which belonged to Judah, to bring up thence the ark of God the LORD, [i] that dwelleth between the cherubims, whose name is called on it.

7 And they ‡ carried the ark of God [k] in a new cart out of the house of Abinadab: and Uzza and Ahio drave the cart.

8 And David and all Israel [l] played before God with all their might, and with singing, and with harps, and with psalteries, [m] and with timbrels, and with cymbals, and with trumpets.

9 ¶ And when they came unto the threshingfloor of [n] Chidon, Uzza [o] put forth his hand to hold the ark; for the oxen [§] stumbled.

10 And the anger of the LORD was kindled against Uzza, and he smote him, [p] because he put his hand to the ark: and there he died [q] before God.

11 And David was displeased,‖ because the LORD had made a breach upon Uzza: wherefore that place is called *Perez-uzza to this day.

12 And David was afraid of God that day, saying, [r] How shall I bring the ark of God home to me?

13 So David † brought not the ark home to himself to the city of David, but carried it aside into the house of *Obed-edom the Gittite.‡

14 And the ark of God remained with the family of Obed-edom [t] in his house three months. And the LORD blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that he had.

9 And the Philistines came and spread themselves in the valley of [j] Rephaim.‖

10 And David [k] inquired of God, saying, Shall I go up against the Philistines? and wilt thou deliver them into mine hand? And the LORD said unto him, Go up; for I will deliver them into thine hand.

11 So they came up to Baal-perazim; and David smote them there. Then David said, [l] God hath broken in upon mine enemies by mine hand, like the breaking forth of waters: therefore they called the name of that place [m] Baal-perazim.

12 And when they had left their gods there, David gave a commandment, and they [n] were burnt with fire.*

13 And the Philistines [o] yet again spread themselves abroad in the valley.

14 Therefore David inquired again of God: and God said unto him, Go not up after them; turn away from them, and come upon them over against the mulberry-trees.

15 And it shall be, when thou [p] shalt hear a sound of going in the tops of the mulberry-trees, that then thou shalt go out to battle: for God is gone forth before thee, to smite the host of the Philistines.

16 David therefore did as God commanded him: and they smote the host of the Philistines from [q] Gibeon even to Gazer.†

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—To have God with us, as the foundation of all true felicity, should be our first and principal desire. But respect paid to those whom we command, engages their consent, and is the way to be obeyed with cheerfulness. In the multitude of counsellors there is much, but not all, safety. In the settlement of true religion, magistrates ought to manage so as to recommend it to the approbation of all their subjects, and to act as nursing parents, not as ravening wolves. All who fear God ought to rejoice when religion is countenanced and promoted; and when princes are active, ministers should heartily correspond with their godly designs. Great care ought to be taken in correcting the mistakes of former times, which have passed unpunished. But not the least commandment of God ought ever to be overlooked; for the ignorance of those, who minister before God's ark, is especially criminal and dangerous. With all our joys we had need to join trembling. For a seemingly small miscarriage God may quickly turn our temple songs into howlings; and discouragements are apt to cool our zeal in the way of duty. But how profitable may the ark, the Christ, the gospel of God, be to some, while it is the savour of death unto others!

(1) The ark brought up more regularly than before; for the priests, the chief of whom are mentioned, were ordered to carry it: 1—24. (2) It was done more successfully than before; for the Levites made no mistake in their work, being helped of God: 26: and David and his subjects met with no damp of their joy: 25, 27, 28. Yet (3) It was not done without some contempt from Michal, David's wife: 29.

AND David made him houses[a] in the city of David, and prepared [a] a place for the ark of God, and pitched for it a tent.

2 Then David said, [†] None ought to carry the ark of God but the Levites:[‡] for them hath [b] the LORD chosen to carry the ark of God, and to minister unto him for ever.

3 And David [c] gathered all Israel together to Jerusalem, to bring up the ark of the LORD unto his place, which he had prepared for it.

4 And David assembled the [d] children of Aaron, and the Levites:

5 [e] Of the sons of Kohath; Uriel the chief, and his [§] brethren an hundred and twenty.

6 Of the sons of Merari; Asaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred and twenty.

7 Of the sons of Gershom; Joel the chief, and his brethren an hundred and thirty.

8 Of the sons of [f] Elizaphan; Shemaiah the chief, and his brethren two hundred.

9 Of the sons of [g] Hebron; Eliel the chief, and his brethren fourscore.

10 Of the sons of [h] Uzziel; Amminadab the chief, and his brethren an hundred and twelve.

11 And David called for [i] Zadok and Abiathar the priests, and for the Levites, for Uriel, Asaiah, and Joel, Shemaiah, and Eliel, and Amminadab,

12 And said unto them, Ye are the chief of the fathers of the Levites: [k] sanctify yourselves,[‖] both ye and your brethren, that ye may bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel unto the place that I have prepared for it.

13 For [l] because ye did it not at the first, the LORD our God made a breach upon us, for that we sought him not after the due order.[*]

14 So the priests and the Levites sanctified [m] themselves to bring up the ark of the LORD God of Israel.

15 And the children of the Levites bare the ark of God upon their shoulders, with the staves thereon, as [n] Moses commanded, according to the word of the LORD.

16 And David [o] spake to the [p] chief of the Levites to appoint their brethren to be the singers with instruments of music, psalteries, and harps, and cymbals, sounding, by lifting up the voice with joy.

not to need the help of his neighbours. Let me therefore be thankful for their assistance: but let my sufficiency be of God. It is pleasant for the godly to discern God's hand even in their earthly settlements. And all advancements ought to be considered as intended for usefulness,—for the glory of God, and good of mankind. Rarely do even good men prosper in worldly things, without waxing secure and too indulgent to the flesh. Little ease indeed must be expected in this world to the church of Christ, or to the souls of his people. But, if we acknowledge the Lord in all our ways, he will direct our paths, and make us more than conquerors. Carefully must we attend to the directions of his word, or even motions of his Spirit and providence: and, depending on his conduct and strength, we may gird up our loins, gird on our armour, resist the devil, and make him to flee from us. If God deliver my corruptions into my hand, let me, all inflamed with holy zeal, burn them up, and mark the strongest detestation of idolatry, and every monument of it. And let Jesus have all the glory: let his name only be exalted, and his glory fill the whole earth.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Good works must also be well done: and all our sufferings for our mistakes should teach and stir us up to be more regular.

CHAPTER XVI.

(1) With what solemnity of sacrificing, &c. the ark was settled in Jerusalem: 1—6. (2) The psalm which David composed for the occasion: 7—36. (3) David settling the order of God's daily worship before the ark: 37—43.

A. M. 2989. B. C. 1045.

SO [a] they brought the ark of God, and set it in the midst of the tent that David had pitched for it: and they offered burnt-sacrifices and peace-offerings before God.

2 And when David had made an end of offering the burnt-offerings and the peace-offerings, [b] he blessed the people in the name of the LORD.

3 And he [c] dealt to every one of Israel, both man and woman, to every one a loaf of bread, and a good piece of flesh, and a flagon of wine.

4 ¶ And he appointed certain of the Levites to minister [d] before the ark of the LORD, and to record, and to thank and praise the [e] LORD God of Israel:

5 [f] Asaph the chief, and next to him Zechariah, Jeiel, and Shemiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mattithiah, and Eliab, and Benaiah, and Obed-edom; and Jeiel with psalteries [g] and with harps; but Asaph made a sound with cymbals:

6 Benaiah also and Jahaziel the priests [h] with trumpets continually before the ark of the covenant of God.

7 ¶ Then on that day David [i] delivered first [*] this psalm, to thank the LORD, into the hand of Asaph and his brethren.

8 [k] Give thanks unto the LORD, call upon his name, make known his deeds among the people.[†]

9 [l] Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him, [m] talk ye of all his wondrous works.

10 [n] Glory ye in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek the LORD.

11 [o] Seek the LORD and his strength, seek his face continually.

12 Remember [p] his marvellous works that he hath done, his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth;[‡]

13 O [q] ye seed of Israel his servant, ye children of Jacob, his chosen ones.

14 He is [r] the LORD our God: his [s] judgments [§] are in all the earth.

15 Be [t] ye mindful always of his covenant; the word which he commanded to a thousand generations;

16 Even of the [u] covenant which he made with Abraham, and of his oath unto Isaac;

17 And hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant,

18 Saying, [x] Unto thee will I give the land of Canaan, [*] the lot of your inheritance;

19 When ye were but [†] few, [y] even a few, and strangers in it.

20 And when they [z] went from nation to nation, and from one kingdom to another people;

21 He [a] suffered no man to do them wrong; yea, he reproved kings for their sakes,[‡]

22 Saying, Touch not mine anointed,[§] and do my prophets no harm.

23 [b] Sing unto the LORD, all the earth; show forth from day to day his salvation.

24 [c] Declare his glory among the heathen; his marvellous works among all nations.

25 For [d] great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised: he also is to be feared above all gods.

26 For [e] all the gods of the people are idols; but the LORD made the heavens.

27 [f] Glory and honour are in his presence; strength and gladness are in his place.

28 Give unto the LORD, [g] ye kindreds of the people, give unto the LORD [‖] glory and strength.

29 Give unto the LORD [‖] the glory due unto his name: bring an offering, and come before him: worship the LORD in the beauty of holiness.[‖]

30 Fear before him, [k] all the earth: the world also shall be [l] stable, that it be not moved.

31 Let [m] the heavens be glad, and let the earth rejoice: and let men say among the nations, The LORD reigneth.

32 [n] Let the sea roar, and the fulness thereof: let the fields rejoice, and all that is therein.

33 Then shall the trees of the wood sing out at the presence of the LORD, because he cometh to judge the earth.[*]

34 [o] O give thanks unto the LORD; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever.

35 And [p] say ye, Save us, O God of our salvation, and gather us together, and deliver us from the heathen, that we may give thanks to thy holy name, and glory in thy praise.

36 [q] Blessed be the LORD God of Israel for ever and ever. And [r] all the people said, Amen, and praised the LORD.

37 ¶ So he left there, before the ark of the covenant of the LORD, [s] Asaph and his brethren, to minister before the ark continually, as every day's work required:

38 And [t] Obed-edom with their brethren, threescore and eight; Obed-edom also the son of Jeduthun and Hosah to be porters:

The greatest reformers being men, have some faults. But it is a mercy when we see our errors, and amend them. Even such as know the word of God better than others, may, on particular occasions, forget the directions which they are peculiarly called to remember. But readiness to correct former mistakes is an evidence of true wisdom and goodness. Such as are above others in dignity ought to go before them in duty. Many, who are very remiss in their duty, if they were but faithfully told of it, would reform and do better. Whatever gifts God bestows upon us should be employed in his service: and in all religious work we should derive our help from heaven, and thank God for it. If we escape his judgments while we are serving him, we owe it to his favour, not to our own exactness: and to him we owe the praise of all that is good in our work. God delights in the prosperity of his servants; and we ought to serve him with cheerfulness and joy. But in the very best of times there will be some evil murmurers who think God's service too mean for them.

NOW [a] it came to pass, as David sat in his house, that David said to Nathan the prophet, Lo, I dwell [b] in an house of cedars, but the ark of the covenant of the LORD remaineth under curtains.

2 Then Nathan said unto David, [c] Do all that is in thine heart; for God is with thee.

3 ¶ And [d] it came to pass the same night, that the word of God came to Nathan, saying,

4 Go and tell David my servant, Thus saith the LORD, [e] Thou shalt not build me an house to dwell in:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—God's ordinances and truths may remain long in obscurity; but their glory will shine forth at last. And the hungry, who wait on him, will at length be filled with good things. Grateful praises is a most acceptable sacrifice to God. All our rejoicings ought to express thankfulness to him, from whom we receive all our comforts: and all our praises to centre in ascribing glory to him. We ought to show ourselves generous to others, as God is gracious to us. And such as know God should endeavour, by their triumph in him, and all other fruits of grace, to bring their neighbours into acquaintance with him. The sovereign choice which God has made of his people; the covenant he has established with them; the wonderful works he has done for them; and the statutes he has given them; as well as his almighty power, goodness, and glory; and his being the Creator and governor of all things, should be matter of our praise. And,

and concerning his house, be established for ever, and do as thou hast said.

24 Let it even be established, [e] that thy name* may be magnified for ever, saying, The LORD of hosts is the God of Israel, even a God to Israel: and let the house of David thy servant be established before thee.

25 For thou, O my God, [f] hast told thy servant that thou wilt build him an house: therefore thy servant hath [g] found in his heart to pray before thee.

26 And now, LORD, thou art God, and [h] hast promised this goodness unto thy servant:

27 Now therefore † let it please thee to bless the house of thy servant, that it may be before thee for ever: for thou blessest, [i] O LORD, and it shall be blessed for ever.

CHAPTER XVIII.

(1) David conquers the Philistines: 1; the Moabites, 2; the king of Zobah, 3, 4; and other Syrians, 5—8; and the Edomites, 12, 13; the king of Hamath becomes his tributary ally, 9, 10; and he dedicates the spoils and presents of gold, silver, and brass, to the service of the temple: 11. (2) His prosperity at home, in the equity of his government and flourishing order of his court: 14—17.

NOW after this [a] it came to pass, that David smote the Philistines, and subdued them, and took [b] Gath and her towns out of the hand of the Philistines.

2 And he [c] smote Moab; and the Moabites became David's servants, and brought gifts.*

3 ¶ And David smote [d] Hadarezer king of Zobah unto Hamath,† as ‡ he [e] went to stablish his dominion by the river Euphrates.

4 And David took from him [f] a thousand chariots, and seven thousand§ [g] horsemen, and twenty thousand footmen: David also [h] houghed‖ all the chariot-horses, but reserved of them an hundred chariots.

5 And when the Syrians of * Damascus came to help Hadarezer king of Zobah, David [i] slew of the Syrians two and twenty thousand men.

6 Then David [k] put garrisons in Syria-damascus; and the Syrians became David's servants, and brought gifts. Thus the LORD [l] preserved David whithersoever he went.

7 And David took the shields of gold that were on the servants of Hadarezer, [m] and brought them to Jerusalem.

8 Likewise from † Tibhath, and from Chun, cities of Hadarezer, brought David very much brass, wherewith [n] Solomon made the brazen sea, and the pillars, and the vessels of brass.

9 ¶ Now when [o] Tou king of Hamath heard how David had smitten all the host of Hadarezer king of Zobah;

10 He sent [p] Hadoram his son to king David, * to inquire of his welfare, and to † congratulate him, because he had fought against Hadarezer, and smitten him; (for Hadarezer ‡ had war with Tou;) and with him all manner of vessels of gold, and silver, and brass.

11 Them also king David [q] dedicated unto the LORD, with the silver and the gold that he brought from all these nations; from Edom, and from Moab, and from the children of Ammon, and from the Philistines, and from Amalek.

12 Moreover, Abishai the son of Zeruiah slew of the Edomites in the valley of Salt [r] eighteen thousand.§

13 ¶ And he put * garrisons in Edom; and all the Edomites became David's servants. Thus the LORD preserved David whithersoever he went.

14 ¶ So David reigned † over all Israel, and executed judgment and justice among all his people.

15 And [u] Joab the son of Zeruiah was over the host; and Jehoshaphat the son of Ahilud, ‖ recorder;

16 And Zadok the son of Ahitub, and [x] Abimelech the son of Abiathar, were the priests; and [y] Shavsha was scribe;

17 And [z] Benaiah the son of Jehoiada was over the Cherethites and the Pelethites; and the sons of David were chief * about the king.

Here again, the similarity of the word for Edom and Aram, (Syria) or the "error of a transcriber," is frequently employed to reconcile the narratives. Neither is necessary. The victory of Joab, the immediate commander, is ascribed to David the superior; and the Edomites are called Syrians, just as an army is called British, though it may contain numerous auxiliary troops from various countries.—ED.

while we enjoy his favours, we ought to intercede for salvation, and every other promised blessing, to them that want them. But, however solemn our occasional worship of God may be, it must never supersede our daily and ordinary service of him.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—Every true fearer of God is solicitous to have his glory set forth. And God's ministers especially ought to encourage every good word and work. Gracious desires, even where ineffectual, are highly regarded of God. But outward pomp in his worship and service is little esteemed in his sight. Earnest desires and endeavours to build a house to the Lord, are the best methods to raise up our own. Blessings on our children are mercies to ourselves. But in Christ himself, as our ALL and IN ALL, the promises have their complete fulfilment. With what deep humility we ought to approach unto God! Those are the truly honourable of the earth whom he regards; and it is the glory of the highest monarchs to be his servants. As there is none like him, so there is no happiness like to a sense of his favour. With ravishing wonder, and believing confidence, we may plead his promises. And if we share in his covenant of grace, we shall partake of his everlasting glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—Intimate fellowship with God makes men bold and active; and however numerous and mighty the enemies of God's people are, they shall be brought down at last. The associated forces of hell and earth in vain oppose his church; she shall stand triumphant over them all in the end. It is not shields of gold, but the shield of faith, that will prove an unfailing defence. Nay, so uncertain are worldly things, that men often lose their power and wealth by seeking to establish them. The enemies of God's people frequently hurt themselves by attempting to hurt their neighbours. And sinners, contrary to their own inclinations, lay up wealth for the just, and make preparations for building the temple of God. But it is prudent to make God's favourites our friends; and proper to honour God with that in which he remarkably blesses us. They cannot but succeed in their enterprises, who take God always along with them. And father. So the servants of David came into the land of the children of Ammon to Hanun, to comfort him.

3 But the princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanun, [c] Thinkest thou that David doth honour thy father, that he hath sent comforters unto thee? are not his servants come unto thee for to search, and to overthrow, and to [d] spy out the land?

4 Wherefore [e] Hanun took David's servants, and shaved them, and cut off their garments in the midst hard by their buttocks, and sent them away.*

5 Then there went certain, and told David how the men were served: and he sent to meet them; (for the men were greatly ashamed;) and the king said, Tarry at [f] Jericho until your beards be grown, and then return.

6 ¶ And when the children of Ammon saw that they had made themselves odious [g] to David, Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a† thousand talents of silver to hire them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and out of Syria-maachah, and out of Zobah.

7 So they [h] hired thirty and two thousand chariots,‡ and the king of Maachah and his people; who came and pitched before [i] Medeba.§ And the children of Ammon gathered themselves together from their cities, and came to battle.

8 And when David heard of it, he sent [k] Joab, and all the host of the mighty men.

9 And the children of Ammon came out, and put the battle in array before the gate of the [l] city: and [m] the kings that were come were by themselves in the field.

10 Now when Joab saw that ‖ the battle was set against him before and behind, he chose out of all the * choice of Israel, and put them in array against the Syrians.†

11 And the rest of the people he delivered unto the hand of [n] Abishai his brother, and they set themselves in array against the children of Ammon.

12 And he said, [o] If the Syrians be too strong for me, then thou shalt help me: but if the children of Ammon be too strong for thee, then I will help thee.

13 [p] Be of good courage, and let us behave ourselves valiantly‡ for our people, and for the cities of our God; and let the LORD do that which is good in his sight.

14 So Joab, and the people that were with him, drew nigh before the Syrians unto the battle; and they fled before him.

15 And when the children of Ammon saw that the Syrians were fled, they likewise [q] fled before Abishai his brother, and entered into the city. Then Joab came to Jerusalem.

16 ¶ And when the Syrians saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they sent messengers, [r] and drew forth the Syrians that were beyond the * river; and Shophach, [s] the captain of the host of Hadarezer, went before them.

17 And it was told David; and he gathered all Israel, and passed over Jordan, and came upon them, and [t] set the battle in array against them. So when David had put the battle in array against the Syrians, they fought with him.

18 But the Syrians [u] fled before Israel; and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand men which fought in chariots, and forty thousand footmen,† and killed Shophach the captain of the host.

19 And when the servants of Hadarezer saw that they were put to the worse before Israel, they made peace with David, and became his servants: neither would the Syrians help the children of Ammon [x] any more.

where he gives great power, men should be careful not to look great, but to do good with it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Saints ought to be neighbourly and grateful, as far as religion admits. But the kindest actions may be misinterpreted, the most friendly concern be repaid with ingratitude, and the most innocent character may suffer reproach. Wickedness naturally proceeds from the wicked; and they who do ill dread ill; and where whisperers are heard, firm friends are separated. They who receive shame and damage in our service ought to be tenderly taken care of and provided for: and the courage of brave men is increased and invigorated by difficulties. But sinners, whom God hath marked for ruin, harden themselves to their own destruction. Vain are the utmost efforts of art and strength against justice and equity: and to little purpose do those rally and re-enforce themselves who have God for their enemy. How often those who meddle with strife not belonging to them, know not what to do in the end of it; and it is wise if at last they learn to forbear.

11 So Gad [m] came to David, and said unto him, Thus saith the LORD, * Choose thee

12 [n] Either three years' famine;† or three months to be destroyed before thy foes, while that the sword of thine enemies overtaketh thee; or else three days the sword of the LORD, even the pestilence, in the land, and the angel of the LORD destroying throughout all the coasts of Israel. Now therefore advise thyself what word I shall bring again to him that sent me.

13 And David said unto Gad, I am in a great strait: let me fall now into the hand of the LORD; for very [o] great are his mercies: but let [p] me not fall into the hand of man.

14 ¶ So the LORD sent pestilence upon Israel: and there fell of Israel [q] seventy thousand men.

15 And God sent an angel unto Jerusalem to destroy it: and as he was destroying, the LORD beheld, and he repented‡ [r] him of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed, It is enough; stay now thine hand. And the angel of the LORD stood by the thrashing-floor of Ornan [s] the Jebusite.

16 ¶ And David lifted up his eyes, and saw the [t] angel of the LORD stand between the earth and the heaven, having a drawn sword in his hand stretched out over Jerusalem:§ then David and the elders of Israel, [u] who were clothed in sackcloth, fell upon their faces.

17 And David said unto God, [x] Is it not I that commanded the people to be numbered? even I it is that have sinned and done evil indeed; but as for [y] these sheep, what have they done? Let thine hand, I pray thee, O LORD my God, be on me, and on my father's house; but not on thy people, that they should be plagued.

18 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD commanded Gad to say to David, that David should go up, and set up an altar unto the LORD [z] in the thrashing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

19 And David went up [a] at the saying of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORD.

20 ‖ And Ornan turned back, and saw the angel;* and his four sons with him hid themselves. Now Ornan was thrashing wheat.

21 And as David came to Ornan, Ornan looked and saw David, and went out of the thrashing-floor, and bowed himself to David with his face to the ground.

22 Then David said to Ornan, [b] Grant me the place of this thrashing-floor, that I may build an altar therein unto the LORD: thou shalt grant it me for the full price; that [c] the plague may be stayed from the people.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—We should conceal the faults of the godly with candour, if we can do it with faithfulness. Nay, if we cannot say good of persons, we had generally best say nothing of them. But, however long the powerful enemies of God and his church stand their ground, they shall be brought down at last, whether outward or inward. Nor need the saints be ever disheartened by their enemies' insolence and pride, while they have the Almighty God on their side. Yea, ordinarily those are marked for visible ruin who reproach and defy God and his people.

23 And Ornan said unto David, [d] Take it to thee, and let my lord the king do that which is good in his eyes: lo, I give thee the oxen also for burnt-offerings, and the thrashing-instruments for wood, and the wheat for the meat-offering; I give it all.

24 And king David said to Ornan, [e] Nay; but I will verily buy it for the full price: for I will not take that which is thine for the LORD, nor offer burnt-offerings without cost.

25 So [f] David gave to Ornan for the place six hundred shekels of gold by weight.*

26 And David built there an altar unto the LORD, and offered burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, and called upon the LORD; and [g] he answered him from heaven by fire upon the altar of burnt-offering.

27 And the LORD commanded the angel; and he put up his sword again into the sheath thereof.

28 ¶ At that time, when David saw that the LORD had answered him in the thrashing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite, then he sacrificed [h] there.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—While the saints remain on earth, Satan never lets them alone, nor despairs of success in his temptations. And to nothing does he more tempt men than to pride; though there is nothing that God more hates, or more severely punishes. Yea, he will use the strangest methods to do the people of God an injury. Sometimes the wicked are wiser in some things of God than the saints. And always, when the heart is averse, the work goes on heavily, and is left imperfect. It is a great mercy to be quickly brought to a sense of our sins. But, even when the Lord enables to repent, he does not always turn away the external punishment which his saints must suffer in their flesh, even when their spirit is saved. Our folly and rashness often reduce us to the most fearful straits and perplexities, when we have none but ourselves to blame. It is an evil and bitter thing to depart from the living God. Spreading is the influence of sin: and if God's mercy were not infinite, we should be utterly consumed. Under the judgments which we have deserved, it is therefore our only resource to flee to that God whom we have offended. He can not only stop short the execution of his judgment, but bring good out of evil, and make even sin itself an occasion of planting his church, and of a more vigorous preparation for his service. How pleasant is it all along to observe the providence of God marking his intended favours to the accursed sinners of the Gentiles! When his temple is to be built, the gold, silver, and brass must be procured from Gentiles! the place of it must

‖ The Mosaic census, (Num. 4. 3.) as well as that by David, (ver. 3.) was from 30 years and upwards. The change to 20 years was evidently in reference to the "rest," (ver. 25.) that David had given in fixing the temporary tabernacle in a permanent site, and preparing for the building of an immovable temple. The Levites being therefore delivered from their burdens, the younger members were adequate to the now lighter work; and the service of the Lord being now complicated, greater numbers were requisite for its due performance.—Ed.

24 ¶ These were the sons of Levi after the house of their fathers; even the chief of the fathers, as they were counted by number of names by their polls, that did the work for the service of the house of the LORD, from the age of [b] twenty years and upward.

25 For David said, The LORD God of Israel [c] hath given rest unto his people, [‡] that they may dwell in Jerusalem for ever:

26 And also unto the Levites; they shall no more carry the tabernacle, nor any vessels of it for the service thereof.

27 For, by the last words of David, the Levites were [§] numbered from twenty years old and above:[‖] be purchased from a Gentile: and almost all the workmen must be Gentiles, Tyrians, Canaanites, &c. And now to us Gentiles are preached, are given, the unsearchable riches of Christ.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Very different is the appearance of men when ruled by their pride, and when governed by the humbling grace of God. Such as have been highly favoured by God ought to be singularly careful and active in promoting his glory, and the welfare of his church. And the nearer our death approaches, we ought to be the more earnest in his work. Let us do all that we can in his service, when we are not allowed to do all that we would: and let us kindly assist others in the work which God hath denied us the honour of accomplishing. And, as the church of Christ is not built up by the sword of war, but by the gospel of peace, let us, as we have leisure from other avocations, employ it in the immediate service of God. Whatever difficulties lie in the way, God's clear call to a work, his affording us an opportunity, and his promise to invigorate and quicken our spirits, are sufficient encouragements. The more God has done for us, the greater are our obligations to serve him, and the more active we ought to be in his service. But truly humble souls make little account of all that they do for God's honour. And it is not indeed the extent of what is done, but the spirituality of the temper with which it is done, that next to Jesus' blood gives it value before God. Great courage and resolution are necessary in our spiritual work, as well as in our spiritual warfare, and a constant dependence on God by faith and prayer. If we enter upon the labours of others, we ought to be always improving; and every one is called to concur. Even the most zealous and active CHAPTER XXIV.

(1) The priests: 1—19. (2) The Levites: 20—31: distributed by lot into a variety of classes, for the more regular discharge of their work, according to their families.

NOW these are the divisions of the sons of Aaron. [a] The sons of Aaron; Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar.

2 But [b] Nadab and Abihu died before their father, and had no children: therefore Eleazar and Ithamar executed the priest's office.

3 And David distributed them, both Zadok [c] of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, according to their offices in their service.

4 And there were more chief men found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar; and thus were they divided. Among the sons of [d] Eleazar there were sixteen chief men of the house of their fathers, and eight among the sons of Ithamar, according to the house of their fathers.

5 Thus were they divided [e] by lot,* one sort with another; for the governors of the sanctuary, [f] and governors of the house of God, were of the sons of Eleazar, and of the sons of Ithamar.

6 And Shemaiah the son of Nethaneel the [g] scribe, one of the Levites, wrote them before the king, and the princes, and Zadok the priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, and before the chief of the fathers of the priests and Levites: one principal [†] household being taken for Eleazar, and one taken for Ithamar.

will need excitement or assistance. And if once our heart be thoroughly engaged to the Lord, our head, hand, estate, and influence on earth, will be all cheerfully employed for his honour.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—It is an honour to God, and an advantage to his church, to have a proper number of faithful ministers: and pleasing is the prospect when their number remarkably increases. It is necessary and honourable to enter on God's service as early as possible. Church affairs are likely to prosper when every one knows and attends to his particular work. And, in whatever station a person is fixed, it is always his duty to be zealous and diligent in God's service. But what sovereignty God manifests in men's stations! While the offspring of Aaron are dignified priests, those of Moses are but ordinary Levites; yet he always proportions men's burdens to their strength. And it is comely when every one in the church cheerfully applies himself to the meanest service to which he is called; and when the officers thereof heartily harmonize in working to one another's hands.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—Nothing ought to be done in the ordering of ecclesiastical offices but according to God's direction. What solemnity ought to take place in the settlement of ministers! and what order should be observed in the discharge of their work! But great will be the solemnity of the admission, and comely the orders, of the ransomed priests in their new covenant state, particularly in the temple above! How happy their blessed equality! No difference is made between bond or free, old or young; but Christ is all and in all!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—Great cheerfulness ought to be exercised in the worship and service of God; and great attention should be paid to the praising of God, as a leading business of his saints. And it is comely when those in power concur in promoting religion; the latter in perfecting what others before had begun. Of how little account are human distinctions before God! Before him master and scholar, elder and younger, stand on an equal level. And when we find the lot so much used in deciding in the great things of God as an immediate appeal to himself, how sinful and profane it must be to use it in trifles, or in what merely relates to diversion! As I regard JEHOVAH'S honour, let me never dare to recreate myself with cards or dice, or cast lots in matters of small value.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—Great order ought to take place in Christ's church; and great care with respect to the admission or dismission of members, or approaches to and returns from solemn work. What distinguished blessings attend those who, like Obed-edom, are careful of God's ark and interests in a day of distress! It is proper to bestow on works of piety and charity what God bestows upon us in extraordinary favours; and to preserve carefully whatever is dedicated to the Lord. While our life continues there is always something to be done for God. And the nearer our end approaches, the greater ought to be our the courses, which came in and went out month by month, throughout all the months of the year, of every course were twenty and four thousand.[a]

2 Over the first course, for the first month, was [b] Jashobeam the son of Zabdiel: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

3 Of the children of [c] Perez was the chief of all the captains of the host for the first month.

4 And over the course of the second month was [d] Dodai the Ahohite, and of his course was Mikloth also the ruler: in his course likewise were twenty and four thousand.

5 The third captain of the host, for the third month, was [e] Benaiah the son of Jehoiada, a [f] chief priest:[†] and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

6 This is that Benaiah who was [g] mighty among the thirty, and above the thirty: and in his course was Ammizabad his son.

7 The fourth captain, for the fourth month, was [h] Asahel the brother of Joab,[‡] and Zebadiah his son after him: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

8 The fifth captain, for the fifth month, was [i] Shamhuth the Izrahite: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

9 The sixth captain, for the sixth month, was [k] Ira the son of Ikkesh the Tekoite: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

10 The seventh captain, for the seventh month, was [l] Helez the Pelonite, of the children of Ephraim: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

11 The eighth captain, for the eighth month, was [m] Sibbecai the Hushathite, of the Zarhites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

12 The ninth captain, for the ninth month, was [n] Abiezer the Anetothite, of the Benjamites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

13 The tenth captain, for the tenth month, was [o] Maharai the Netophathite, of the Zarhites: and in his course were twenty and four thousand.

And, as one course could not with safety retire, either from garrison duty or field service, until the succeeding course had assembled, David had always on foot an effective force of 52,000 men—with an army of reserve, duly disciplined, capable of being called out and concentred upon any point of Canaan in a few days, and amounting in the whole to 312,000; perhaps the most powerful, yet most economic army that ever was organized for the defence of any country of similar extent.—Ed.

AND David [a] assembled all the princes of Israel, the princes of the tribes, and the captains of the companies that ministered to the king by course, and the captains over the thousands, and captains over the hundreds, and the stewards over all the substance and [*] possession of the king, and of his sons, with the [†] officers, and with the mighty men, and with all the valiant men, unto Jerusalem.

2 Then David the king [b] stood up upon his feet, and said, Hear me, my [c] brethren, and my people: As for me, I had [d] in mine heart to build an house of rest [e] for the ark of the covenant of the LORD, and for the [f] footstool [‡] of our God, and had made [g] ready for the building:

3 But God said unto me, [h] Thou shalt not build an house for my name, because thou hast been a man of war, and hast shed [§] blood.

4 Howbeit the LORD God of Israel chose [i] me before all the house of my father to be king over Israel for ever: for he hath chosen [k] Judah to be the ruler; and of the house of Judah, the house of my father; and among the sons of my father he liked me, to make me king over all Israel:

5 And of all [l] my sons, (for the LORD hath given me many sons,) he hath chosen [l] [m] Solomon my son to sit upon the throne [n] of the kingdom of the LORD over Israel.

6 And he said unto me, [o] Solomon thy son, he shall build my house and my courts: for I have chosen him to be my son, and I will be his father.

7 Moreover, [p] I will establish his kingdom for ever, if he be [*] constant to do my commandments and my judgments, as [q] at this day.

8 Now therefore, [r] in the sight of all Israel, the congregation of the LORD, and in the audience of our God, [s] keep and seek for all the commandments of the LORD your God; that ye may possess this good land, and leave it for an inheritance for your children after you for ever.

9 ¶ And thou, Solomon my son, [t] know [†] thou the God of thy father, and serve him [u] with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind; for [x] the LORD searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts: [y] if thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off for ever.

CHAPTER XXIX.

(1) David continues his directions to his subjects, exhorting them, from his own example, to contribute towards the building and furnishing of the temple: 1—5. (2) They accordingly make very generous presents: 6—9. (3) David offers up solemn prayers for them: 10—19. (4) He and the people join in solemn praise to God, sacrifices, and sacred feasting: 20—22. (5) Solomon is hereupon again enthroned: 22—25. (6) David dies, after having reigned forty years: 26—30.

FURTHERMORE, David the king said unto [a] all the congregation, Solomon my son, whom alone God hath chosen, is yet [b] young and tender,* and the work is great: for the [c] palace is not for man, but for the LORD God.

2 Now, I [d] have prepared with all my might for the house of my God, the gold for things to be made of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and the brass for things of brass, the iron for things of iron, and wood for things of wood; onyx-stones,† and stones to be set, glistering stones,‡ and of divers colours, and all manner of precious stones, and marble stones§ in abundance.

3 Moreover, [e] because I have set my affection to the house of my God, I have of mine own proper good,‖ of gold and silver, which I have given to the house of my God, over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house,

4 Even * three thousand talents of gold,† of the gold of [f] Ophir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses withal.

5 The gold for things of gold, and the silver for things of silver, and for all manner of work to be made by the hands of artificers. And who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the LORD?

6 ¶ Then the chief of the fathers, and princes of the tribes of Israel, and the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with the rulers over the king's work, offered willingly,

7 And gave for the service of the house of God, of gold, ‡ five thousand talents and ten thousand drams, and of silver ten thousand talents, and of brass § eighteen thousand talents, and one ‖ hundred thousand talents of iron.*

8 And they with whom precious stones were found gave them to the treasure of the house of the LORD, by the hand of Jehiel [g] the Gershonite.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—It is honourable to be removed and exalted to the church eternal, while we are earnestly exerting ourselves to leave all things well in the church below. Public settlements of religion and kingdoms ought to be conducted with the utmost prudence, that (if possible) all concerned may be satisfied. Rulers in the church and state should deal with those under them in the most affectionate and engaging manner. Respectful kindness has a powerful tendency to secure their cheerful service. And even when the settlement is divine, and cannot be altered, care ought to be taken to convince every one of its divinity. God puts his honourable work into what hands he pleases. But a solid knowledge of God, holy awe of him as the searcher of hearts, rewarder of piety, and punisher of apostasy, and a knowledge of our divine call, are necessary to excite us to his service. Every thing in God's church and worship ought to be framed exactly according to his inspired model, without the smallest intermixture of the inventions of men: and, in executing designs for his honour, we should be benevolent and cheerful. God's owning our fathers in his work, and especially the promises of his presence with us, should make us to renounce every unbelieving fear, and every degree of insolence. And when princes, priests, and people, heartily concur in God's work, the spiritual building rises gloriously.

LORD, on the morrow after that day, even a thousand bullocks, a thousand rams, and a thousand lambs, with their drink-offerings, and sacrifices in abundance for all Israel;

22 And did eat and drink [l] before[o] the LORD on that day with great gladness: and they made Solomon the son of David king [m] the second time,[†] and anointed him unto the LORD to be the chief governor, and [n] Zadok to be priest.

23 ¶ Then Solomon sat on [o] the throne of the LORD[‡] as king instead of David his father, and [p] prospered; and all Israel obeyed him.

24 And all the princes, and the mighty men, and all the sons likewise of king David, [q] submitted themselves unto Solomon the king.

25 And the LORD magnified Solomon exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and bestowed [r] upon him such royal majesty as had not been on any king before him in Israel.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—Young beginners ought to be strongly encouraged in the Lord's way. What we do for God should correspond with the excellencies of his nature and his kindness to us, and should be done with all our might; for that only is acceptable to God which is done from hearty affection to him. He loves a cheerful giver: and when our heart is right our hand will be open. But it is not enough that we do our own duty; we must also stir up others to theirs; and, to draw them to that which is good, we must show them an example. Such as set their affection upon God's service will think no pains or cost too much to bestow upon it: and what is bestowed in this manner usually brings its own reward in present comfort. It is a pleasure to saints to see God's work carried on with vigour, and to behold a mutual emulation in good works. It is a pleasure for them to die in the comfortable prospect of the church's prosperity: and that they leave behind them such as will zealously endeavour the maintenance of religion in its purity and power. But how delightful is it when dying saints have their mouths opened in prayer, praise, and thanksgiving! And how amazing the infinite excellencies and unbounded kindness of God! How unquestionable his right to our most exalted praise! Whatever gifts or grace men have, they have it all from him. And the more we do for him, we are the more indebted to him for employing and enabling us, and ought to walk the more humbly with him. And though our good works ought never to encourage our pride, yet should they be the matter of our praise. If we would retain good impressions on our spirit, we must commit the keeping of them to God. A heart sincerely fixed upon him is the greatest blessing we can here enjoy: and a holy rejoicing should enliven every act of our fellowship with him; particularly our feasting by faith on the sacrifice of his Son. For great is the honour God gives to those whom he calls to his work, while they serve him faithfully therein. But how short a step there is between a throne and a grave! The brightest stars that appear in the church must quickly set in death, and leave their room to others. Let therefore the divinely anointed, the no more dying Jesus, be all my joy and consolation.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE FIRST BOOK OF CHRONICLES.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 27. Multiply, like to the children of Judah.—That "children are a heritage of the Lord," is the statement of the Psalmist, (127. 3.) a truth upon which alone can be founded any real population statistics. Simeon (Num. 26. 14.) amounted merely to 22,200, when Judah (ver. 22.) amounted to 76,500. The statistical philosophy of the world will adopt any population theory, but the will and blessing of God, and confide in any regulation and check upon overgrowth, but that apostasy and idolatry which brought the divine wrath upon Israel. Yet the true philosophy is the Bible—for it is uniformly a history of facts.

CHAP. V. Ver. 1. His birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph.—By the law of God, (Deut. 21. 17.) the first-born was entitled to a double portion of a father's possessions. This right was transferred to Joseph, who inherited two shares of the land in Ephraim and Manasseh. Judah had but one share, but from him descended David and Messiah—the one the type, the other the real ruler.

CHAP. IX. Ver. 2. Nethinims.—The word signifies "given or offered," because given to the Levites to perform the servile offices of the sanctuary. They appear to have been originally the Gibeonites, (Josh. 9. 27.) by which name they seem to have been distinguished till the time of David—when he and his princes seem to have added a number of their vassals, (Ezra 8. 20.) the Gibeonites being inadequate to the now perfected ritual of the tabernacle service—after which period the name of Gibeonite seems to have been dropped, and the more dignified and more comprehensive title of Nethinim to have been adopted.

CHAP. X. Ver. 13. Saul died for his transgression which he committed.—That sickness and death are "the wages of sin," is the invariable doctrine of the Scripture. See 1 Cor. 11. 30. 1 John 5. 16. Even God's dear children die, because "sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned," Rom. 5. 12. To them, however, it is deliverance; to the impenitent a judgment.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 33. Fifty thousand which could keep rank.—A rare accomplishment in Eastern warfare, which is rather a succession of duels, in which each man pursues his own plan, than a combined movement in which one spirit wields the energies of the whole mass. The Septuagint and Vulgate, adopting a different reading of the Hebrew, render it, to assist, but we can see no good reason to prefer this reading.

CHAP. XIV. Ver. 8. The Philistines went up to seek David.—Why did they wait so long, during David's weakness and contests with the family of Saul? Hitherto as the head of a weak, divided, and self-wasted kingdom, they did not fear him. They perhaps had politically fomented the national strife, or encouraged the weaker against the stronger party, in hopes of the ruin of both by mutual wounds; but, now that all parties have united in favour of David, the Philistines are roused to a sense of danger, and assemble to crush him before he could be supposed able to concentrate his forces.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 31. These likewise cast lots over against their brethren the sons of Aaron.—Each course of priests required a corresponding course of Levites, who, accordingly, were chosen by lot, without any regard to seniority. David honours the solemn transaction by his royal presence—a lesson to all kings, by which they should learn, that while they may not intrude into the service of the sanctuary, (2 Chr. 26. 18.) it is their duty to take order that it be regularly organized.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 21. The princes and all the people will be wholly at thy commandment.—Not that David established an irresponsible despotism for his son—but he prophesies the perfect obedience and cordial co-operation of the princes under the power of conscience and grace. Ps. 110. 3.

THE SECOND BOOK
CHRONICLES.

THIS book greatly coincides with the first and second book of Kings, and contains a history of about 480 years, till the return from Babylon: only there we had the history of Israel and Judah mixed together; in this we have scarcely any thing but the history of David's descendants, much of which we had not before. In general, the good kings were successful, and the wicked severely punished, as Moses had predicted, Lev. xxvi. Deut. xxviii—xxxii. and iv. 25—30. Here we have the peaceable reign of Solomon, ch. i—ix.; the blemished reign of Rehoboam, x—xii; the short but busy reign of Abijah, xiii; the long and happy reign of Asa, xiv—xvi; the pious and prosperous reign of Jehoshaphat, xvii—xx; the infamous reigns of Jehoram and Ahaziah, xxi, xxii; the unsteady reigns of Joash and Amaziah, xxiii—xxv; the long, prosperous, but ill-concluded reign of Uzziah, xxvi; the regular reign of Jotham, xxvii; the idolatrous, profane, and miserable reign of Ahaz, xxviii; the reforming and glorious reign of Hezekiah, xxix—xxxii; the deforming and wicked reigns of Manasseh and Amon, xxxiii; the pious and reforming reign of Josiah, xxxiv, xxxv; and the reigns of Jehoahaz, Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah, destructive to the nation, xxxvi.

CHAPTER I.

(1) Solomon honours God by solemn sacrifices to him, and by supplications for necessary wisdom from him: 1—10. (2) God honours Solomon, by granting him his request in extraordinary wisdom and knowledge, attended with unparalleled riches and honour: 11, 12. (3) Solomon honours Israel, by the astonishing increase of their defensive force, grandeur, wealth, and trade: 13—17.

AND Solomon the son of David was [a] strengthened in his kingdom,* and the LORD his God was with [b] him, and [c] magnified him exceedingly.

2 Then Solomon [d] spake unto all Israel, to the captains of thousands and of hundreds, and to the judges, and to every governor in all Israel, the chief of the fathers.†

3 So Solomon, and all the congregation with him, went to the high place that was at [e] Gibeon; for there was the tabernacle [f] of the congregation of God, which Moses, the servant of the LORD, [g] had made in the wilderness.

4 [h] But the ark of God had David brought up from Kirjath-jearim to the place which David had prepared for it: for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem.

5 Moreover, [i] the brazen altar that Bezaleel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, ‡he put before the tabernacle of the LORD; and Solomon and the congregation sought unto it.§

6 And Solomon went up thither to the brazen altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of the congregation, and offered [k] a thousand burnt-offerings upon it.

7 ¶ [l] In that night did God appear unto Solomon, and said unto him, Ask what I shall give thee.

8 And Solomon said unto God, [m] Thou hast showed great mercy unto David my father, and hast made me [n] to reign in his stead.

9 Now, O LORD God, [o] let thy promise unto David my father be established: for thou [p] hast made me king over a people like * the dust of the earth in multitude.

10 [q] Give me now wisdom and knowledge, that I may go out and come in before this people: for who can judge this† thy people, that is so great?

11 And God said to Solomon, Because this [r] was in thine heart, and thou hast not asked riches, wealth,‡ or honour, nor the life of thine enemies, neither yet hast asked long life; but hast asked wisdom and knowledge for thyself, that thou mayest judge my people, over whom I have made thee king:

12 Wisdom and knowledge is [s] granted unto thee; and I will give thee riches, and wealth, and honour, such as [t] none of the kings have had that have been before thee, neither shall there any after thee have the like.

13 ¶ Then Solomon came from [u] his journey to the high place that was at Gibeon to Jerusalem, from before the tabernacle of the congregation, and reigned [x] over Israel.

14 [y] And Solomon gathered chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, which he placed in the chariot-cities,§ and with the king at Jerusalem.

15 And the king made silver and gold at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones,‖ and cedar-trees made he as the [z] sycamore-trees that are in the vale for abundance.

16 [a] And Solomon had horses brought out of Egypt, and linen yarn: the king's merchants received the linen yarn at a price.

17 And they fetched up, and brought forth out of Egypt, a chariot for six hundred shekels of silver, and an horse for an hundred and fifty: and so brought they out horses for all the kings of the Hittites, and for the kings of Syria, by their means.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—The more God does for us, the more we ought to do for him, in order to testify our affection and gratitude. A reign, or an undertaking, begun with the solemn service of God, and with earnest prayer for his direction and assistance, is likely to turn out happily. And great is the influence of a good magistrate's example. It is not outward appearances, but inward desires, that most certainly characterize persons. And if we have faith, we shall count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ, and for skill to serve him in our station. And as the eminency of our predecessors or stations render remarkable qualifications necessary, so the infinite mercy of our God, and his promise, encourage us to seek such things. God readily gives his people exceedingly above what they ask or think: and the most disinterested prayers turn out most to our advantage: while those, who eagerly pur-

CHAPTER II.

(1) Solomon's determination to build a temple for God and a palace for himself: 1, 2, 17, 18. (2) His request to Huram king of Tyre to furnish him with artists and materials: 3—10. (3) Huram's answer and compliance: 11—16.

A. M. 2989. B. C. 1015.

AND Solomon determined[e] to build an house [a] for the name of the LORD, and an house [b] for his kingdom.

2 And Solomon [c] told out threescore and ten thousand men to bear burdens, and fourscore thousand to hew in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred to oversee them.[†]

3 ¶ And Solomon sent to [d] Huram the king of Tyre, saying, As thou didst deal with David my father, and [e] didst send him cedars to build him an house to dwell therein, even so deal with me.

4 Behold, [f] I build an house to the name of the LORD my God, to [g] dedicate it to him, and to burn before him [‡] sweet incense, and for the continual show-bread, and for the burnt-offerings morning and evening, on the sabbaths, and on the new-moons, and on the solemn feasts of the LORD our God. This is an ordinance for ever to Israel.

5 And the house which I build is [h] great: for [i] great is our God above all gods.[§]

6 [k] But who [‖] is able to build him an house, seeing the heaven and heaven of heavens cannot contain him? [l] who am I then, that I should build him an house, save only to burn sacrifice before him?

7 Send me now therefore a man cunning to work in gold, and in silver, and in brass, and in iron, and in purple, and crimson, and blue, and that can skill to grave with the cunning men that are with me in Judah and in Jerusalem, whom [m] David my father did provide.

8 [n] Send me also cedar-trees, fir-trees, and [o] algum-trees,* out of Lebanon: (for I know that thy servants can skill to cut timber in Lebanon:[†]) and, behold, my servants shall be with thy servants,

9 Even to prepare me timber in abundance: for the house which I am about to build shall be [p] wonderful great.[‡]

10 And, behold, I will give to thy servants, the hewers that cut timber, twenty thousand measures of beaten wheat, and twenty thousand measures of barley, and twenty thousand baths of wine, and twenty thousand baths of oil.[§]

11 ¶ Then Huram the king of Tyre answered in writing, which he sent to Solomon, Because the LORD hath loved his people, he hath made thee king over them.

12 Huram said moreover, [q] Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, that made heaven and earth, who hath given to David the king a wise son, * endued with prudence and understanding, that might build an house for the LORD, and an house for his kingdom.

13 And now I have sent a cunning man, endued with understanding, of Huram [r] my father's;

14 The son of a woman of the daughters of [s] Dan, and his father was a man of Tyre, skilful to work in gold, and in silver, in brass, in iron, in stone, and in timber, in purple, in blue, and in fine linen, and in crimson; also to grave any manner of graving, and to find out every device which shall be put to him, with thy cunning men,[†] and with the cunning men of my lord David thy father.

15 Now therefore the wheat, and the barley, the oil, and the wine, [t] which my lord hath spoken of, let him send unto his servants:

16 And we will cut wood out of Lebanon, [‡] as much as thou shalt need: and we will bring it to thee in floats by sea to [u] Joppa;[§] and thou shalt carry it up to Jerusalem.

17 ¶ [x] And Solomon numbered all the strangers that were in the land of Israel, after the numbering wherewith David his father had numbered them; and they were found an hundred and fifty thousand, and three thousand and six hundred.[‖]

18 And he set [y] threescore and ten thousand of them to be bearers of burdens, and fourscore thousand to be hewers in the mountain, and three thousand and six hundred overseers to set the people a work.

THEN [a] Solomon began to build the house of the LORD at Jerusalem [b] in mount Moriah, where the LORD appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the thrashing-floor of Ornan the [c] Jebusite.

2 And he began to build [d] in the second day of the second month, in the fourth year of his reign.

3 ¶ Now these are the things wherein Solomon was instructed for the building of the house of God: the length by cubits, after the first measure,* was [†] threescore cubits, and the breadth [‡] twenty cubits.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—We should always prefer the honour of God, and the welfare of his church, to our own accommodations. It is very desirable to make our father's creditable friends our own: and if we have the knowledge of the true God, we should labour to make others acquainted with it. Revelation will recommend itself, on trial, to every wise man. But whatever we do for God is in itself unworthy of his regard. And we ought to avoid giving others any ground to misapprehend his greatness and glory; yea, should bring all that we can to admire and adore him, and use their help in promoting his honour. And let us now rejoice that the Gentiles are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ.

* In 1 Kin. 7. 24, we find, twelve "knops;" here, twelve oxen. Some expositors account for this variation, by the supposed error of a transcriber mistaking one word for another, to which, in the original, it bears a considerable similitude. But where is the necessity for this unauthorized violence? May there not have been both 12 knops, and 12 oxen corresponding to each other, or in some way so identical as to be called indifferently by the one name or the other? It is right to observe, that Houbigant asserts an error in the translation, and renders it according to the Arabic, not oxen, but grapes, the cluster of which might well correspond to the knop in the former narrative: but the correctness of this criticism is denied by Dr A. Clarke, who solves the difficulty by supposing an error in a transcriber,—a mode of solution the most common, but most jealously to be watched, and seldom if ever admitted.—Ed.

CHAPTER IV.

The brazen and golden furniture for the temple.

MOREOVER he made an [a] altar of brass, twenty cubits the length thereof, and twenty cubits the breadth thereof, and ten cubits the height thereof.

2 ¶ [b] Also he made a molten sea of ten cubits from brim to brim, round in compass, and five cubits the height thereof; and a line of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

3 [c] And under it was the similitude of oxen,* which did compass it round about: ten in a cubit, compassing the sea round about. Two rows of oxen were cast when it was cast.

4 It stood [d] upon twelve oxen, three looking toward the north, and three looking toward the west, and three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east: and the sea was set above upon them, and all their hinder parts were inward.

5 And the thickness of it was an hand-breadth, and the brim of it like the work of the brim of a cup, with flowers of lilies; and it received and held three thousand baths.†

6 ¶ He made also [e] ten lavers, and put five on the right hand and five on the left, to wash in them: such things as they offered for the burnt-offering they washed in them; but the [f] sea was for the priests to wash in.

7 And he made ten candlesticks of gold, according to their form,‡ and set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

8 He made also [g] ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side, and five on the left: and he made an hundred basons of gold.

9 ¶ Furthermore he made [h] the court of the priests, and the great [i] court, and doors for the court, and overlaid the doors of them with brass.

10 And he [k] set the sea on the right side of the east end, over against the south.

11 ¶ And Huram made [l] the pots, and the shovels, and the basons. And Huram finished the work that he was to make for king Solomon for the house of God;

12 To wit, [m] the two pillars, and the pommels,§ and the chapiters which were on the top of the two pillars, and the two wreaths to cover the two pommels of the chapiters which were on the top of the pillars;

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Every circumstance in the worship of God must be ordered according to his appointment: and if God meet with us in a place or ordinance, let us hope that he will do it again, if it be for his glory and our good. Meanwhile let me consider Jesus, who came in the promised time and spot, as the great temple of our fellowship with God. The dignity, glory, fulness, and usefulness of his person, particularly in his exalted state, infinitely transcend this astonishing structure of Solomon: and angels, ministers, and saints shall always admire his glory. With respect to the temple of his church, of his saints, and of heaven, he is the foundation, the wall, the door, the pillars, the ark, the table, the altars, the light, the sea, the laver, yea, the ALL in ALL.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—What a mercy is it that Jesus, his church, and heavenly state, are suited to his people's condition! As the great atonement, and as the fountain which cleanses from all sin, he is openly exhibited before us, and accessible to us, in the ordinances of the gospel. By him, as such, we have access to dwell in God's house, enjoy his light, feed on his fulness, and live by his intercession, through which our services are accepted. Yea, under the gospel we have more than a * tenfold exhibition of Christ, in his cleansing virtue, his illuminating and soul-nourishing influence. He can make all tempers, gifts, and graces, useful in his church, brass, as well as gold. And great is their honour who lay out their eminent gifts in the service of Christ.

* There were ten times as many lavers, candlesticks, and tables of show-bread in the temple as in the tabernacle.

4 And he said, [r] Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, who hath with his hands [s] fulfilled that which he spake with his mouth to my father David, saying,

5 [h] Since the day that I brought forth my people out of the land of Egypt I chose no city among all the tribes of Israel to build an house in, that my name might be there; neither chose I any man to be a ruler over my people Israel:*

6 But I have chosen [i] Jerusalem, that my name might be there; and have chosen David to be over my people Israel.

7 Now [k] it was in the heart of David my father to build an house for the name of the LORD God of Israel.

8 But the LORD said to David my father, Forasmuch as it was in thine heart to build an house for my name, thou didst [l] well in that it was in thine heart:

9 Notwithstanding [m] thou shalt not build the house; but thy son which shall come forth out of thy loins, he shall build the house for my name.

10 The LORD therefore hath performed his word that he hath spoken: for [n] I am risen up in the room of David my father, and am set on the throne of Israel, as [o] the LORD promised, and [p] have built the house for the name of the LORD God of Israel:

11 [q] And in it have I put the ark, wherein is the covenant of the LORD,† that he made with the children of Israel.

12 ¶ And [r] he stood before the altar of the LORD, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands,

13 (For Solomon had made a brazen [s] scaffold, of five cubits long, and five cubits broad, and three cubits high, and had set it in the midst of the [t] court; and upon it he stood, and [u] kneeled down upon his knees before all the congregation of Israel, and [x] spread forth his hands toward heaven,)

14 And said, O LORD God of Israel, [y] there is no God like thee in the heaven, nor in the earth; [z] which keepest covenant, and showest mercy unto thy servants that [a] walk before thee with all their hearts:

15 Thou which hast kept with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him; and spakest with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day.

16 Now therefore, O LORD God of Israel, [b] keep with thy servant David my father that which thou hast promised him, saying, [c] There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit upon the throne of Israel; yet so that thy children take heed to their way, [d] to walk in my law, as thou hast walked before me.

17 [e] Now then, O LORD God of Israel, let thy word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto thy servant David.

18 (But [f] will God in very deed dwell with men on the earth? Behold, [g] heaven and the heaven of heavens* cannot contain thee; how much less this house which I have built!)

19 Have [h] respect therefore to the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O LORD my God, to hearken unto the cry and the prayer which thy servant [i] prayeth before thee:

20 That thine [k] eyes may be open upon this house day and night, upon the place whereof thou hast said that thou wouldest put thy name there; to hearken unto the prayer which thy servant prayeth [l] toward this place.

21 Hearken therefore unto the supplications of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, which they shall [m] make toward this place: hear thou from thy dwelling-place, even from heaven; and when thou hearest, [n] forgive.†

22 ¶ If a man sin against his neighbour, [o] and an oath be laid upon him to make him swear, and the oath come [p] before thine altar in this house;

23 Then hear thou from heaven, and do, and judge thy servants, by [q] requiting the wicked, by recompensing his way upon his own head; and by [r] justifying the righteous, by giving him according to his righteousness.

24 ¶ And if thy people Israel [s] be put to the worse before the enemy, because they [t] have sinned against thee; and shall [u] return and confess thy name, and pray, and make supplication before thee [‡] in this house;

25 Then hear thou from the heavens, and forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and [x] bring them again unto the land which thou gavest to them and to their fathers.

26 ¶ When the [y] heaven is shut up, and there is no rain, because they have sinned against thee; yet if they pray toward this place, and confess thy name, and turn from their sin, [z] when thou dost afflict them;

27 Then hear thou from heaven, and forgive the sin of thy servants, and of thy people Israel, when thou [a] hast taught them the good way wherein they should walk; and [b] send rain upon thy land, which thou hast given unto thy people for an inheritance.

28 ¶ If there [c] be dearth in the land, if there be pestilence, if there be blasting, or mildew, locusts, or caterpillars; if their [d] enemies besiege

33 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling-place, and do according to all that the stranger calleth to thee for; that all [m] people of the earth may know thy name, and fear thee, as doeth thy people Israel, and may know that [§] this house which I have built is called by thy name.[‖]

34 ¶ [n] If thy people go out to war against their enemies by the way that thou shalt send them, and they [o] pray unto thee toward this city which thou hast chosen, and the house which I have built for thy name;

35 Then hear thou from the heavens their prayer and their supplication, and [p] maintain their [q] cause.

36 ¶ [r] If they sin against thee, (for there is [*] no man which sinneth not,) and thou be angry with them, and deliver them over before their enemies, and [*] they carry them away captives unto a land far off or near;[†]

37 Yet if [t] they [‡] bethink themselves in the land whither they are carried captive, and turn and pray unto thee in the land of their captivity, saying, We have sinned, we have done amiss, and have dealt wickedly;

38 If they return to thee [u] with all their heart, and with all their soul, in the land of their captivity, whither they have carried them captives, and pray toward their land, which thou gavest unto their fathers, and toward the city which thou hast chosen, and toward the house which I have built for thy name:

39 Then hear thou from the heavens, even from thy dwelling-place, their prayer and their supplications, and maintain their cause, and forgive thy people which have sinned against thee.

40 ¶ Now, my God, let, I beseech thee, thine eyes be open, and let thine ears be attent [*] unto the prayer that is made in this place.

41 Now therefore arise, O LORD God, into thy resting-place, thou, and the ark of thy strength: let thy priests, O LORD God, be clothed with salvation,[†] and let thy saints rejoice in goodness.

42 O LORD God, turn not away the face of thine anointed: remember the mercies of David thy servant.[‡]

6 [h] And the priests waited on their offices; the Levites also with instruments of music of the LORD, which David the king had made to praise the LORD, because his mercy endureth for ever, when David praised [‡] by their ministry; and the priests [i] sounded trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

7 Moreover, [k] Solomon hallowed the middle of the court that was before the house of the LORD: for there he offered burnt-offerings, and the fat of the peace-offerings, because the brazen

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—How honourable is it when we perform great enterprises, not from pride, but in prosecution of our parents' gracious purposes, and to fulfil the promise, obey the command, and honour the name of the Lord! And while we view this temple as a figure of Christ, let us, whether Jews or Gentiles, deal with God only through him. Let us have fixed views of God's infinite perfection, power, faithfulness, omnipresence, omniscience, and of our own meanness and vileness before him. Let us trust in, love, fear, and honour this God of infinite excellencies. In regard to his holiness, and heart-searching eye, let us indulge no secret pollution. And, conscious of our sinfulness, let us make solemn prayer our first and our last resource in all our straits. Even when distress has driven us to him, he will in nowise cast us out. His unbounded forgiveness will make way for all necessary mercies to us. For though we may not expect to be heard for the sake of our prayers, yet must we not expect to be heard without them. And thanks be to God that Gentile strangers have an open and free access to him, even to his seat. Happy is that church where all ranks, princes, ministers, and people, are under the special influence of God, as their own and their father's God in Christ. Great is their salvation, and sweet their joy.

altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt-offerings, and the meat-offerings, and the fat.

8 ¶ Also at the same time Solomon kept [l] the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great congregation, [m] from the entering in of Hamath unto the river of Egypt.*

9 And in the [n] eighth day they made [†] a solemn assembly: for they kept the dedication of the altar seven days, and the feast[‡] seven days.

10 And on the [o] three and twentieth day of the seventh month he sent the people away into their tents, [p] glad and merry in heart, for the goodness that the LORD had showed unto David, and to Solomon, and to Israel his people.

11 Thus [q] Solomon finished the house of the LORD, and the king's house: and all that came into Solomon's heart to make in the house of the LORD, and in his own house, he prosperously effected.

12 ¶ And the [r] LORD appeared to Solomon by night,[§] and said unto him, I have [s] heard thy prayer, and [t] have chosen this place to myself for an house of sacrifice.

13 If [u] I shut up heaven that there be no rain, or if I command the locusts to devour the land, or if I send pestilence among my people;

14 If my people, which are called by my name, shall [x] humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land.

15 Now [y] mine eyes shall be open, and mine ears attent [‖] unto the prayer that is made in this place.*

16 For now have [z] I chosen and sanctified this house, that my name may be there for ever: and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.[†]

17 And as for thee, [a] if thou wilt walk before me, as David thy father walked, and do according to all that I have commanded thee, and shalt observe my statutes and my judgments;

18 Then will I stablish the throne of thy kingdom, [b] according as I have covenanted with David thy father, saying, There shall not fail thee a man to be ruler in Israel.

19 [c] But if ye turn away, and forsake my statutes and my commandments, which I have set before you, and shall go and serve other gods, and worship them;

20 Then will I [d] pluck them up by the roots out of my land which I have given them; and this house, which I have sanctified for my name, will I cast out of my sight, and will make it [e] to be a proverb and a byword among all nations.

21 And this house, which is high, shall be an astonishment to [f] every one that passeth by it; so that he shall say, [g] Why hath the LORD done thus unto this land, and unto this house?*

22 And it shall be answered, Because they [h] forsook the LORD God of their fathers, which brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, and laid hold on other gods, and worshipped them, and served them; [i] therefore hath he brought all this evil upon them.

Reflections upon Chap. VII.—What pleasure God takes in the earnest and solemn prayer of faith!—he is always ready to give an honourable and gracious return! How infinite is the majesty of God! What solemn awe the manifestations of his presence do or should produce: and what high praises and cheerful aboundings in the worship of God! Always on this side hell praise is our duty: and if we delight in God's service, we shall not think the time long. All our prosperity in our undertakings is from God: and when we make his glory our first concern, we may expect success. He takes pleasure in the prosperity of his servants; and in keeping his commandments there is a great reward. But dreadful is the danger, if, after remarkable favours received, we turn again to folly: and terrible the work that obstinate apostasy from God makes in nations, churches, and ordinances!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—In the most profound peace we had need to prepare for war, spiritual or temporal. It is an honour for kings to manifest the utmost regard to their subjects. How certainly, however slowly, Noah's curse of servitude fixes at last upon the descendants of Canaan! They become slaves to the offspring of Shem, through the influence of the Lord his God. It is necessary to set bounds to our desires after created things, as they are apt to become inordinate and insatiable. It is no less necessary to keep up proper distinctions between things sacred and common. And we shall find difficulty therein, if we ally ourselves in marriage, or in any other way, with the ungodly. What an excellent foundation, for even external prosperity, is a prudent and active zeal for, and constant attendance on, the worship of God! But, alas! how great the folly that, while men will risk and do so much for earthly treasures, so little is done to obtain the riches which endure for ever!

25 ¶ And Solomon [e] had four thousand stalls[§] for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen; whom he bestowed in the chariot-cities, and with the king at Jerusalem.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—God honours such as honour him. They who know the value of divine wisdom and truth, will grudge no pains to search for it. They only are truly great, whose piety and zeal for God distinguish them. And whatever gifts we enjoy, they are but lent us for the edifying of the body of Christ, and ought to be employed with diligence and care. How comely is good, and especially religious, order in families, particularly those of princes! Happy are they who have constant access to, and intimacy with, the intelligent and zealous fearers of God! and we ought to be thankful for the gifts and graces of God to others; especially if made instrumental for our good. Great souls are ever generous; and ought to be so, according to their stations and ability. But not the most engaging things on earth ought long to detain us from that home, in which God calls us to act for his glory. What a transient blaze is all the glory and wealth of earth! Ere it be long, Solomon's family shall be poor and contemned. Yet God seems, as it were, unwilling to remember those sins against Solomon, or any of his people, of which they have sincerely repented. What a sudden gloom death spreads over the brightest honours on earth! But rejoice, my soul, that Jesus has wisdom, has wealth, has glory, and fame, which neither death nor eternity can ever sully or consume! Of him it may truly be said, the half has

6 He built even [f] Beth-lehem,† and [g] Etam, and [h] Tekoa,

7 And [i] Beth-zur, and Shoco, and Adullam,

8 And [k] Gath, and [l] Mareshah, and [m] Ziph,

11 And he fortified the strong holds, and put [q] captains in them, and store of victual, and of oil and wine.

12 And in every several city he put shields and spears, and made them exceeding strong, having Judah and Benjamin on his side.

13 ¶ And the priests and the Levites that were in all Israel resorted to him out of all their coasts.

14 (For the Levites left [r] their suburbs and their possession, and came to Judah and Jerusalem: for [s] Jeroboam and his sons had cast them off from executing the priest's office unto the LORD:

16 And [u] after them, out of all the tribes of Israel, such as set their hearts to seek the LORD God of Israel came to Jerusalem, to sacrifice unto the LORD God of their fathers.

17 So they strengthened the kingdom of Judah, and made Rehoboam the son of Solomon strong, three years: for [x] three years they walked in the way of David and Solomon.§

20 And after her he took [z] Maachah the daughter of Absalom; which bare him Abijah, and Attai, and Ziza, and Shelomith.

21 And Rehoboam loved Maachah the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and his concubines: (for he took [a] eighteen wives, and threescore concubines, and begat twenty and eight sons and threescore daughters.)

not been told us. Happy are they that wait around this exalted King of Israel—chosen through the love of the eternal Father—and placed to do justice and judgment, and to establish his people in eternal glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—The best of rulers cannot give every one content. Men are readier to complain of the expense of government, than to acknowledge the benefit which they receive from it; and turbulent and ungrateful spirits will find fault where they can scarcely find the shadow of a reason. Young heads are ordinarily too hot to be wise counsellors: and many ruin their own interests by trampling on and provoking their inferiors. Moderate counsels are generally the most safe and prudent. Soft answers disarm men's passions, when harsh ones render them furious: and when the affairs of church or state are in a ferment, rough proceedings do but make them worse and worse. Most men need no more to ruin them than to be given up to their own pride and passion. But O the wisdom and power of God, who can fulfil his counsels by men's folly and fury! Very uncertain are all earthly enjoyments: nor can 23 And he dealt wisely, and [b] dispersed of all his children throughout all the countries of Judah and Benjamin, unto every fenced city; and he gave them victual in abundance: and he desired [c] many wives.

6 Whereupon the princes of Israel and the king [i] humbled themselves; and they said, The LORD is righteous.

7 And when the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, the word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, They have humbled themselves; therefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them [i] some deliverance; and my [*] wrath shall not be poured out upon Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak.

the wisest secure them to his next heir. God often visits the iniquity of the fathers upon the children: but, amidst all the heat of his anger, he never breaks his promise.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—How often is war too rashly undertaken! But it is in vain to withstand the purposes of God. And it is honourable to drop our darling attempts when he requires it. It is more prudent to make the best we can of what we have, and to take all lawful pains to secure it, than to fight for more. When nations are forsaking God, his faithful ministers are often singularly distressed; and yet none are more useful for strengthening a kingdom that deals kindly with them. It is proper that those who fear God should leave their country when his ministers and worship are expelled from it. No secular advantage ought to carry or keep us where we must make shipwreck of faith and a good conscience. That is really best for us which is best for our souls. And, in all our choices, religion should take the lead of outward advantages. If for God's sake we forsake our worldly all, we shall one day find ourselves great gainers. Such as suffer for righteousness' sake ought to be received by us with open arms. And never should we cleave more closely to Christ's faithful ministers than when they are persecuted. Seasons of persecution especially distinguish the precious from the vile. Nothing so strengthens a nation as when all ranks concur to walk in the way of the Lord. But, alas! how often do princes weaken their kingdoms, by their indulgence of sinful lust, and following of long-rooted customs! And happy is it if those, who begin foolishly, would but end wisely in the right disposal of their children or their property!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—They, who in adversity appear faithful for God, often forsake him in their prosperity. Nay, earthly prosperity is a common occasion of ruin to the soul.—Human supports and fenced cities prove but refuges of lies when God withdraws or becomes our destroyer. And, to punish men's sins, he often turns their old friends, or even relations, into inveterate enemies. God's word comes to men with peculiar advantage when awakening providences concur with it: and stupid and self-conceited sinners must have the plainest providences explained to them before they understand them. They, whom the Lord hath left, ought to blame themselves as the guilty cause, and to humble themselves under his mighty hand: for it is vain to project means of defence if we continue unhumbled for our sins. The greatest kings and princes must either be humbled or ruined: and we are never humbled aright till we justify God in our sufferings. But how God's bowels yearn towards repenting of Uriel of [c] Gibeah:) and [d] there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam.

3 And Abijah [*] set the battle in array, with an army of valiant men of war, even [*] four hundred thousand chosen men: Jeroboam also set the battle in array against him with eight hundred thousand chosen men, being mighty men of valour.[†]

4 ¶ And Abijah stood up upon mount [f] Zemaraim, which is in mount Ephraim, and said, [g] Hear me, thou Jeroboam, and all Israel;

5 Ought ye not to know that the LORD God of Israel [h] gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and to his sons by [i] a covenant of salt?[‡]

6 Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, is risen up, and hath [k] rebelled against his lord.

7 And there are gathered unto him [l] vain men, the children of Belial, and have strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was [m] young[§] and tenderhearted, and [n] could not withstand them.

8 And now ye think to withstand [o] the kingdom of the LORD in the hand of the sons of David; and ye be [p] a great multitude, and there are with you golden calves, which Jeroboam made you for gods.

9 [q] Have ye not cast out[‖] the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and have [r] made you priests after the manner of the nations of other lands? so that whosoever cometh [*] to consecrate himself with a young bullock and seven rams,[•] the same may be a priest of them that are no gods.

10 But as for us, [t] the LORD is our God, and we have not forsaken him; and the priests, which minister unto the LORD, are [u] the sons of Aaron, and the Levites wait upon their business:

11 [x] And they burn unto the LORD, every morning and every evening, burnt-sacrifices and sweet incense: the [y] show-bread also set they in order upon the pure table; and [z] the candlestick of gold, with the lamps thereof, to burn every evening: for we keep the charge of the LORD our God; but ye have forsaken him.

12 And, behold, God himself is with us [a] for our captain, and his priests with [b] sounding trumpets to cry alarm against you. O children of Israel, [c] fight ye not against the LORD God of your fathers; for ye shall not prosper.[•]

13 ¶ But Jeroboam caused [d] an ambushment to come about behind them: so they were before Judah, and the ambushment was behind them.

14 And when Judah looked back, behold, the battle was before and behind: and they [e] cried unto the LORD, and the priests sounded with the trumpets.

15 Then the men of Judah gave a shout: and as the men of Judah shouted, it came to pass, that God smote Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah.

16 And the children of Israel fled before Judah; and God delivered them into their hand.

17 And Abijah and his people slew them with a great slaughter: so there fell down slain of Israel [f] five hundred thousand chosen men.[†]

18 Thus the children of Israel were [g] brought under at that time, and the children of Judah prevailed, because they [h] relied upon the LORD God of their fathers.

19 And Abijah [i] pursued after Jeroboam, and took cities from him, [k] Beth-el with the towns thereof, and Jeshanah with the towns thereof, and [l] Ephraim with the towns thereof.

20 Neither did Jeroboam recover strength again in the days of Abijah: and the LORD [m] struck him, and he died.

21 ¶ But Abijah waxed mighty, and married [n] fourteen wives,[‡] and begat twenty and two sons, and sixteen daughters.

22 And the rest of the acts of Abijah, and his ways, and his sayings, are written in the [§] story of the prophet [o] Iddo.

prodigals! How forward he is to meet them with merciful deliverances who humble themselves before him! Whenever we have hearts humbled under troubles, they have done their work, and shall either be removed, or have their nature altered into tokens of kindness. And it is a great mercy to a sinful people if God but grant a partial deliverance. It is well if the guilt be removed, though we should smart in the flesh for it. They who reckon God a hard master, and his service burdensome, will find the slavery and wages of their lusts but a miserable exchange. It is far more honourable and safe to endure the utmost hardships in obeying God, than to risk the punishments of disobedience. But how easily God can restrain the fury of the most outrageous conquerors by his invisible arm, and set limits to their ravages! and happy is it when, in evil times, he preserves a remnant for himself. Judgments, which make us learn righteousness, are mercies in disguise. But, if our heart be not engaged in the service of God, all is naught. They, who never had their heart fixed to him, and never made real religion their principal business, are easily drawn to any thing evil. Though God's judgments may force men to their prayers, nothing but almighty grace can convert them to himself. And, alas! how many in his church do but cumber the ground while they live, and in a moment go down to their grave!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—What multitudes do wicked princes render subservient to their lusts! Before men proceed to the extremities of war, every peaceable method of accommodation ought to be tried; as, at least, all the death on the one side is murder, and often so on both. Many can talk finely of God and his service, who have no heart-love to them, or any correspondent practice. What an advantage in war is it to have a righteous cause and a powerful and gracious God on our side; and when we evidence it by not forsaking him, but by cleaving to his ministers and ordinances! But dangerous is their case who have ambition that cannot be satisfied, and who are emboldened by mere success! Prosperous iniquity is but a short-lived joy. They who have God their enemy, will find all human efforts in vain. And the fair warnings, that render them inexcusable in their obstinacy, will occasion their more distinguished ruin. How often are princes occupied in laying ambushments of war and death, when they should be treating of solid and lasting peace! But earnest supplications to God are more powerful than carnal stratagems: and he often lets his people fall into the most imminent danger, to awaken their cries, exercise their faith, and make their deliverance the more glorious. But, if we are enabled to trust in him, we shall not be moved. The prayer of faith and shouts of victory are inseparable. Civil wars and disputes among brethren are generally the most bitter and bloody: and what multitudes of souls doth a furious war hurry headlong and thoughtless into an eternal state, and most of them into the depths of hell! Nor can the mightiest escape the strokes of God's wrath and darts of death.

CHAPTER XIV.

(1) Asa begins his reign in peace, piety, and zealous reformation: 1—5. (2) He fortifies his cities, and recruits his army: 6—8. (3) He obtains a glorious victory over a prodigious host of Ethiopians: 9—15.

A. M. 3049. B. C. 955.

SO Abijah [a] slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and [b] Asa his son reigned in his stead. In his days the land was quiet ten years.

2 And Asa did that which [c] was good and right in the eyes of the LORD his God:*

3 For he took away [d] the altars of the strange gods, and the [e] high places, and brake down the [†] images, and cut down the groves;

4 And [f] commanded Judah to seek the LORD God of their fathers, and to do the law and the commandment.

5 [g] Also he took away out of all the cities of Judah the high places and the [‡] images: and the kingdom was quiet before him.

6 ¶ And [h] he built fenced cities in Judah: [i] for the land had rest, and he had no war in those years; because the LORD had given him rest.

7 Therefore he said unto Judah, Let us build these cities, and make about them walls, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us; [k] because we have sought the LORD our God, we have sought him, and he hath given us rest on every side: so they built and prospered.

8 ¶ And Asa had [l] an army of men that bare targets and spears, out of Judah three hundred thousand; and out of Benjamin, that bare shields and drew bows, two hundred and fourscore thousand: all these were mighty men of valour.[§]

9 ¶ [m] And there came out against them Zerah the Ethiopian, with an host of a [n] thousand thousand,[‖] and three hundred chariots; and came unto Mareshah.

10 Then Asa went out against him, and they set the battle in array in the valley of [o] Zephathah at Mareshah.

11 And Asa [p] cried unto the LORD his God, and said, LORD, [q] it is nothing with thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power: help us, O LORD our God; for [r] we rest on thee, and in thy name we go against this multitude. O LORD, thou art our God; let not man prevail against thee.

12 So the LORD [s] smote the Ethiopians before Asa, and before Judah; and the Ethiopians fled.*

13 And Asa, and the people that were with him, pursued them unto Gerar: and the Ethiopians were overthrown, that they could not recover themselves; for they were destroyed before the LORD, and before his host: and they carried away very much spoil.

14 And they smote all the cities round about Gerar;[†] for the fear of the LORD came upon them: and they spoiled all the cities; for there was exceeding much spoil in them.

15 They smote also the tents of cattle, and carried away sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

AND [a] the Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded:

3 Now for [e] a long season† Israel hath been without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—What a mercy to a church and nation are pious and reforming princes! And it is comely and pleasing when those, who attempt to reform others, show themselves proper patterns of virtue and devotion: when they act with due patience and prudence, as well as holy zeal; seeking to draw men from their abominations, without offering violence to their persons. However difficult or dangerous it may appear to repress the torrent of iniquity, zeal for God, and dependence on his assistance, will work wonders. Nay, when princes act with due steadiness and zeal in the suppression of profaneness and idolatry, they often find less difficulty then they at first imagined. Men's consciences side with the reforming laws, even while their inclinations are against them. Outward peace and prosperity must be considered as a great mercy. And this reward of fidelity to, and trust in, God, should be improved to promote true religion: yet in the most profound peace it is proper to prepare for war: the clouds will return after the rain. God often tries his people with great danger and distress while they are proceeding in their duty, in the work of reformation: but there is no craft or might that can prevail against the Lord their God. And in such cases he is ready to answer their prayer of faith, and grant them an easy victory over their enemies, spiritual or temporal. But how dreadful is the guilt of princes who rashly hurry multitudes of their subjects into ruin, death, and hell! Often, they who assist the Lord's enemies against his people, share in their just punishments: and the wealth of the sinner is laid up for the just.

9 And he gathered [p] all Judah and Benjamin, and the strangers with them out of Ephraim and Manasseh, and out of Simeon: (for they fell to him out of Israel in abundance, when they saw that the LORD his God was with him:)

10 So they gathered themselves together at Jerusalem in the [q] third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa.

11 And they [r] offered unto the LORD [s] the same time, of the spoil which they had brought, seven hundred oxen, and seven thousand sheep.

12 And they [t] entered into a covenant to seek the LORD God of their fathers with all their heart, and with all their soul;

13 That [t] whosoever would not seek the LORD God of Israel should be put to death, whether small or great, whether man or woman.[†]

14 And they [u] sware unto the LORD with a loud voice, and with shouting, and with trumpets, and with cornets.

15 And all [x] Judah rejoiced at the oath: for they had sworn with all their heart, and sought him with their whole desire; and he [y] was found of them: and the LORD gave them rest round about.

16 ¶ And also concerning [z] Maachah the [a] mother of Asa the king, he removed her from being queen, [‡]because she had made an [§]idol[§] in a grove: and Asa cut down her idol, and stamped it, and burnt it at the brook [b] Kidron.

(1) Asa's foolish and sinful league with Ben-hadad king of Syria against Baasha and the Israelites: 1—6. (2) God's rebuke of him for this by Hanani, and his persecution of the prophet for his faithfulness: 7—10. (3) His sickness; death, and burial: 11—14.

IN the six and thirtieth year of the [*] reign of Asa, [a] Baasha king of Israel came up against Judah, and built [b] Ramah, to the intent that he might let none go out or come in to Asa king of Judah.

2 Then [c] Asa brought out silver and gold out of the treasures of the house of the LORD and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-hadad king of Syria, that dwelt at [*] Damascus, saying,

3 There is [d] a league between me and thee, as there was between my father and thy father: behold, I have sent thee silver and gold; go, break thy league with Baasha king of Israel, that he may depart from me.

4 And Ben-hadad [e] hearkened unto king Asa, and sent the captains of [†] his armies against the cities of Israel; and they smote [f] Ijon, and Dan, and Abel-maim, and all the store-cities of Naphtali.[‡]

5 And it came to pass, when Baasha heard it, that he left off building of Ramah, and let his work cease.

6 Then [g] Asa the king took all Judah; and they carried away the stones of Ramah, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasha was a building; and he built therewith [h] Geba and Mizpah.

7 ¶ And at that time [i] Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah, and said unto him, [k] Because thou hast relied on the king of Syria, and not relied on the LORD thy God, therefore is the host of the king of Syria escaped[§] out of thine hand.

8 Were not [l] the Ethiopians and the Lubims [‖] a huge host, with very many chariots and horsemen? yet, because thou didst rely on the LORD, he delivered them into thine hand.

9 For the [m] eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, [n] to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him. Herein thou [o] hast done foolishly: therefore from henceforth thou shalt have wars.

10 Then Asa was [p] wroth with the seer, [*] and put him in [q] a prison-house; for he was in a rage with him because of this thing. And Asa [†] oppressed some of the people [r] the same time.

11 ¶ And, [s] behold, the acts of Asa, first and last, lo, they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel.

12 And Asa, in the thirty and ninth year [‡] of his reign, was [t] diseased in his feet, until his disease was exceeding great: [§] yet in his disease he [u] sought not to the LORD, but to the physicians.[‖]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Let me observe, that God grants peace and victory to his people to animate them to their duty; that none ever seek him in vain; but that the case of churches and nations is extremely bad when God forsakes them; and that the hurt which we or others have sustained by sin ought to deter us from it. God's work must be done with unanimity, cheerfulness, and resolution; and we must draw as many as we can into it. He must be served with the first and best of what providence brings to our hand: and all our religious performances are to no purpose except they be hearty and sincere. Notwithstanding the high obligations of God's law on our consciences, to the whole of our duty, it is often necessary that we bind our souls to it by bonds, oaths, and covenants, with God, in order to fortify us against temptation, and engage us to holiness, or to renew those public covenants into which our fathers entered for themselves and us. Public covenanting with God is of great use in times of reformation; and ought always to be grounded on the covenant of grace and the great sacrifice of Jesus Christ; performed with much knowledge, faith, integrity, delight, and cheerfulness; and nothing engaged to in it but what is plainly warranted by God. It is both an honour and happiness for nations to be under such vows. And great care, faithfulness, and impartiality ought to be exercised in extirpating idolatry, and in punishing obstinate idolaters for their treasonable rebellion against God, the King of kings. * Some read the passage—"of his father and of David;" others, for David, would substitute Asa. Houbigant renders it, "first and last;" but there does not appear sufficient authority for any of these emendations. That the "first ways" of Asa were religious, is recorded (chap. 14. 2) and may not David have been one of his names, generally dropped for the name of Asa, or the physician, a name probably derived from his following physicians to the neglect of God. happiness; yet none experience the real pleasures of religion but such as are sincere and upright in it; to such, though they be not sinless, God's service brings its own comfort and reward along with it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—The strongest faith may soon be shaken: and unbelief will make the best to fall into a variety of evils. What reliance can there be on an arm of flesh! What enticement is there, or even hiring of men, to perjury, and to murdering of God's people, by the plunder of his temple! But opposition to God's people, or murdering of them, though it should be by the hand of heathens, brings along with it the most fearful ruin. And often, particularly in carnal expedients to extricate themselves, even good men act against their experience, their knowledge, and their interest, all at once: often in pride they hate, and in passion they persecute, their faithful reprovers; and, even in distress, overlook God, and depend on means carnal or devilish. O what need we have to consider our ways, to keep our heart with all diligence, and to pray for peculiar grace to keep us to the end! All our departures from God spring from our evil heart of unbelief: and the very means which we use unlawfully to avert trouble will bring it more heavily upon us. Sinful wisdom will at last appear egregious folly. Passion, and impatience of reproof, will issue in bitter groans. Rewarding of God's messengers with imprisonment will issue in our own confinement on earth or in hell: and, if our desperate wickedness of heart be indulged, it will mark us with lasting shame. But, notwithstanding all their sad blemishes, the godly die in Christ, and must be had in honour by their survivors.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—How glorious is it, when remarkable piety and prosperity are so connected that they promote one another, and outward wealth and greatness lift up the heart to God!—when kings at the same time promote religion and advance the civil power of the nation!—when the personal piety of princes, and their zeal for reforming others, are equally conspicuous!—and when ministers and magistrates heartily concur in promoting the knowledge

4 ¶ And Jehoshaphat said unto the king of Israel, [o] Inquire, I pray thee, at the word of the LORD to-day.

5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of prophets [f] four hundred men, [*] and said unto them, Shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And they said, [g] Go up; for God will deliver it into the king's hand.

6 ¶ But Jehoshaphat said, Is there not here a prophet of the LORD [h] besides, that we might inquire of him?

7 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, There is yet [i] one man, by whom we may inquire of the LORD: but I hate him; [k] for he never prophesieth good unto me, but always evil: the same is Micaiah the son of Imla. And Jehoshaphat said, Let not the king say so.

8 And the king of Israel called for one of his [†] officers, and said, [l] Fetch quickly Micaiah the son of Imla.

9 And the king of Israel, and Jehoshaphat king of Judah, sat either of them on his throne, clothed in their robes, and they sat in a [m] void place at the entering in of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets prophesied before them.

10 And Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah had made him [n] horns of iron, and said, Thus saith the LORD, With these thou shalt push Syria until they be consumed.

11 And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, [o] Go up to Ramoth-gilead, and prosper; for the LORD shall deliver it into the hand of the king.

12 And the messenger that went to call Micaiah spake to him, saying, Behold, the words of the prophets declare good to the king [p] with one assent; let thy word therefore, I pray thee, be like one of theirs, and speak thou good.

13 And Micaiah said, As the LORD liveth, [q] even what my God saith, that will I speak.

14 And when he was come to the king, the king said unto him, Micaiah, shall we go to Ramoth-gilead to battle, or shall I forbear? And he said, [r] Go ye up, and prosper, and they shall be delivered into your hand. [‡]

15 ¶ And the king said to him, How many times shall I [s] adjure thee that thou say nothing but the truth to me in the name of the LORD?

16 Then he said, I did see all Israel scattered upon the mountains, as [t] sheep that have no shepherd: and the LORD said, These have no master; let them return therefore every man to his house in peace.

17 And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, Did I not tell thee that he would not prophesy good unto me, [*] but evil?

18 Again he said, Therefore hear the word of the LORD; I saw [u] the LORD sitting upon his throne, [†] and all the host of heaven standing on his right hand and on his left.

19 And the LORD said, Who shall entice Ahab king of Israel, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth-gilead? And one spake saying after this manner, and another saying after that manner.

20 Then there came out a [x] spirit, and stood before the LORD, and said, I will entice him. And the LORD said unto him, Wherewith?

21 And he said, I will go out, and be [y] a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the LORD said, Thou shalt entice him, and thou shalt also prevail: [z] go out, and do even so. [‡]

22 Now therefore, behold, the LORD [a] hath put a lying spirit in the mouth of these thy prophets, and the LORD hath spoken evil against thee?

23 ¶ Then Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah came near, and [b] smote Micaiah upon the cheek, and said, Which way went the Spirit of the LORD from me to speak unto thee?

24 And Micaiah said, Behold, [c] thou shalt see on that day when thou shalt go into [d] an inner chamber to hide thyself.

25 Then the king of Israel said, [e] Take ye Micaiah, and carry him back to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joash the king's son;

26 And say, Thus saith the king, Put this fellow in the [f] prison, and [g] feed him with bread of affliction, and with water of affliction, until I return in peace.

27 And Micaiah said, [h] If thou certainly return in peace, then hath not the LORD spoken by me. And he said, [i] Hearken, all ye people. [§]

28 ¶ So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth-gilead.

29 And the king of Israel said unto Jehoshaphat, [k] I will disguise myself, and will go to the battle; but put thou on thy robes. [‖] So the king of Israel disguised himself; and they went to the battle.

30 Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots that were with him, saying, Fight ye not with small or great, [l] save only with the king of Israel. [*]

31 And it came to pass, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, It is the king of Israel; therefore they [m] compassed about him to fight: but Jehoshaphat and fear of God! Religion is a reasonable service; and, in promoting reformation, we must begin with instruction in the truths of God as laid down in his word. No dictates of men, but the lively oracles of God, must be produced as the ground of what we inculcate. What a powerful protection to nations is the terror of God impressed on their neighbours and enemies! No armed hosts are comparable to it. To what prodigious numbers had the Hebrews increased, had not their sin prevented it! and marvellous was the providence of God in maintaining such multitudes in so small a country as the lots of Judah and Benjamin!

(1) Jehoshaphat is sharply reproved by Jehu, son of Hanani, for connecting himself with Ahab; and is encouraged to proceed in reforming his subjects: 1—3. (2) He again traverses his kingdom, and restores the worship of God, 4; appoints proper judges, and solemnly charges them to attend their duty: 5—11.

AND Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned to his house in peace to Jerusalem.

2 And Jehu the son of Hanani the seer went out to meet him, and said to king Jehoshaphat, Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the LORD? therefore is wrath upon thee from before the LORD.*

3 Nevertheless there are good things found in thee, in that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land, and hast prepared thine heart to seek God.

4 ¶ And Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem: and he went out again through the people, from Beer-sheba to mount Ephraim,[†] and brought them back unto the LORD God of their fathers.

5 ¶ And he set judges[‡] in the land, throughout all the fenced cities of Judah, city by city;

7 Wherefore now let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take heed and do it: for there is no iniquity with the LORD our God, nor respect of persons, nor taking of gifts.[‖]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—Marriages, founded on pride and worldly-mindedness, bring dreadful miseries along with them: and the strongest expressions of friendship from wicked men are to be suspected as methods of serving themselves. Their feasts, as well as their kisses, are deceitful: and even the best men are apt to be ensnared by their caresses and flattery. Often, while such men ought, and profess, to consult the Lord, they do but really consult the devil and his agents. And they, who are once become familiar with the wicked, must involve themselves in great guilt and pollution; must often join in a patient hearing of the devil's preachers, and witness the injuries done to those who are faithful to Christ. But unhappy are those princes who are surrounded with flatterers and profane clergy! no plague is more ruinous. Let us therefore always encourage friends and ministers to deal faithfully with us. What astonishing power hath Satan, when God once gives up men to his awful delusions! Great multitudes, particularly of the clergy, he carries before him with great unanimity. But hard is the fate of God's faithful servants under rulers who are apostates from God, to be hated, reviled, buffeted, imprisoned, starved, or the like. Suffering for the truth is the hereditary portion of the honest servants of Christ. Yea, those godly persons, who cultivate friendship with the wicked, must not wonder if their lives are sought or endangered by their means, and their flatterers lay snares for their life. But righteous are the judgments of God, and exact his fulfilment of his predictions and threatenings.—Men in vain contrive to escape when he has determined their fall.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—God often deals better with his people than they deserve; and brings them home in safety, when their apparently less endangered companions are sent into death and damnation! But they must expect, if entering into friendship with the haters of God, that it will expose them to manifold sufferings on earth, though not to hell. It is an honour when sufferings cannot discourage ministers or their children from faithfully reproving the greatest; and it is a great mercy for an offender to meet soon with a faithful reprover: and no less wise, to receive sharp reproofs as a singular kindness; and to improve them, and the just commendation mingled with them, in a speedy 19 And [f] the Levites, of the children of the Kohathites, and of the children of the Korhites, stood up to praise the LORD God of Israel with a loud voice on high.

20 ¶ And they [g] rose early in the morning, and went forth into the wilderness of [h] Tekoah: and as they went forth, Jehoshaphat stood and said, Hear me, O Judah, and ye inhabitants of Jerusalem; [i] Believe in the LORD your God, so shall ye be established; believe his prophets, so shall ye prosper.

23 For the children of Ammon and Moab [o] stood up against the inhabitants of mount Seir, utterly to slay and destroy them: and when they had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, every one helped [‖] to destroy another.

27 Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, and Jehoshaphat in the [t] forefront of them, to go again to Jerusalem with joy; for the LORD [u] had made them to rejoice over their enemies.

28 And they came to Jerusalem with psalteries, and harps, and trumpets, unto the house of the LORD.

returning to the Lord, and an activity in his service. What a blessing to a nation is it to have proper courts of judicature everywhere established, and causes decided with the strictest impartiality! And great ability and integrity are necessary to qualify judges in either church or state, as they have to answer to God for all the crimes they connive at, or overlook. Yea, it is needful to keep the affairs of church and state duly disengaged the one from the other. And, to render judges upright in their administration, they ought to consider God as their pattern, witness, and rewarder; and his glory as the end of their work.

5 ¶ Jehoram was thirty and two years old [f] when he began to reign; and he reigned eight years[*] in Jerusalem.

6 And he walked in [g] the way of the kings of Israel, like as did the house of Ahab; for he had the daughter of [h] Ahab to wife: and he wrought that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD.

7 Howbeit the LORD would not destroy the house of David, because of the covenant that he had made with David, and as he [i] promised to give a [†] light to him and to his sons for ever.[‡]

8 ¶ In his days the [k] Edomites revolted from under the [§] dominion of Judah, and made themselves a king.

15 And thou shalt have great sickness by disease of thy bowels, until thy bowels fall out by reason of the sickness day by day.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Numerous, active, and subtle are the enemies of Christ's church: and danger is often at hand when we least expect it: yea, even when we are most faithful, we are apt to be involved in great difficulties, for the trial and honour of our faith. In danger and distress, it is best to begin with solemn fasting and supplication to God for deliverance. The dangers which drive us to him will never ruin us. While we have a merciful God to flee to, we never need despair. The cries of the oppressed will enter into the ears of the righteous Judge. And the more entirely we are taken off from every self-dependence in the view of our wants and wretchedness, we are the more sure to find help in the time of need. If faith and hope look upward, the everlasting arms will be underneath us. In our cries to God for deliverance, let us therefore plead his covenant relation to us, the grants he has made us, his ability to protect and deliver us; and the ingratitude, injustice, and violence of our enemies: for readily God bestows his answers of peace to his people: and happy are they who, renouncing their unbelieving fears, go forth, assured by faith that it shall be to them as he hath spoken. Unshaken faith is a certain cause of victory: and even songs of praise are excellent weapons in our spiritual warfare. God can easily deliver his people, and employ their strongly confederated enemies to destroy one another: yea, he can turn his people's distress into means of their enrichment, honour, safety, and peace. And it becomes us, in such noted deliverances, to join in solemn thanksgiving, and to set up some lasting memorials of his kindness.—But O, how hard is it to render reformation thoroughly complete; and to wean the best of men from sins which easily beset them, even when they have before smarted for them! But it is kind in God to continue a reprover to us: and it is great gain if our providential losses turn us from the path of evil.

18 ¶ And after all this the LORD smote him in his bowels with [d] an incurable disease.

19 And it came to pass, that in process of time, after the end of two years, his bowels fell out by reason of his sickness; so he died of sore diseases: and his people made no [e] burning for him, like the burning of his fathers.[†]

20 Thirty and two years old was he when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem eight years, and [f] departed without [g] being desired:[‡] howbeit they buried him in the city of David, but [h] not in the sepulchres of the kings.

AND the inhabitants of Jerusalem made [a] Ahaziah his youngest son king in his stead: for the band of men that came with the Arabians to the camp had slain all the eldest. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram king of Judah reigned.

2 [b] Forty and two years old[*] was Ahaziah when he began to reign; and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: his mother's name also was Athaliah, the daughter [c] of Omri.

3 He also walked [d] in the ways of the house of Ahab: for his mother was his counsellor to do wickedly.

4 Wherefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD like the house of Ahab: for they [e] were his counsellors, after the death of his father, to his destruction.

5 ¶ He walked also after their counsel, and [f] went with Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth-gilead: and the Syrians smote Joram.

6 And [g] he returned to be healed in Jezreel, because of the wounds [†] which were given him at Ramah, when he fought with Hazael king of Syria. And Azariah [h] the son of Jehoram king of Judah went down to see Jehoram the son of Ahab at Jezreel, because he was sick.

7 And the [*] destruction of Ahaziah was [i] of God,[†] by coming to Joram: for, when he was come, he went out with Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, [k] whom the LORD had anointed to cut off the house of Ahab.

8 And it came to pass, that, [l] when Jehu was executing judgment upon the house of Ahab, and found the princes of Judah, and the sons of the brethren of Ahaziah, that ministered to Ahaziah, he slew them.

9 [m] And he sought Ahaziah: and they caught him, (for he was [‡] hid in Samaria,) and brought him to Jehu: and when they had slain him, they buried him;[§] Because (said they) he is the son of Jehoshaphat, [n] who sought the LORD with all his heart. So the house of Ahaziah had no power to keep still the kingdom.

10 ¶ [o] But when Athaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the seed-royal of the house of Judah.

11 But Jehoshabeath, the daughter of the king,[‖] [p] took Joash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons that were slain, and put him and his nurse in a [q] bed-chamber. So Jehoshabeath, the daughter of king Jehoram, the wife of [r] Jehoiada the priest, (for she was the sister of Ahaziah,) hid him from Athaliah, so that she slew him not.

12 And he was with them [s] hid in the house of God six years: and Athaliah reigned over the land.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—What monsters are bred in the best of families; or, at least, are made so by unhallowed marriages! And none are such plagues to families and kingdoms as ungrateful heirs. Ambition is deaf to the cries of nature or humanity: and those, whom duty and interest require to protect us, become our destroyers. But how tormented are the minds of tyrants, and how tottering those thrones which are established in blood! God can take the most unthought of methods to threaten or to punish his inveterate enemies. And torment, misery, and disgrace, most surely await them. Dreadful is the situation, when tormenting agonies, an awakened conscience, and an opening hell, meet the sinner on his death-bed! But miserable are the happiest tyrants.—When alive they are hated; and when dead they are branded with infamy, and tormented in hell!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Certain is their ruin whom God has doomed to it; and dreadful the consequences of unhallowed marriages with the ungodly. Behold how the woman, for whose sake Jehoshaphat had cultivated friendship with Ahab, reduces his glorious kingdom and numerous family, nay, his blessed reformation, to the brink of ruin? She had doubtless advised her husband to murder his brethren and princes, and to hurry himself, through scenes of misery, into endless fire. Now she counsels her son to do wickedly. Advised by her, he cultivates intimacy with Jehoram her brother, and involves himself and relations in his ruin. Behold the infuriated monster murdering princes, and imbruing her hands in the blood of her innocent, her orphan babes! And, to the reproach of Judah, the savage murderer, the vile idolater, is permitted to fill the sacred throne without so much as a shadow of title! But, meanwhile, behold

4 This is the thing that ye shall do: A [f]third part of you entering on the sabbath, of the priests and of the Levites, shall be porters of the doors;

5 And a third part shall be at the king's house;* and a third part at the [g]gate of the foundation:† and all the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD.

6 But let none come into the house of the LORD, save the priests, and [h]they that minister of the Levites; they shall go in, for they are [i]holy: but all the people shall keep the watch of the LORD.‡

7 And [k]the Levites shall compass the king round about, every man with his weapons in his hand; and whosoever else [l]cometh into the house, he shall be put to death: but be ye with the king when he cometh in, and when he goeth out.

8 So the Levites, and all Judah, did according to all things that Jehoiada the priest had commanded, and took every man his men [m]that were to come in on the sabbath, with them that were to go out on the sabbath: for Jehoiada the priest dismissed not [n]the courses.§

9 Moreover, Jehoiada the priest delivered to the captains of hundreds spears, and bucklers, and shields, that had been king David's, which were in the house of God.‖

10 And he set all the people, [o]every man having his weapon in his hand, from the right *side of the †temple to the left side of the temple, along by the altar and the temple, by the king round about.

11 Then they [p]brought out the king's son, and put upon him the crown, and [q]gave him the testimony,‡ and made him king: and Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and said, [r]God save the king.

12 ¶ Now, *when Athaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, she came to the people into the house of the LORD:

13 And she looked, and, behold, the king stood at [t]his pillar§ at the entering in, and the princes and the trumpets by the king: and all the people of the land rejoiced, [u]and sounded with trumpets; also the singers with instruments of music, and such as taught to sing praise. Then Athaliah rent her clothes, and said, [x]Treason, treason!

14 Then Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds that were set over the host, and said unto them, Have her forth of the ranges;* and [y]whoso followeth her, let him be slain with the sword. For the priest said, [z]Slay her not in the house of the LORD.

15 So they laid hands on her; and when she was come to the entering of the horse-gate by the king's house, they slew [a]her there.†

16 ¶ And Jehoiada [b]made a covenant between him, and between all the people, and between the king, that they should be the LORD's people.

17 Then all the people went to the house of Baal, and [c]brake it down, and brake his altars and his images in pieces, and slew Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars.

18 Also Jehoiada appointed [d]the offices of the house of the LORD by the hand of the priests the Levites, whom David had distributed in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt-offerings of the [e]LORD, as it is written in the law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, as it was ordained ‡by David.

19 And he set the [f]porters at the gates of the house of the LORD, that none which was unclean in any thing should enter in.§

20 [g]And he took the captains of hundreds, and the nobles, and the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought down the king from the house of the LORD: and they came through the high gate into the king's house, and set the king upon the throne of the kingdom.

21 And [h]all the people of the land rejoiced: and the city was quiet, after that they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

how God, for his promise' sake, preserves in his house a young and helpless descendent of David to wear the crown, and even usher in the Messiah in his time! Vain is every attempt of earth and hell to defeat the word of truth; not one jot or tittle of it shall ever fail.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—God will not suffer the fulfilment of his promise to be too long interrupted. And it is a great mercy in critical times to have one of great prudence, piety, fidelity, courage, and influence, to be principal director. How astonishing is it to see religion and liberty all at once recovered from the wrecks of ruin. But is there any thing too hard for the Lord? How mad for their opposers to rush headlong into immediate destruction! But hopeful is the view when idols are destroyed, idolaters ashamed, the true worship of God regularly established, and his worshippers first giving themselves to the Lord, and afterwards to magistrates and ministers, and to one another, by the will of God!

the cities of Judah, and gather of all Israel money to [f] repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that ye hasten the matter: [g] howbeit the Levites hastened it not.[*]

6 And the king called for Jehoiada the chief, and said unto him, [h] Why hast thou not required of the Levites to bring in, out of Judah, and out of Jerusalem, [i] the collection, according to the commandment of Moses the servant of the LORD, and of the congregation of Israel, for the tabernacle of witness?

7 For the [k] sons of Athaliah, that wicked woman, had broken up the house of God; and also all the dedicated things of the house of the LORD [l] did they bestow upon Baalim.

8 And at the king's commandment they made [m] a chest, and set it without at the gate of the house of the LORD.[†]

9 And they made a [n] proclamation through Judah and Jerusalem, to bring in to the LORD the collection that Moses the servant of God laid upon Israel in the wilderness.

10 And all the princes and all the people rejoiced,[‡] and brought in, and cast into the chest, until they had made an end.

11 Now it came to pass, [o] that at what time the chest was brought unto the king's office by the hand of the Levites, and when they saw that there was much money, the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it, and carried it to his place again. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance.

12 And the king and Jehoiada gave it to such as did the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and hired [p] masons and carpenters to repair the house of the LORD, and also such as wrought iron and brass to mend the house of the LORD.

13 So the workmen wrought, and [q] the work was perfected by them, and they set the house of God in his state, and strengthened it.[§]

14 And when they had finished it, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada, whereof were made [r] vessels for the house of the LORD, even vessels to minister, and [‖] to offer withal, and spoons, and vessels of gold and silver: and they [s] offered burnt-offerings in the house of the LORD continually all the days of Jehoiada.

15 ¶ But Jehoiada waxed old, and was [t] full of days when he died; an hundred and thirty years old was he when he died.

16 And they buried him [u] in the city of David among the kings, [x] because he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house.

17 ¶ Now, [y] after the death of Jehoiada came the princes of Judah, and made obeisance to the king:[*] then the king hearkened unto them.

18 And they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served groves and idols: and [z] wrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem for this their trespass.

19 Yet [a] he sent prophets to them, to bring them again unto the LORD; and they testified against them:[†] but they would not give ear.

20 And the Spirit of God [‡] came upon Zechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, which stood above the people, and said unto them, [b] Thus saith God, Why transgress ye the commandments of the LORD, that ye cannot prosper? [c] because ye have forsaken the LORD, he hath also forsaken you.

21 And they conspired against him, and [d] stoned him with stones, at the commandment of the king, in the court of the house of the LORD.[§]

22 Thus Joash the king [*] remembered not the kindness which Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slew his son: and when he died, he said, [f] The LORD look upon it, and require it.[‖]

23 ¶ And it [g] came to pass at the end of the year,[*] that the host of Syria came up against him: and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the princes of the people from among the people, and sent all the spoil of them unto the king of [†] Damascus.

24 For the army of the Syrians came [h] with a small company of men, and the LORD delivered a very great host into their hand, [i] because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers: [k] so they executed judgment against Joash.

25 And when they were departed from him, (for they left him in [l] great diseases,) his own servants conspired against him for [m] the blood of the sons of Jehoiada the priest, and slew him on his bed, and he died: and they buried him in the city of David, but they buried him [n] not in the sepulchres of the kings.

26 And these are they that conspired against him, [o] Zabad the son of Shimeath an Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of [‡] Shimrith a Moabitess.

27 ¶ Now concerning his sons, and the greatness of the [p] burdens[§] laid upon him, and the [q] repairing of the house of God, behold, they are written in the [r] story of the book of the kings: and Amaziah his son reigned in his stead.

§ Idolaters have often been praised for liberality towards other forms of worship. And, if it be a praise to judge all religions alike, infidelity may merit that praise. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—It is a great advantage for young persons to be directed by those who are pious, prudent, and faithful. And the influence of education, the awe or example of friends, may often push those far into external appearances of religion who have no cordial regard to it: nay, in shows of devotion, empty hypocrites may outstrip real and noted saints. How many useful works in church and state would be utterly stopped, if God did not raise up a few active men to carry them forward! But it is an honour to do good in our time by promoting religion; and faithfulness is the great honour, and will be the lasting comfort, of such as are intrusted with public money, or employed in public business. The godly are often honourably interred with an appear-

(1) Amaziah revenging his father's death on the murderers: 1—4. (2) Obeying the command of God in dismissing the hundred thousand Israelites whom he had hired into his army: 5—10. (3) Conquering the Edomites while the dismissed Israelites wasted his own country: 11—13. (4) Worshipping the idols of the conquered Edomites: 14—16. (5) Challenging Joash king of Israel to a war, which almost ruined himself and his kingdom: 17—24. (6) Pursued and murdered by his subjects: 25—28.

A. M. 3160. B. C. 838.

AMAZIAH [a] was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem.

2 And he did [b] that which was right in the sight of the LORD, but not with a perfect heart.[*]

3 ¶ Now it came to pass, when the kingdom was [†] established to him, that he [c] slew his servants that had killed the king his father:

4 But he slew not their children, but did as it is written in the law in the book of Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, [d] The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers, but every man shall die for his own sin.

5 ¶ Moreover, Amaziah gathered Judah together, and made them [e] captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, according to the houses of their fathers, throughout [f] all Judah and Benjamin: and he numbered them from [g] twenty years old and above, and found them three hundred thousand[‡] choice men, able to go forth to war, that could handle spear and shield.

6 He hired also an hundred thousand mighty men of valour out of Israel for [§] an hundred talents of silver.[‖]

7 But there came [h] a man of God to him, saying, O king, let not the army of Israel go with thee: [i] for the LORD is not with Israel, to wit, with all the children of Ephraim.

8 But if thou wilt go, [k] do it, be strong for the battle;[*] God shall make thee fall before the enemy: [l] for God hath power to help, and to cast down.

9 And Amaziah said to the man of God, But what shall we do for the hundred talents which I have given to the [†] army of Israel? And the man of God answered, The LORD is [m] able to give thee much more than this.

10 Then Amaziah separated them, to wit, the army that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go [‡] home again: wherefore their [n] anger was greatly kindled[§] against Judah, and they returned home [o] in great anger.

11 ¶ And Amaziah strengthened himself,[‖] and led forth his people, and went to [p] the valley of Salt, and smote of the children of Seir ten thousand.

12 And other ten thousand left alive did the children of Judah carry away captive, and brought them unto the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock, that they all were [q] broken in pieces.[*]

13 ¶ But [†] the soldiers of the army which Amaziah sent back, that they should not go with him to battle, fell upon the cities of Judah, from [r] Samaria even unto Beth-horon, and smote three thousand [‡] of them, and took much spoil.

14 ¶ Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that he [s] brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be his gods, and bowed down himself before them, and burnt incense unto them.

15 Wherefore the anger of the LORD was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him [t] a prophet, which said unto him, Why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, [u] which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?

16 And it came to pass, as he talked with him, that the king said unto him, Art thou made of the king's counsel? [x] forbear; why shouldest thou be smitten? Then the prophet forbare, and said, I know that [y] God hath [§] determined to destroy thee, because thou hast done this, and hast not hearkened unto my counsel.

17 ¶ Then [z] Amaziah king of Judah took advice,[‖] and sent to Joash, the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, Come, let us [a] see one another in the face.[*]

18 And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, The [b] thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, Give thy daughter to my son to wife: and there passed by [c] a wild beast that was in Lebanon, and trode down the thistle.

19 Thou sayest, Lo, thou hast smitten the Edomites, and thine heart [d] lifteth thee up to boast: abide now at home; [e] why shouldest thou meddle to thine hurt, that thou shouldest fall, even thou, and Judah with thee?

20 But Amaziah [f] would not hear; for it came of God,[†] that he might deliver them into the hand of their enemies, because they sought after the gods of Edom.

21 So Joash the king of Israel went up; and ance of distinguished respect and grief, and yet their example quickly disregarded. Pretended conversions, and hypocritical strictness, soon issue in fearful apostasy. Many conform to religion when it is fashionable, who are glad of an opportunity to throw off the restraint. What an unspeakable loss to a church or nation is the death of a pious or faithful counsellor! and what a plague are complaisant and wicked flatterers! But in times of great degeneracy, God never wants some faithful witnesses, that they, who hate to be reformed, may be left without excuse: and great zeal for God is then needful, to oppose the torrent of ungodliness, and to render ministers duly faithful to souls: for ingratitude, injustice, and barbarity, generally attend hatred of reproof and worshipping of idols. And God's prophets, if faithful, are sure to be marked with suffering or death: but quickly shall God resent the injuries done to them. Quickly, and in manifold forms, his vengeance shall overtake the obstinate transgressors: and, when he forsakes men, they become an easy prey to every invader. Often he gives men blood to drink, who have imbrued their hands in the blood of his saints; while his vengeance pursues them into everlasting fire. And scarcely doth any thing more fearfully spread destruction than marriages with wicked women.

15 And he made in Jerusalem engines, invented by cunning men, to be on the towers, and upon the bulwarks, to shoot arrows and great stones withal:[‖] and his name [*] spread far abroad; [o] for he was marvellously helped, till he was strong.

16 ¶ But [p] when he was strong, his heart was lifted up to his destruction:[†] for he transgressed against the LORD his God, and [q] went into the temple of the LORD, to burn incense upon the altar of incense.[‡]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—What multitudes are mere dissemblers in their religious appearances! For some carnal end they apply their tongue and hand to religion, while their heart hates it. But shortlived are the triumphs of murderers, particularly those of sovereigns. And strict equity ought to take place in the punishment of criminals, that the innocent may not be involved with the guilty. How fearfully sin diminishes and weakens nations! And rash undertakings, or alliances in war, make room for bitter repentance. Multitudes profit nothing when God is our enemy; and connexion with his enemies but hastens the curse on our enterprises. But the loss of money goes very near the heart of worldlings, while they who trust in God find themselves gainers. How outrageous is the fury, and cruel the tender mercies, of the wicked. Such as are really unconcerned about piety feel their pride hurt when treated as profane and wicked: and the proud, when baulked of their expected honours and booty, are greatly enraged. The conquests made by nations are often really to their own hurt: and those whom we imitated in wickedness become the instruments of our punishment. But base is the cruelty, and sottish the folly, to dash idolaters to pieces, and preserve, nay, worship, the idols which could not protect their votaries from such barbarous severity. Wicked men heartily hate a faithful reprover: and much sooner will they part with large sums of money than with the most useless and despicable idol! But near and certain is their destruction whom God has left off to reprove, and in whom pride swells to the brim. They that would not hearken to God's servants will soon hearken to their own wicked counsellors and raging lusts, which hasten their temporal, nay, eternal destruction. And, however wicked the instruments may be, the judgments are always righteous. They, who go forth hastily to strive, will soon not know what to do when their neighbour has put them to shame. Man's pride will certainly bring him low: and it will fare ill at last with them who forsake God and his way. For traitors to God and religion are often treacherously hurried into death and hell.

18 And they [y] withstood Uzziah the king, and said unto him, [z] It appertaineth not unto thee, Uzziah, to burn incense unto the LORD, but to the priests the sons of Aaron, that are consecrated to burn incense: go out of the sanctuary; for thou hast trespassed; neither shall it be [a] for thine honour from the LORD God.

19 Then Uzziah was [b] wroth, and had a censer in his hand to burn incense; and, while he was wroth with the priests, the [c] leprosy even rose up in his forehead* before the priests in the house of the LORD, from beside the incense-altar.

† About a mile to the north-west of modern Jerusalem are shown the excavations called the sepulchres of the Hebrew kings. Whether these were really their sepulchres does not appear, except from uncertain tradition, and the evident costliness of the work. They still contain the remains of elaborate stone coffins placed in side niches; and one of the doors remains, a carved and panelled marble moving upon two hinges like a door, part of the door slab itself, and playing in the solid rock at top and bottom. From these, as a leper, Uzziah was excluded, and buried without in the adjoining field.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—A godly, faithful, and prudent instructor is a great advantage to a youthful king: and a noted regard to the laws and worship of God lays an excellent foundation for prosperity; for God honours those that honour him: and, as long as we cleave to him, he will be our assistant. And what extensive capacities God gives some men, that they can take care of a multitude of things at once? But how bewitching is pride! it can decoy men to their ruin in a thousand forms. And it is difficult to be prosperous and yet be humble. But seldom do men gratify their pride without bringing themselves to deserved shame. The offices and ordinances of God's church are sacred and appropriate: it is at our highest peril if we interfere with them without his call. And when God's ministers magnify their office, and boldly withstand the sinful attempts of the greatest monarchs, it is honourable and becoming. But how impatient are the proud of faithful reproof or zealous opposition! The most wise and just rebuke exasperates the wilful. And they who will not submit to admonition rush on their own ruin. God marks them with disgraceful punishments, answerable to their crimes. And when we feel his displeasure, it is madness to persist. Humiliation is our only door of escape. And sometimes when sins are pardoned of God, they leave an indelible stain among men.

one day, which were all [a]valiant[†] men; [g]because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers.

7 And Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maaseiah the king's son, and Azrikam the governor of the house, and Elkanah that was [‡]next to the king.

8 ¶ And the children of Israel [h]carried away captive of their brethren two hundred thousand, women, sons, and daughters, and took also away much spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

9 But a prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded: and [i]he went out before the host that came to Samaria, and said unto them, Behold, [k]because the LORD God of your fathers was wroth with Judah, he hath delivered them into your hand, and ye have slain them in a rage that reacheth [l]up unto heaven.

10 And now ye purpose to keep under the children of Judah and Jerusalem for [m]bondmen and bond-women unto you: but are there not [n]with you, even with you, sins against the LORD your God?

11 Now hear me therefore, and [o]deliver the captives again, which ye have taken captive of your brethren: [p]for the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you.

12 Then certain of the [q]heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, and Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, [r]stood up against them that came from the war,

13 And said unto them, Ye shall not bring in the captives hither: for whereas we have offended against the LORD already, ye intend [s]to add more to our sins and to our trespass; for our trespass is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel.[§]

14 So the armed men left the captives and the spoil before the princes and all the congregation.

15 And the men which [t]were expressed by name rose up, and took the captives, and with the spoil [u]clothed all that were naked among them, and arrayed them, and shod them, and gave them to eat and to drink, and anointed them, and carried all the feeble of them upon asses, and brought them to [w]Jericho, the city of palm-trees, to their brethren: then they returned to Samaria.[*]

16 ¶ At that time did king Ahaz [x]send unto the kings of Assyria to help him.

17 For [y]again the Edomites had come and smitten Judah, and carried away [†]captives.

18 The [z]Philistines also had invaded the cities of the low country, and of the south of Judah, and had taken [a]Beth-shemesh, and Ajalon, and Gederoth, and Shocho with the villages thereof, and Timnah with the villages thereof, Gimzo also and the villages thereof; and they dwelt there.

19 For the LORD [b]brought Judah low, because of Ahaz king of Israel; for he made Judah naked,[‡] and transgressed sore against the LORD.

20 [c]And Tilgath-pilneser king of Assyria came unto him, and distressed him, but strengthened him not.[§]

21 For Ahaz took [d]away a portion out of the house of the LORD, and out of the house of the king, and of the princes, and gave it unto the king of Assyria: but he helped him not.

22 ¶ And [e]in the time of his distress did he trespass yet more against the LORD: this is that king Ahaz.

23 For he sacrificed unto the gods of Damascus, which smote him;[‖] and he said, [f]Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice to them, that they may help me: but they were the ruin of him, and of all Israel.

24 And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and [g]cut in pieces the vessels of the house of God, and [h]shut up the doors of the house of the LORD, and he [i]made him altars in every corner of Jerusalem.

25 And in every several city of Judah he made high places [*]to burn incense unto other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

26 ¶ [k]Now the rest of his acts, and of all his ways, first and last, behold, they are written in the book of the Kings of Judah and Israel.

parents' goodness, and carefully avoid their faults. But hard is the task to bring an obdurate people off from their corrupt customs. And often magistrates and ministers, who are tender and circumspect in their own lives, have not courage and zeal enough for doing what they might in the reformation of others. A fixed steadfastness in the truth is the most necessary, and at the same time the most excellent, mean for the resistance of evil and performance of good. What reward hath godliness?—it hath the promises of this life, and that which is to come. But, alas! the best magistrates and ministers are often quickly removed, and that in order to make way for monsters to fill their place.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—How amazing is the strength of men's inward corruption, that can so trample upon a pious education and pattern! But fearful are the punishments which God has in store for such enormous transgressors: and miserable are the nations who have such monsters of impiety for their sovereigns. God makes the nations around concur to punish the apostasy of his professing people. Often the very persons or nations, whom we have made our pattern in wickedness, are made the instruments of our punishment. And dreadfully are the mightiest numbered to the slaughter when the Lord fighteth against them. But how tender his compassion towards his offending people, even while he smites them! He observes and is provoked with those who inhumanly murder or abuse them, especially if they be brethren, or act from principles of hatred or revenge. And when he pleases, he can, by his word and Spirit, render their most outrageous enemies kind and generous to them. They who are made sensible of their own sins will sympathize with their breth-

HEZEKIAH [a] began to reign when he was five and twenty years old;[*] and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Abijah, the daughter of [b] Zechariah.[†]

2 And he [c] did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that David his father had done.

3 ¶ He, in the [d] first year of his reign,[‡] in the first month, [e] opened the doors of the house of the LORD, and repaired them.

4 And he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them together into the east street,

5 And said unto them, Hear me, ye Levites; [f] Sanctify now yourselves, and sanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry forth [g] the filthiness out of the holy place.[§]

6 For [h] our fathers have trespassed, and done that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD our God, and have forsaken him, and have turned away their faces from the habitation of the LORD, and [‖] turned their backs.

7 Also they have [i] shut up the doors of the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense nor offered burnt-offerings in the holy place unto the God of Israel.

8 Wherefore the [k] wrath of the LORD was upon Judah and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them to trouble, to astonishment, and to hissing, as ye see with your eyes.

9 For, lo, [l] our fathers have fallen by the sword, and our sons, and our daughters, and our wives, are in captivity for this.[*]

10 Now it is [m] in mine heart to make a covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that his fierce wrath may turn away from us.

11 My sons,[†] [n] be not now negligent: for the LORD hath [o] chosen you to stand before him, to serve him, and that ye should minister unto him, and [‡] burn incense.

12 ¶ Then the Levites arose, Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the [p] Kohathites: and of the sons of Merari; Kish the son of Abdi, and Azariah the son of Jehalelel: and of the Gershonites; Joah the son of Zimmah, and Eden the son of Joah:

14 And of the sons of Heman; Jehiel, and Shimei: and of the sons of Jeduthun; Shemaiah, and Uzziel.

15 And they gathered their brethren, and sanctified themselves, and came, according to the commandment of the king, [s] by the words of the LORD, to cleanse the house of the LORD.

16 And the priests went into the [t] inner part of the house of the LORD, to cleanse it,[*] and brought out all the uncleanness that they found in the temple of the LORD into the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it, to carry it out abroad [u] into the brook Kidron.

17 Now they began on the first day of the first month to sanctify, and on the eighth day of the month came they to the [x] porch of the LORD: so they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days; and in the sixteenth day of the first month they made an end.[†]

18 Then they went in to Hezekiah the king, and said, We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, and the [y] altar of burnt-offering, with all the vessels thereof, and the show-bread table, with all the vessels thereof.

19 Moreover, [z] all the vessels, which king Ahaz in his reign did cast away[‡] in his transgression, have we prepared and sanctified, and, behold, they are before the altar of the LORD.

20 ¶ Then Hezekiah the king [a] rose early, and gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD.

21 And they brought [b] seven bullocks, and seven rams, and seven lambs, and seven he-goats, for a sin-offering for the kingdom, and for the sanctuary, and for Judah:[§] and he commanded the priests, the sons of Aaron, to offer them on the altar of the LORD.

22 So they killed the bullocks, and the priests received the blood, and [c] sprinkled it on the altar: likewise, when they had killed the rams, they sprinkled the blood upon the altar: they killed also the lambs, and they sprinkled the blood upon the altar.

23 And they brought [‖] forth the he-goats for the sin-offering before the king and the congregation;[*] and they laid their [d] hands upon them.

24 And the priests killed them, and they [e] made reconciliation with their blood upon the altar, to make an atonement for all Israel: for the king commanded that the burnt-offering and the sin-offering should be made for all Israel.

ren's sufferings. It is better to take warning late than never: and the victory of self-denial is more glorious than the necks of vanquished enemies. It is the greatest honour to the mighty to be merciful. But when God lays aside one instrument of correction, he often takes another in his hand; and turns the helps which we sinfully secure into ruinous plagues. When we forsake God, we must needs be disappointed in every other confidence. And desperately hardened must men be when both mercies and judgments render them worse and worse. Happy is that nation where their tyrannical monsters of wickedness are quickly cut off by death, to make way for better princes.

David, and of Gad the king's seer, and Nathan the prophet: for so was the commandment [*] of the LORD by his prophets.

26 And the Levites stood[†] [g]with the instruments of David, and the priests with [h] the trumpets.

27 And Hezekiah commanded to offer the burnt-offering upon the altar. And when the burnt-offering began, the [i]song of the LORD began [‡]also with the trumpets, and with the instruments ordained by David king of Israel.

28 And all the congregation worshipped, and the [k]singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded: and all this continued until the burnt-offering was finished.

29 And when they had made an end of offering, the king, and all that were present with him, [l]bowed themselves, and worshipped.

30 Moreover Hezekiah the king and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the LORD with [m]the words of David, and of Asaph the seer: and they sang praises with gladness, and they bowed their heads and worshipped.

31 Then Hezekiah answered and said, Now ye have consecrated yourselves unto the LORD, come near, and bring [n] sacrifices and thank-offerings into the house of the LORD. And the congregation brought in sacrifices and thank-offerings; and as many as were of a free heart, burnt-offerings.[§]

32 And the [o]number of the burnt-offerings, which the congregation brought, was threescore and ten bullocks, an hundred rams, and two hundred lambs: all these were for a burnt-offering[‖] to the LORD.

33 And the [p]consecrated things were six hundred oxen, and three thousand sheep.

34 But the [q] priests were too few, so that they could not flay all the burnt-offerings: wherefore their [r]brethren the Levites [*]did help them, till the work was ended, and until the other priests had sanctified themselves: for the Levites were more upright in heart to sanctify themselves than the priests.

35 And also the burnt-offerings were in abundance, with the [s]fat of the peace-offerings, and the [t]drink-offerings for every burnt-offering. So the service of the house of the LORD was set in order.

36 And Hezekiah [u]rejoiced, and all the people, that God had prepared the people: for the thing was done suddenly.[†]

CHAPTER XXX.

(1) Hezekiah, his princes, and people, resolve to keep the passover in the second month, as they could not be ready to observe it in the first: 2—5. (2) He invites not only his own subjects, but also the Israelites, to keep it at Jerusalem: 1, 6—10. (3) The people of Judah, and even some Israelites, observe it with great gladness, and double their feast of unleavened bread: 11—16, 21—27. (4) Many of the observers had not duly prepared or managed themselves; but the Lord, at Hezekiah's prayer, pardoned their mistakes: 17—20.

A. M. 3278. B. C. 726.

AND Hezekiah sent to all [a] Israel and Judah, and wrote letters also to [b] Ephraim and Manasseh,[*] that they should come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, to [c]keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel.

2 For the king had [d]taken counsel, and his princes, and all the congregation in Jerusalem, to keep the passover [e] in the second month.[†]

3 For they could not keep it at [f]that time, because the priests [g]had not sanctified themselves sufficiently, neither had the people gathered themselves together to Jerusalem.

4 And the thing [‡]pleased the king and all the congregation.

5 So they established a decree to make proclamation [h]throughout all Israel, from Beersheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem: for they had not done it of a long time in such sort as it was written.

6 So the posts went with the letters [§]from the king and his princes throughout all Israel and Judah, and according to the commandment of the king, saying, Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, and he will return to the remnant of you that are escaped out of the hand of the kings of Assyria.

7 And be not ye like your fathers, and like your brethren, which trespassed against the LORD God of their fathers, who therefore gave them up to desolation,[‖] as ye see.

8 Now [*]be ye not stiff-necked, as your fathers were, but [i] yield yourselves unto the LORD, and enter into his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever; and serve the LORD your God, that the fierceness of his wrath may turn away from you.

9 For if ye turn again unto the LORD, your brethren and your children shall find compassion before them that lead them captive, so that they shall come again into this land: for the LORD your God is gracious and merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if ye return unto him.

10 So the posts passed from city to city

[*] Ephraim and Manasseh lay contiguous to Jerusalem, but not nearer than Reuben and Gad, and not so near as Simeon and Dan. Three reasons seem to have produced this special notice of the invitation to Ephraim, of which Manasseh was a dependency, as Benjamin was of Judah. (1) After Judah Ephraim was the greatest tribe. (2) It seems to have been the most hopelessly addicted to idolatry; and therefore its omission might have been expected (Hos. 4. 17. & 13. 1.) (3) The king, by his pious and energetic letter, seeks to aid the noble efforts of Hosea, for the reformation and salvation of his country. This special invitation to Ephraim seems to have arisen from the partial reformation produced by the preaching of Hosea, (ch. 13. 12. & 14. 8.) in which Manasseh, a dependency of Ephraim, as Benjamin was of Judah, had, most probably, participated. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—What strange alterations the change of a sovereign may produce in a nation! And great is the mercy when God gives good men power after they have long been unwilling spectators of wickedness. It is highly honourable when those in high stations give to the Lord the first beginnings of their power and influence. And, when God gives opportunity, with earnestness, humble grief, and holy zeal, should men reform their neglects, and turn to the Lord. Corrupters of religion often leave the church and ordinances of God in the greatest confusion. And it is necessary to ponder the punishments of former sins, in order to render us hearty and active in our reformation. And much may be done in a short time if all concerned be diligent. Honourable are those ministers whom God stirs up to be leaders in the work of reformation, to provoke their brethren to jealousy: and glorious is the sight when they cheerfully work to one another's hands in reforming the church;—when kings, princes, priests, and people, vie with one another in improving Jesus Christ as the great propitiation for sins, and in serious repentance of former sins, and returning to the observance of all God's ordinances, grudging neither cost nor care! They will then find their work much more easy than they expected. But, alas! that priests, who ought to be leaders, are often the most unqualified

11 Nevertheless [s] divers of Asher, and Manasseh, and of Zebulun, humbled themselves,* and came to Jerusalem.

15 Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the [y] priests and the Levites were ashamed,‡ and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt-offerings into the house of the LORD.

16 And they stood in [§] their place after their manner, [z] according to the law of Moses the man of God: the priests sprinkled the blood, which they received of the hand of the Levites.

18 For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, [b] had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written: but Hezekiah [c] prayed for them, saying, The good LORD pardon every one

26 So there was great joy in Jerusalem: for since the [q] time of Solomon, the son of David king of Israel, there was not the like in Jerusalem.†

27 ¶ Then the [r] priests the Levites arose and blessed the people: and their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to [s] his holy dwelling-place, even unto heaven.

‡ This noble iconoclast expedition may be called, in one sense, a popular impulse, because it pervaded the people, as well as the king and the nobility. But it was no less, on that account, an impulse from God, (ch. 30. 10.) and it was strictly legal, by the supreme law of heaven, however contrary to idolatrous custom, prescription, and ordinances. See Ex. 23. 24. Deut. 7. 5. & 12. 3.—ED.

§ "Of the camp of Jehovah." The city and temple of Jerusalem, and all places where God is truly worshipped, are so called, in reference to the providential and mediatorial encampment of "the angel of the Lord," and his hosts around his people for protection and deliverance. See Ps. 34. 7. Heb. 1. 14.—ED.

NOW when all this was finished, all Israel that were * present went out to the cities of Judah, and brake the images in pieces, and cut down the groves, and threw down the high places and the altars out of all Judah and Benjamin, in Ephraim also and Manasseh, † until they had utterly destroyed them all.‡ Then all the children of Israel returned, every man to his possession, into their own cities.

2 ¶ And Hezekiah appointed the courses of the priests, and the Levites after their courses, every man according to his service, the priests and Levites for burnt-offerings and for peace-offerings, to minister, and to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the tents of the LORD.§

3 He appointed also the king's portion of his substance for the burnt-offerings, to wit, for and careless; and need so repeatedly to be stirred up to that which is peculiarly their work! But they who love God's altar will delight to support the service; and past neglects will quicken them to more abundant diligence.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—God's ordinances ought not to be neglected on account of a mere circumstance. It is best to engage people to duty when they are in a proper temper. And we ought to stir up all whom we can to the worship and service of God, and that by the most engaging motives; representing to them the mercies and judgments of God, and his promises and threatenings. It is never too late for sinners to return while the calls of mercy are continued: and it is only impenitence persisted in that becomes fatal. If we do all that we can to encourage them, their blood must be on their own heads if they obstinately refuse. Better that our invitations should be derided, than that God should be dishonoured, and one soul murdered by our sloth. And, though few are saved, a remnant shall hear, fear, and humble themselves, and return to the Lord. What a shame it is, when, on the contrary, ministers, through their inactivity, hinder the people in the service of God! But pleasant is the work when the worshippers of God have such delight in his service, that they grudge neither cost nor time for it, and can hardly bear its conclusion. And God in mercy will provide his people with useful ministers, when many, who ought to be such, are scandalously negligent. He is a God of infinite grace; ready to accept our sincere confessions of our sins, hear our prayers, and forgive our transgressions. If we are but sincerely desirous to honour him, he will, through the blood of his Son, readily pardon our manifold infirmities. Yea, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; who presents our persons and our services, and renders all acceptable in his sight.

the morning and evening burnt-offerings, and the burnt-offerings for the sabbaths, and for the new-moons, and for the set feasts, as it is written in the law of the LORD.

4 Moreover he commanded the people that dwelt in Jerusalem to give [o]the portion of the priests and the Levites, that they might be encouraged in the law of the LORD.[*]

5 ¶ And as soon as the commandment [†]came abroad,[‡] the children of Israel [f]brought in abundance the first-fruits of corn, wine, and oil, and [§]honey, and of all the increase of the field; and the tithe of all things brought they in abundantly.

6 And concerning the children of Israel and Judah, that dwelt in the cities of Judah, they also brought in the tithe of oxen and sheep, and the [g]tithe of holy things, which were consecrated unto the LORD their God, and laid them [h]by heaps.

7 In the [‖]third month[‖] they began to lay the foundation of the heaps, and finished them in the seventh month.[*]

8 And when Hezekiah and the princes came and saw the heaps, they [k]blessed the LORD, and his people Israel.

9 Then Hezekiah questioned with the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps.

10 And Azariah the chief priest of the house of Zadok answered him, and said, [m]Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, we have had enough to eat,[†] and have left plenty: for the LORD hath blessed his people; and that which is left is this great store.

11 ¶ Then Hezekiah commanded to prepare [‡]chambers in the house of the LORD; and they prepared them,

12 And brought in the offerings, and the tithes, and the dedicated things, faithfully: [n]over which Cononiah the Levite was ruler, and Shimei his brother was the next.

13 And Jehiel, and Azaziah, and Nahath, and Asahel, and Jerimoth, and Jozabad, and Eliel, and Ismachiah, and Mahath, and Benaiah, were overseers, [§]under the hand of Cononiah, and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king, and Azariah the ruler of the house of God.

14 And Kore the son of Imnah the Levite, [o]the porter toward the east, was over the free-will-offerings of God, to distribute the oblations of the LORD, and the [p]most holy things.

15 And [‖]next him were Eden, and Miniamin, and Jeshua, and Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, in the [q]cities of the priests, in their [*]set office, to give to their brethren by courses, as well to the great as to the small;

16 Besides their genealogy of males, from three years old and upward,[†] even unto every one that entereth into the house of the LORD, his [‡]daily portion for their service in their charges, according to their courses;

17 Both to the genealogy of the priests by the house of their fathers, and the Levites [r]from twenty years old and upward, in their charges by their courses;

18 And to the genealogy of all their little ones, their wives, and their sons, and their daughters, through all the congregation: for in their [*]set office they sanctified themselves in holiness:[§]

19 Also of the sons of Aaron the priests, which were [t]in the fields of the suburbs of their cities, in every several city, the men that were expressed by name, to give portions to all the males among the priests, and to all that were reckoned by genealogies among the Levites.

20 ¶ And thus did Hezekiah throughout all Judah, and [u]wrought that which was good, and right, and truth, before the LORD his God.

21 And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, and in the law, and in the commandments, to seek his God, he did it [x]with all his heart,[‖] and [y]prospered.

AFTER [a]these things, and the establishment thereof, [b]Sennacherib king of Assyria came, and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities, and thought [c]to win them for himself.

2 And when Hezekiah saw that Sennacherib was come, and that [d]he was purposed to fight against Jerusalem,

3 He took counsel with his princes and his mighty men to [e]stop the waters of the fountains which were without the city; and they did help him.

4 So there was gathered much people together, who stopped all the fountains, and the [f]brook that [*]ran through the midst of the land,[†] saying, Why should the kings of Assyria come, and find much water?

† Deep wells would be easily filled up, but how to stop a running brook, (supposed to be Kidron or Gihon) is not so easily conceived. The collecting of "much people," and the implied "hiding" of the brook, seems to indicate that, by a subterraneous passage, the water was conducted into the city, for the purpose of enabling it to stand the expected siege: while the want of water would distress or destroy the invaders. This view is corroborated by ver. 30, in which we have one of the earliest examples of civil engineering upon record.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—It is comfortable to go home from solemn work with the blessing of God upon us, and our heart inflamed with holy zeal against every thing sinful. And well bestowed is that labour or expense which we lay out in abolishing idolatry, or restoring the true worship of God. How comely is it when great men, by their generous presents, encourage others to bestow their respective dues upon the service and servants of God! The gospel ministry might be easily and comfortably maintained, did every one concerned minister according to his ability. And with great care ought sacred revenues up all the wall [g] that was broken, and raised it up to the towers, and [h] another wall without, and repaired [i] Millo in the city of David, and made [k] darts and shields in abundance.

6 And he set captains of war over the people, and gathered them together to him in the street of the gate of the city, and [*] spake comfortably to them, saying,

7 Be [l] strong and courageous, be not afraid nor dismayed for the king of Assyria, nor for all the multitude that is with him: for there be more with us than with him.[†]

8 With him is an [m] arm of flesh; but with us is the LORD our God to help us, and to fight our battles. And the people [n] rested themselves upon the words of Hezekiah king of Judah.

9 ¶ [o] After this did Sennacherib king of Assyria send his servants[‡] to Jerusalem,[§] (but he himself laid siege against Lachish, and all [‖] his power with him,) unto Hezekiah king of Judah, and unto all Judah that were at Jerusalem, saying,

10 Thus saith Sennacherib king of Assyria, [p] Whereon [q] do ye trust, that ye abide [*] in the siege[†] in Jerusalem?

11 Doth not Hezekiah persuade you to give over yourselves to die by famine and by thirst, saying, [r] The LORD our God shall deliver us out of the hand of the king of Assyria?

12 Hath not the same Hezekiah [s] taken away his high places and his altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall worship before one altar, and burn incense upon it?

13 Know ye not what I and my fathers have done unto all the people of other lands? [t] were the gods of the nations of those lands any ways able to deliver their lands out of mine hand?

14 Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed, that could deliver his people out of mine hand, that your God[‡] should be able to deliver you out of mine hand?

15 Now therefore [u] let not Hezekiah deceive you, nor persuade you on this manner, neither yet believe him: for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people out of mine hand, and out of the hand of my fathers; [x] how much less shall your God deliver you out of mine hand?

16 And his servants spake [y] yet more against the LORD God, and against his servant Hezekiah.[§]

17 He [z] wrote also letters to rail on the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against him, saying, As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people out of mine hand, so shall not the God of Hezekiah deliver his people out of mine hand.

18 Then they [a] cried with a loud voice, in the Jews' speech, unto the people of Jerusalem that were on the wall, to affright them, and to trouble them; that they might take the city.

19 And they spake [b] against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth, which were the work of the hands of man.[*]

20 ¶ And [c] for this cause Hezekiah the king, and the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven.[†]

21 [d] And the LORD sent an angel,[‡] which cut off all the mighty men of valour, and the leaders and captains in the camp of the king of Assyria: so he returned with shame of face to his own land. And when he was come into the house of his god, they that came forth of his own bowels [§] slew him there with the sword.[‖]

22 Thus the LORD [e] saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all other,[*] and [f] guided them on every side.

23 And many [g] brought gifts unto the LORD to Jerusalem, and [†] presents to Hezekiah king of Judah: so that he was magnified in the sight of all nations[‡] from thenceforth.

24 ¶ [h] In those days Hezekiah was sick to the death, and prayed unto the LORD: and he spake unto him, and he [‖] gave him a sign.

25 But Hezekiah [k] rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him; for [‖] his heart was lifted up: therefore there was [m] wrath upon him, and upon Judah and Jerusalem.[§]

26 Notwithstanding Hezekiah [n] humbled himself for [‖] the pride of his heart, (both he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem,) so that the wrath of the LORD came not upon them in the days of Hezekiah.

27 ¶ And Hezekiah had [o] exceeding much riches and honour: and he made himself treasuries for silver, and for gold, and for precious stones, and for spices, and for shields, and for all manner of [*] pleasant jewels;

28 Storehouses also for the increase of corn, and wine, and oil; and stalls for all manner of beasts, and cotes for flocks.

29 Moreover he provided him cities, and possessions of flocks and herds in abundance; for [p] God had given him substance very much.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

(1) Manasseh's long reign, and wickedness: 1—9. (2) The Lord's rebuke by his prophets: 10: and punishment of it by captivity: 11. (3) Manasseh's return to God by repentance; his return to his kingdom, and prosperity in it; and his partial reformation of it: 12—17. (4) A summary account of his life and death: 18—20. (5) The great wickedness and speedy destruction of Amon his successor: 21—25.

MANASSEH [a] was twelve years old when he began to reign; and he reigned fifty and five years in Jerusalem:

2 But did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, like unto the [b] abominations of the heathen, whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel.

3 For [c] he built again the high places which Hezekiah his father had [d] broken down, and [e] he reared up altars for Baalim, and made groves, and worshipped all the host of heaven,[*] and served them.

4 Also he built altars in the house of the LORD, whereof the LORD had said, [f] In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever.

5 And he built [g] altars for all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of the LORD.

6 And he [h] caused his children to pass through the fire in the valley of the son of Hinnom: also he observed times, and used enchantments, and used witchcraft, and dealt with a familiar spirit,[†] and with wizards: he wrought much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke him to anger.

7 And he set a carved image[‡] (the idol which he had made) in the house of God, of Manasseh failed of the first; but, by the grace of God, he happily exemplified the other two.—Ed.

[‖] "The words of the seers," are summarily recorded, (2 Kin. 21. 10—15.) with a sad recital of "the rest of his acts," (ver. 18.) but his "prayer" is not extant. The prayer attributed to him in the Apocrypha is, by universal consent, admitted to be spurious. Is then a portion of Holy Scripture lost? No, nor does this and similar texts necessarily lead to such a conclusion. The words, are written, are supplied by the translators, and the Hebrew might as well be translated were written. Why they were expunged does not appear, nor is it of any importance for us to inquire or to know.—Ed.

which [l] God had said to David, and to Solomon his son, In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen before all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever:

8 Neither will I any more remove the foot of Israel from out of the land which I have appointed for your fathers; [k] so that they will take heed to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law, and the statutes, and the ordinances, by the hand of Moses.

9 So Manasseh [l] made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err,[*] and to do worse than the heathen, whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israel.

10 ¶ [m] And the LORD spake to Manasseh, and to his people; but they would not hearken.

11 Wherefore the LORD brought upon them the captains of the host [n] of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh [o] among the thorns,[‡] and [p] bound him with fetters, and carried him to Babylon.

12 [q] And when he was in affliction, he besought the LORD his God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, 13 And prayed unto him: and he [r] was entreated of him, and heard his supplication, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. [s] Then Manasseh knew that the LORD he was God.

14 ¶ Now after this he [t] built a wall without the city of David, on the west side of Gihon, in the valley, even to the entering in of the fish-gate, and compassed about [u] Ophel, and raised it up a very great height, and put captains of war in all the fenced cities of Judah.

15 And [x] he took away the strange gods, and the idol out of the house of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the LORD, and in Jerusalem, and cast them out of the city.

16 And he [y] repaired the altar of the LORD, and sacrificed thereon peace-offerings and thank-offerings, and [z] commanded Judah to serve the LORD God of Israel.[§]

17 Nevertheless [a] the people did sacrifice still in the high places, yet unto the LORD their God only.

18 ¶ [b] Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, and his prayer unto his God, and [c] the words of the seers that spake to him[‖] in the name of the LORD God of Israel, behold, they are written in the book of the Kings of Israel:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—Never are Satan and his agents more ready to harass the people of God than when they are employed in the work of reformation: and thus God justly punishes his people for their hypocrisy and indifference in his service. Proud men hope to carry all to their mind, if their first attempts are successful. But, when war or danger is threatened, we must prepare for it by every proper mean, remembering, after all, to rest chiefly on the powerful protection and assistance of God. Strong faith in him will help us above the fear of man. If our adversaries discover their enmity to God and our souls, by boasting and blasphemy, let us give ourselves to mourning and prayer: so shall the issue be terrible to them, and happy and honourable to us. But how criminal is ingratitude to God for his singular, his miraculous favours! The pride of his own children is especially odious and provoking to him; and it becomes us carefully to guard against, and heartily to hate it. Astonishing is the wisdom of God, that can make sins, as well as sufferings, the means of his people's trial and humiliation. He delights to honour those whom his grace hath enabled remarkably to honour him. And noted piety and activity for God are the true way to be happy and prosperous in life, and to die revered and justly lamented.

19 His prayer also, and how God was entreated of him, and all his sins, and his trespass, and the places wherein he built high places, and set up groves and graven images, before he was humbled, behold, they are written among the sayings of the [d]seers.

20 ¶ So Manasseh [e]slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house:[*] and Amon his son reigned in his stead.[†]

21 ¶ [f]Amon was two and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned two years in Jerusalem.

22 But he [g]did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD, as did Manasseh his father: for Amon sacrificed unto all the carved images which Manasseh his father had made, and served them;

23 And [h]humbled not himself before the LORD, as Manasseh his father had humbled himself; but Amon [i]trespassed more and more.

24 And [k]his servants conspired against him, and slew him in his own house.

25 ¶ But the people of the land [l]slew all them that had conspired against king Amon; and the people of the land made Josiah his son king in his stead.[‡]

CHAPTER XXXIV.

(1) Josiah extirpates idolatry: 1—7, 33. (2) Repairs the temple of God: 8—13. (3) Alarmed by the reading of a book of the law found in the temple, he consults Huldah the prophetess; and receives an answer, denouncing destruction to the nation, but comfort to himself: 14—28. (4) The law being read in a general meeting of his subjects, he and they renew their fathers' solemn covenant with God: 29—33.

JOSIAH was eight years old when he began to reign; and he reigned in Jerusalem one and thirty years.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of David his father, and declined neither to the right hand nor to the left.

3 ¶ For in the eighth year of his reign,[*] while he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father: and in the twelfth year he began to purge Judah and Jerusalem from the high places, and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images.

4 And they brake down the altars of Baalim in his presence; and the [†]images that were on high above them he cut down; and the groves, and the carved images, and the molten images, he brake in pieces, and made dust of them, and strowed it upon the graves of them that had sacrificed unto them.[‡]

* No limit of age can be prescribed to the spirit and grace of God. The call to the vineyard may be, not only in the eleventh hour of a nation, but of an individual. Mat. 20. 6. Luke 23. 43. Still, early conversions are the most common, and the most hopeful. A young king, surrounded by all the fascinations of a court, yet fixing his heart on heaven; beset by flatterers, yet listening only to the word of truth, the Spirit of God, and his own conscience; tempted by the example of paternal idolatry, yet steadily determined upon a godly reformation—such was Josiah—such is the beauty of early piety.—ED.

‡ There has been, in all ages, a desire, amongst superstitious people, of being buried in places of imaginary sanctity. The sun worshippers seem to have prepared their tombs near their temples, and thus to have furnished a ready means for polluting the relics of their abominable idolatry.—ED.

* The ruin of the temple must have been nearly complete, as walls, roofs, and floors, alike require to be repaired. The walls had probably been partially pulled down, as is common in similar cases, for the erection of other buildings. The flat roofs would suffer, for want of repairs, more speedily than those of angular form; and the destruction of the floors, independently of depredation, would soon follow, from the free access of the rain.—Note. This is a sad picture of the ruin of the house of God: how much more sad the state of a soul which pride, or "covetousness, which is idolatry," or deceitful lusts, have destroyed!—ED.

† Why the sacred musicians were the overseers, is not declared, yet there must have been some reason for the selection. May it not have had reference to the fact, that as in the building of the temple "there was no sound of hammer nor axe, nor any tool of iron heard," (1 Kin. 6. 7.) so it should be in the repairing, and that the "bearers of burdens" should march, and the other artificers work, to the sound of music, and the voice of praise? § See note on 2 Kin. 22. 8. There is every reason to conclude, that this book was the autograph of Moses; for though there are fifteen places in the Old Testament where the "law of Moses," and "book of Moses" are mentioned, yet in this place alone is it called "the book of the law, in, or by, the hand of Moses."—ED.

5 And he [a]burnt the bones of the priests upon their altars, and cleansed Judah and Jerusalem.

6 And so [b]did he in the cities of Manasseh, and Ephraim, and Simeon, even unto Naphtali, with their mattocks [*]round about.[†]

7 And when he had broken down the altars and the groves, and had beaten the graven images [c]into powder, and cut down all the idols throughout all the land of Israel, he returned to Jerusalem.

8 ¶ Now, [d]in the eighteenth year of his reign,[‡] when he had purged the land, and the house, he sent Shaphan the son of Azaliah, and Maaseiah the governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to [e]repair the house of the LORD his God.

9 And when they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they [f]delivered the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites that kept the doors had gathered of the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, and of all Judah and Benjamin; and they returned to Jerusalem.[§]

10 And they put it in [g]the hand of the workmen that had the oversight of the house of the LORD, and they gave it to the workmen that wrought in the house of the LORD, to repair and amend the house;

11 Even to the artificers and builders gave they it, to buy hewn stone, and timber for couplings, and [‖]to floor the houses which the [h]kings of Judah had destroyed.[*]

12 And the men did the work [i]faithfully: and the overseers of them were Jahath and Obadiah, the Levites, of the sons of Merari; and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to set it forward; and other of the Levites, [k]all that could skill of instruments of music.[†]

13 Also they were [l]over the bearers of burdens, and were overseers of all that wrought the work in any manner of service: and [m]of the Levites there were scribes, and officers, and porters.

14 And when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, Hilkiah the priest [n]found a book of the law of the LORD given [‡]by Moses.[§]

15 And Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, I have found the book of the law in the house of the LORD. And Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—What a grief it would be to many godly parents, to return from death, and behold the abominations of their children! Nations and churches readily relapse into their wonted abominations, from which they had been reformed with infinite pains. They become inhuman, unnatural, and infatuated, when God gives them over to their own hearts' lusts. They turn from and provoke God, their best friend, and depend on Satan, their worst enemy. How quickly Hezekiah's boasted treasures are carried to Babylon, and his son to attend them! But O the mercy of God, in giving repeated warnings to the most vile and obstinate sinners; or in afflicting them, in order to awaken them! He can convert and forgive the greatest monsters of wickedness. But bitter are the griefs, and visible the fruits, of real repentance, particularly when the subjects were once remarkably wicked. What care to restore the worship of God which they have defaced, and to reform the persons whom they have seduced! Though God cast their sin behind his back, they never forget it themselves, nor think themselves worthy of ordinary honours, whether in life or in death. And it may be useful for us to remember, that our sins, with their aggravating circumstances, as well as our returns to our duty, are exactly marked in the registers of heaven. But with what a dreadful career, and unremitting obstinacy, do some men post to eternal ruin! They greedily copy their parents' wickedness, but never their repentance.

16 And Shaphan carried the book to the king, and brought the king word back again, saying, All that was committed [a] to thy servants, they do it.

17 And they have [b] gathered together the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers, and to the hand of the workmen.

18 Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, Hilkiah the priest hath given me a book. And Shaphan read [†] it [u] before the king.

19 And it came to pass, when the king had heard the [x] words of the law, that he [y] rent his clothes.[‡]

20 And the king commanded Hilkiah, and Ahikam the son of Shaphan, and [c] Abdon the son of Micah, and Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah a servant of the king's, saying,

21 Go, inquire of the LORD for me, and for them that are [a] left in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that is found: for [b] great is the wrath of the LORD that is poured out upon us, because our fathers have not kept the word of the LORD, to do after all that is written in this book.

22 And Hilkiah, and they that the king had appointed, went to Huldah the [c] prophetess, the wife of Shallum, the son of Tikvath, the son of [d] Hasrah, keeper of the [§] wardrobe; (now she dwelt in Jerusalem [‖] in the college;) [e] and they spake to her to that effect.

23 ¶ [e] And she answered them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Tell ye the man that sent you to me,

24 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, [f] I will bring evil upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, even all the curses that are written in the book which they have read before the king of Judah:

25 Because [g] they have forsaken me, and have burned incense unto other gods, that they might provoke me to anger with all the works of their hands; therefore my wrath shall be poured out upon this place, and shall not be quenched.

26 And as for the king of Judah, who sent you to inquire of the LORD, so shall ye say unto him, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel concerning the words which thou hast heard;

27 Because thine heart was [h] tender,[†] and thou didst humble thyself before God, when thou heardest his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humbledst thyself before me, and didst rend thy clothes, and weep before me; I have even heard thee also, saith the LORD.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—Happy are they whom God by his grace effectually calls in the days of their youth! and indeed there are but few aged conversions. Happy is the nation whose sovereign sets before them the best example: zealously purges his dominion from temptations to destructive impieties; reforms the church in his nation; trembles at the words of the God of Israel; and, under the apprehensions of his denounced wrath, humbles himself; and labours to have all his subjects taught divine truths, fixed in them, and preserved from wickedness. And it is pleasant, after great prevailing impiety, to behold of your brethren [a] the people, and after the division of the families of the Levites;

6 So kill the passover, and [d] sanctify yourselves, and prepare your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.

7 And Josiah [e] gave to the people, of the flock, lambs and kids, all for the passover-offerings, for all that were present, to the number of thirty thousand,[†] and three thousand bullocks: these were of the king's substance.

8 And [f] his princes [‡] gave willingly unto the people, to the priests, and to the Levites: [g] Hilkiah, and Zechariah, and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave unto the priests, for the passover-offerings, two thousand and six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen.

9 Conaniah also, and Shemaiah and Nethaneel, his brethren, and Hashabiah, and Jeiel, and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, [h] gave unto the Levites, for passover-offerings, five thousand small cattle, and five hundred oxen.

10 So the service was prepared, and the priests [i] stood in their place, and the Levites in their courses, according to the king's commandment.

11 And they killed the passover, and the priests [k] sprinkled the blood from their hands, and the Levites [l] flayed them.

12 And they [m] removed the burnt-offerings,[§] that they might give according to the divisions of the [n] families of the people, to offer unto the LORD, as it is written in the book of Moses: and so did they with the oxen.

13 And they [o] roasted the passover with fire, according to the ordinance: but the other holy offerings sod they in pots, and in caldrons, and in pans, and [p] divided them speedily among all the people.

14 And afterward they made ready for themselves, and for the priests: because the priests the sons of Aaron [q] were busied in offering of burnt-offerings and the fat[‖] until night; therefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the priests the sons of Aaron.

15 And the singers, the sons of Asaph, were in their [*] place, according to the [r] commandment of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer; and the porters [s] waited at every gate; they might not depart from their service;[†] for their brethren the Levites prepared for them.

16 So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the passover, and to offer burnt-offerings upon the altar of the LORD, according to the commandment of king Josiah.

17 And the children of Israel that were [*] present [t] kept the passover at that time, and the feast of unleavened bread seven days.

18 And there [u] was no passover like to that[†] kept in Israel from the days of Samuel the prophet; neither did all the kings of Israel keep such a passover as Josiah kept, and the priests, and the Levites, and all Judah and Israel that were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem.

19 [x] In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah was this passover kept.

20 ¶ [y] After all this, when Josiah had prepared the [‡] temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against Carchemish by Euphrates: and Josiah went out against him.[§]

21 But he sent ambassadors to him, saying, [z] What have I to do with thee, thou king of Judah? I come not against thee this day, but against [a] the house wherewith I have war; for [b] God commanded me to make haste: forbear thee from meddling with God, who is with me, that he destroy thee not.

22 Nevertheless Josiah would not turn his face from him, but [c] disguised himself, that he might fight with him, and hearkened not unto the words of Necho from [d] the mouth of God, and came to fight in the valley of [e] Megiddo.

23 And the archers shot at king Josiah; and the king said to his servants, Have me away; for I am sore [f] wounded.

24 His servants therefore took him out of that chariot, and put him in the second chariot that he had; and they brought him to Jerusalem, and he [g] died, and was buried [*] in one of the sepulchres of his fathers: and [h] all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for Josiah.

kings, ministers, and people, harmoniously and heartily zealous for the instituted purity of God's worship, and solemnly devoting themselves, upon a new-covenant footing, to his service.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—Alas! how often neither ministers nor people show due forwardness in observing the solemn ordinances of God! Yet much might be done for the excitement of others by one in high station, who so loves him, that he grudges no expense nor labour in his service. And magistrates, by their example and zealous exertions, might effectually instigate and encourage even ministers to do their duty; yea, where many difficulties are in the way. No one ought to become a hypocrite for the sake of carnal advantage: but certainly such as appear sincere ought to meet with peculiar encouragement. Care should be taken, by all concerned, that none be deprived of God's ordinances on account of their poverty; and that none, by public service, injure his own soul's edification. But great labour and pains are necessary in reducing all ranks and things to due order, in the observation of God's ordinances, after they have been long neglected. The very best of men rarely leave the world without some visible blemish. How affecting it is to see this great man die in an unjust war, after he had received from God fair warning of his danger! But God, in his sovereign wisdom, often makes his people's sinful rashness the mean of their

THEN the people of the land took [a] Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and made him king in his father's stead in Jerusalem.

2 Jehoahaz was twenty and three years old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months in Jerusalem.

3 And the king of Egypt [b] put him down* at Jerusalem, † and condemned the land in ‡ an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold.

4 And the king of Egypt made Eliakim his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem, and turned his name to Jehoiakim. And Necho took [c] Jehoahaz his brother, and carried him to Egypt.

5 ¶ [d] Jehoiakim was twenty and five years old when he began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God.

6 Against him [e] came up Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and bound him in § fetters, to carry him to Babylon.

7 [f] Nebuchadnezzar also carried off the vessels of the house of the LORD to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon.

8 Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, and [g] his abominations which he did, and that which was found in him, behold, they are written in the book of the Kings of Israel and Judah: and [h] Jehoiachin his son reigned in his stead.

9 ¶ [i] Jehoiachin was eight years‖ old when he began to reign; and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem: and he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD.

10 And *when the year† was expired, king Nebuchadnezzar sent and brought him to Babylon, with the ‡ goodly vessels of the house of the LORD, and made [k] Zedekiah his brother king over Judah and Jerusalem.

11 ¶ [l] Zedekiah was one and twenty years old when he began to reign, and reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.

12 And he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God, and [m] humbled not himself before Jeremiah the prophet, speaking from the mouth of the LORD.

13 And he also [n] rebelled against king Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear by God: but he stiffened his neck, and hardened his heart, from turning unto the LORD God of Israel.

14 ¶ Moreover, all the chief of the priests, and the people, transgressed [o] very much after all the abominations of the heathen; and polluted the house of the LORD, which he had hallowed in Jerusalem.

15 [p] And the LORD God of their fathers sent to them * by his messengers, rising up † betimes,‡ and sending; because he had [q] compassion on his people, and on his dwelling-place:

16 But they [r] mocked§ the messengers of God, and despised his words, and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the LORD arose against his people, till there was no ‖ remedy.

17 [s] Therefore he brought upon them the king of the Chaldees, who slew their young men with the sword in the house of their sanctuary,* and had no compassion upon young man or maiden, old man, or him that stooped for age: he gave them all into his hand.

18 And [t] all the vessels of the house of God, great and small, and the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king, and of his princes; all these he brought to Babylon.

19 And they [u] burnt the house of God, and brake down the wall of Jerusalem, and burnt all the palaces thereof with fire, and destroyed all the goodly vessels thereof.

20 And † them that had escaped from the sword carried he away to Babylon, where they were servants [x] to him and his sons until the reign of the kingdom of Persia;

21 To fulfil the word of the LORD by the mouth of [y] Jeremiah, until the land [z] had enjoyed her sabbaths:‡ for as long as she lay desolate she kept sabbath, to fulfil threescore and ten years.

22 ¶ [a] Now, in the first year§ of Cyrus king of Persia, (that the word of the LORD spoken by the mouth of [b] Jeremiah might be accomplished,) [c] the LORD stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he made [d] a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

23 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, All the kingdoms of [e] the earth hath the LORD God of heaven given me; and he hath charged me to [f] build him an house in Jerusalem, which is in Judah: [g] who is there among you of all his people? the LORD his God be with him, and let him go up.

own happiness, and of their survivors' misery. Many lament the loss of their mercies who never rightly improved them in the enjoyment; and grieve for the misery which they see coming on their nation, who will not take the proper methods of repentance to prevent it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVI.—For the transgressions of a land, many and unprofitable are the princes of it. Quickly do things ripen for the ruin of nations when their day of punishment is at hand. But to what obstinate and aggravated wickedness are they permitted to arrive before the Lord pours out his destructive vengeance upon them! None are usually more deeply involved in it than the rulers in church and state: and none share more of their contempt, hatred, and persecution, than faithful ministers. But the righteous Lord at last marks their sins in their punishments; and makes up the loss of his honour, which he ought to have had from them, in the form or duration of his executed judgments. And yet in wrath he remembers mercy. Strangely he preserves his people's property for them against their return, even when they have provoked him to cast them out of it. In his providence he exactly adheres to his word. Nor will he, in his pardoning goodness, contend for ever, even where his honour requires him to contend long.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE SECOND BOOK OF CHRONICLES.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 1. He would dwell in the thick darkness.—Solomon here, by his ready reference and quotation, gives evidence of his intimate acquaintance with the Scriptures, and guards the people against any superstitious worship of the cloud, by directing them to God, who assumed it as his emblematical dwelling-place.——Ver. 41. The ark of thy strength.—The ark containing the tables of the covenant, guaranteed by the unchanging faithfulness, and enforced by the almighty power of God.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 22. He thought to make him king.—The succession lay in the will of the king, and did not descend by order to the eldest son. Rehoboam might therefore make this selection; but, as the case of Adonijah and Absalom gave him warning, he dispersed his other sons, with ample maintenance, to separate commands; so that none of them might have an opportunity of acquiring such popularity in the capital, as might tempt them to rebellion. See 2 Sam. 15. 1—13.

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 1. Asa king of Judah.—Baasha died in the 26th year of Asa, and so could not be at war with him in the 36th, 1 Kin. 15. 3. & 16. 1, 6, 8. The word, however, rendered "reign," may as properly be translated "kingdom," and the calculation may be from the formation of Judah and Benjamin into a separate kingdom under Rehoboam. This rendering will also apply to ch. 15. 19.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 1. Sennacherib king of Assyria came and entered into Judah, and encamped against the fenced cities.—Hezekiah had given him no cause of offence; but Sennacherib most probably desired a position on the Mediterranean Sea, and thereby access to Africa and Europe; or, it may be, he was compelled by mere lust of conquest, or to give employment to his armies; or, what is more probable still, by zeal on behalf of his idols, which Hezekiah had so boldly and effectually cast down. See ver. 12.

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 4. According to the writing of Solomon.—This interference of David and Solomon in the regulation of Divine worship, does not sanction either kings or ecclesiastics to model God's service after their own imaginations. David and Solomon were both prophets of the Lord, and, in that character, and not in virtue of their office as kings, did they enact those pious and orderly forms which Josiah is now restoring.

THE BOOK OF EZRA

Was probably written by himself. It contains a history of eighty years; and exhibits the Divine fulfilment of all those predictions of Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Micah, or others, which respected the deliverance from Babylon. It particularly informs us (1) Upon what encouragement, and what numbers returned; i, ii. (2) How the temple was rebuilt and dedicated, notwithstanding repeated stops from their heathen neighbours; iii—vi. (3) How Ezra, as Artaxerxes' deputy, came to Jerusalem, mourned over, and dissolved the marriages with heathen women; vii—x.

CHAPTER I.

(1) Cyrus issues a proclamation for the Jews' release from captivity: 1—4. (2) Many of them prepare to return: 5, 6. (3) Cyrus delivers the sacred vessels belonging to the temple, which Nebuchadnezzar had brought to Babylon, and laced in his temple of Belus, to Sheshbazzar their prince: 7—11.

A. M. 3468. B. C. 536.

NOW, in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia,* (that the word of the LORD by the mouth of Jeremiah might be fulfilled,) the LORD [a]stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia, that he [b]made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and put it also in writing, saying,

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of Persia, The LORD God of heaven hath given me all the kingdoms of the earth;† and he hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah;

3 Who is there among you of all his people? his God be with him, and let him go up to Jerusalem, which is in Judah, and build the house of the LORD God of Israel, (he is the God,) which is in Jerusalem.

4 And whosoever remaineth in any place where he sojourneth, let the men of his place [c]help him with silver, and with gold, and with goods, and with beasts, besides the free-will-offering for the house of God that is in Jerusalem.

5 ¶ Then rose up the chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and the priests, and the Levites, with all them whose spirit [d]God had raised,* to go up to build the house of the LORD which is in Jerusalem.

6 And all they that were about them [e]strengthened their hands with vessels of silver, with gold, with goods, and with beasts, and with precious things, besides all that was [f]willingly offered.

7 ¶ Also Cyrus the king brought forth the vessels of the house of the LORD, [g]which Nebuchadnezzar had brought forth out of Jerusalem, and had put them in the house of his gods;

8 Even those did Cyrus king of Persia bring forth by the hand of Mithredath the treasurer, and numbered them unto [h]Sheshbazzar, the prince of Judah.

9 And this is the number of them: thirty chargers of gold, a thousand [i]chargers of silver, nine and twenty knives,

10 Thirty basons of gold, silver basons of a second sort four hundred and ten, and other vessels a thousand.

11 [k]All the vessels of gold and of silver were five thousand and four hundred.† All these did Sheshbazzar bring up with them of [l]the captivity, that were brought up from Babylon unto Jerusalem.

* Cyrus, the son of a king of Persia, by a daughter of the king of Media, united these two kingdoms, and conquered Babylon. He was born 600 years before Christ, and reigned 30 years. His name and conquests were prophetically announced by Isaiah, 200 years before his birth; and Josephus (Ant. l. ii. c. 2) attributes his partiality for the Jews, to his reading these prophecies under the instruction of Daniel. —ED.

† According to the best authorities, Cyrus, at this time, reigned over the Persians, Medes, Hyrcanians, Bactrians, Indians, Assyrians, Syrians, and all the countries called Lesser Asia; still these were far from being "all the kingdoms of the earth." All the vessels restored by Cyrus, amounted but to 2499; but all the vessels brought up to Jerusalem were 5400, including all the people had bestowed. See ver. 6.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Behold how God rules over the kingdoms of the earth, and turns the hearts of princes and others whithersoever he pleases, for the good of his church! God is here exactly fulfilling the predictions of his word concerning the name of the deliverer; and the occasion, time, and manner of the deliverance. It is honourable for princes, and men in authority, to begin the exercise of their power in the service of God, as an acknowledgment of his bounty to them; and to overlook secular interests and customs of countries, in order to put honour on Christ and his people. But in every good word and

* The empire was divided into provinces or governments, (see Esth. 1. 1) of which Canaan seems to have been one, and Ezra naturally adopts the distinctive language of his time, as that most intelligible to the generation that returned from the captivity. Some, however, by province, understand Babylon; but had that been Ezra's meaning, he would scarcely have called his brethren "children of the province." See chap. 5. 8.—Ed.

† That the Jews in their captivity still retained their taste for sacred music, both vocal and instrumental, is manifest from Psal. 137. 2. What care he took to preserve the furniture of his temple, and maintain the princely dignity of Judah, even in Babylon! But much greater is his care of whatever pertains to Jesus and his people. And it is honourable when princes and ministers are peculiarly forward to rebuild God's temple, and reform his church.

* In 2 Chr. 8. 9, it is related that Solomon made servants, not of Israel, but of the remnants of the nations that had not been expelled. These, if converted to the faith, it was lawful to incorporate into the Jewish nation, and these "servants of Solomon" are most probably their descendants.—ED.

† The reason of this exactness is plain from this, that such of the Jews as believed their prophets, expected a return into their native land after a period of 70 years, and preserved their genealogies as the title on which they might resume their properties.—Graves. Jer. 32. 14.

‡ Not spiritually, but genealogically polluted. This exclusion presents the two emblematic lessons. 1. The necessity of proving our spiritual descent by being born again. John 3. 3, 5. 2. The duty of excluding or removing from the ministry of the gospel all who cannot afford scriptural evidence that they are themselves the subjects of that holy conversion which they enforce upon others.—ED.

‖ These separate numbers, being added, give only 29,818. The numbers in Nehemiah 31,089; yet both agree in giving one grand total, 42,360. To reconcile these varying accounts, it is necessary to observe, 1. That as many priests failed in establishing their genealogy, (ver. 61, 62) we may unquestionably infer, that many of the people were in the same predicament. 2. The number of these attainted priests is not given, so we may justly conclude of the unregistered people. 3. The persons enumerated obtain their hereditary estates, in virtue of their genealogy. 4. The persons who cannot trace their descent, fail in establishing a right to any particular estate, but are not therefore excluded from the other rights of citizenship, but may settle as derivative tenants, or purchase for years, according to the Jubilee law, or obtain new settlements in the unclaimed lands. Now these, being added to the others, make up the sum of "the whole congregation." 5. When Ezra recounts 494 not mentioned in Nehemiah, and Nehemiah 1765 not mentioned in Ezra, these accounts may be easily reconciled, by supposing the two varying enumerations to relate to different periods of proof of genealogy and enrolment as citizens, the third to the period when the registry was completed.—ED.

* From what is known of Eastern caravans or cafilas, the horses would be for the necessary guard of cavalry, the mules for the richer class to ride, the camels for carrying food, camp furniture &c. and the asses would be nearly all required for conveyance of the children. It is obvious the greater number of adults, both men and women would be on foot. The whole presents a striking continuation of the statistics introduced by Moses, at the commandment of God, (Num. 13. 2, 17—20.) and, while it exhibits the deep poverty of the returning remnant, it beautifully illustrates the power of grace to open the heart, and teach every man to contribute to the cause of God, "after his ability." REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Great is the honour God puts upon those who prefer his glory, and the interests of his church, to their own ease! And great are the privileges which those obtain who are enrolled in the Lamb's book of life, and go up with Christ from their captivity to sin, Satan, and the world! What care God took to keep clear the genealogies of his ancient people, till his Son was thereby manifested to spring of Judah and David! It is reasonable that those be excluded from office in the church who undervalue that honour, and want proper tokens of their spiritual birth. And there is need always to consult God himself in every thing relating to his worship and service. To what a small and poor company had sin reduced the once numerous and wealthy tribes of Judah and Benjamin, at least such of them as were willing to appear for their God! And yet it is pleasing to see them in their poverty so willingly contributing to build a temple for God. And what is spent in God's work shall be returned with interest.

But was not this release and return of the Jews typical of the gathering of the nations to Christ, and of the church's deliverance from Antichrist, and the saints' release from death at the last day?—Awakened and encouraged by the joyful sound of the gospel trumpet, what multitudes, in the apostolic and after ages, did, with mourning for sin, with hallelujahs of praise, and with the most cordial affection, join themselves to Christ and his church, to be built up a spiritual temple and meet habitation for God! With almighty power Jesus did, and still does, go forth conquering and to conquer, and to overthrow our spiritual enemies, who hold us in slavery; making us free indeed, and willing to do whatever tends to his honour.—In due time the instruments of God's wrath shall destroy the mystical Babylon, and restore the souls of men to the ancient gospel liberty and rest.—In the resurrection, awakened by the trump of God, all the ransomed millions, who are written among the living in Jerusalem, shall arise and be gathered to the Lord, and quickly after follow him into the celestial Canaan, to be built up as the everlasting habitation of God—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

offering, both of the new-moons, and of all the set feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and of every one that [h] willingly offered a free-will-offering unto the LORD.

6 From [i] the first day of the seventh month began they to offer burnt-offerings unto the LORD. But the foundation of the temple of the LORD was not yet laid.

7 ¶ They [k] gave money also unto the masons, and to the carpenters; and meat, and drink, and oil,* unto them of Zidon, and to them of Tyre, to bring cedar-trees from Lebanon to the sea of Joppa, according to the [l] grant that they had of Cyrus king of Persia.

8 ¶ Now, in the second year† of their coming unto the house of God at Jerusalem, in the second month, began [m] Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Jeshua the son of Jozadak, and the remnant of their brethren the priests and the Levites, and all they that were come out of the captivity unto Jerusalem; and appointed the Levites, from [n] twenty years old and upward, to set forward the work of the house of the LORD.

9 Then stood [o] Jeshua, with his sons and his brethren, Kadmiel and his sons, the sons of [p] Judah, ‡together,§ to set forward the workmen in the house of God: the sons of Henadad, with their sons and their brethren the Levites.

10 And when the builders laid the foundation of the temple of the LORD, they [q] set the priests in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites, the sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the LORD, after the ordinance of David king of Israel.

11 And they [r] sang together by course, in praising and giving thanks unto the LORD; because he is good, for his mercy endureth for ever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid.

12 But many of the priests and Levites, and chief of the fathers, who were ancient men, that had seen the first house,‖ when the foundation of this house was laid before their eyes, [s] wept with a loud voice; and many shouted aloud for joy:

13 So that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people: for the people [t] shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Let us learn to prefer the business of religion to our most pressing temporal affairs; and in the worship of God, do what we can, when we cannot do what we would. And let leaders in church and state be peculiarly active and zealous. Never should the fear of men hinder us from, but hasten us to, fellowship with God. The more enemies we have, the more need have we that God should befriend us. If we have been long secluded from the public or solemn ordinances of God, more readily should we improve opportunities when put into our hands; and by no means neglect the daily sacrifices of the closet and family. If God bring us out of the furnace of affliction, our hearts should burn with love to him; and never should we grudge to spare from ourselves, that we may have wherewith to honour him, or to relieve his poor saints; always taking care to dispose of it to the best advantage. If a good work is to be done, let us set about it with all our might, and without delay, be the difficulties ever so great. Never should we despise the day of small things, but encourage ourselves in the everlasting power and mercy of God; praising him for the beginnings of his returning mercy; assured that they will issue in perfection at last. And, while we are in this world, where shouts of joy can scarcely be discerned from the groans of weeping, let us rejoice with them that rejoice, and weep with them that weep.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—God's temple can never be built but Satan and his agents will rage, and do all that they can to oppose it: and none are ordinarily more bitter opposers than pretended and mongrel professors. They will turn themselves into every shape to vent their malice; and will not spare money, labour, or villany, to accomplish their purpose. Pretences of friendship, bribing of counsellors, flattery of princes, and boastful threatenings, and reproaches, are their common methods of working. Saints had therefore need to avoid intimacy with them, and to encourage themselves in the Lord their God, and be strong in him and in the power of his might. It is common for the faithful followers of Christ to be reproached as dangerous enemies to the state: and, if once professors have done an ill thing, their successors in the church are sure to be upbraided with it, although they themselves should heartily condemn it. When princes desire occasions of stumbling, the agents for hell will soon supply them therewith. And things, the most false or improbable, are often readily believed by most against Christ and his church. Most kings neither can, nor care to know the truth with respect to their religious subjects. To their great joy, the attempts of persecutors are often successful for a time; and the friends of Christ and his truths are too easily checked in their reforming attempts.

* There is no reason to conclude that this temple was larger than that of Solomon. The apparent difference lies in the different points from which the measurement is taken. If Solomon's 20 cubits were measured from inside to inside of the actual temple, and those of Cyrus from the inside to the inside wall of the outer and surrounding apartments, the difference disappears. The difference in height may be accounted for in the same way. Solomon's 30 cubits being from the basement course, the 60 cubits of Cyrus including all that was below it; or Solomon's to the body of the temple, those of Cyrus to the highest pinnacle.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—It is highly desirable to have church and state concurring in the work of reformation: but the declaration of divine truths is always the principal mean. Faithful reprovers are profitable to obedient ears. When God raises up faithful ministers to animate sluggish or disheartened professors, there is hope that the church will be built up: and, if his eye be on us for good, we need not fear what man can do to us. His comfortable presence should animate us to the utmost diligence in his work: nor ought we to conceal the just manifestations of his displeasure against us or our fathers. It is a great mercy when the people of God have to do with enemies that make some conscience of telling the truth. Christ's followers are never persecuted but when they are belied. Let their cause be but fairly stated and fairly heard, and it will stand its ground against every opposition. And it is often false information, and not malice, that makes magistrates to issue forth persecuting edicts and sentences.

* Artaxerxes Longimanus, or the long-handed, as some suppose, from the extraordinary length of his hands, but more probably, from the vast extent of his dominions. The building originally begun by Cyrus, was finished, so far as mere building was concerned, by Darius—the finishing was reserved for Artaxerxes, the friend of Ezra, ch. 7. 12, 27.—Note. The overruling providence of God employs the enmity of the Samaritans to keep the temple of the Lord, and his service so long before the eyes of the government, that it necessarily forces its claims to their attention. And even thus, in Christian times, the violence of persecutors has been overruled, to bring the nature, evidences, and excellencies of Christianity before kings and judges, so that "the blood of martyrs has become the very seed of the church."—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Impartial search never hurts, but helps the cause of truth: and God makes the attempts against his church the means of her advantage and honour. He raises up unexpected instruments to accomplish his gracious purposes. And often his spiritual work is carried on by their means, who have neither part nor lot in the matter. The prayers of the godly are, or ought to be, the great support of nations and their magistrates; and, if magistrates understood their own interests, they would carefully secure them in their favour. But dreadful is the curse which shall at last light upon all the enemies of Christ and his church. And it is high time to be active and bold in his work, when we are bound to it by his express command, shamed into it by repeated edicts of heathen magistrates, and encouraged in it by his faithful ministers. God will have his work finished at last, notwithstanding ten thousand obstructions. What a mercy is it when Christ's church is prepared for the exact observance of all his ordinances, the most solemn not excepted! And it is a matter of great joy to all his true friends, and an honour to a church, when ministers are remarkably holy and faithful. Yea, it is highly necessary that all of us solemnly dedicate ourselves for temples to God; and offer up the solemn prayers of faith for God's blessing on the ordinances of his grace, which we have, or expect to enjoy. Yet not upon our services in his church must our hopes and joys depend, but on Jesus, as our God-honouring and sin-expiating oblation,

* This extraordinary favour to the Jews has generally been accounted for, by supposing this Artaxerxes to be the Ahasuerus of Esther, and the favour to have originated from his attachment to his young and beautiful Jewish queen. But besides that this is mere unsupported conjecture, it seems a strange forgetfulness of chap. 6. 22. & 7. 27., where the whole is attributed to the grace and Spirit of the Lord. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God richly endows men with proper gifts and grace when he intends them for distinguished work in his church. And that character is highly exalted in which great knowledge and activity meet with great holiness of heart and life. Yea, very excellent is a knowledge of the scriptures, when it is reduced to practice, and employed in the instruction of others. If God calls us to a difficult service, he can make all things concur to our encouragement. If his people want magistrates of their own religion, he can make heathens to compensate the loss, doing honour to his word as the rule; for Elnathan, and for Nathan, and for Zechariah, and for Meshullam, chief men; also for Joiarib, and for Elnathan, men of understanding.

17 And I sent them with commandment unto Iddo the chief, at the place Casiphia,* and I told them what they should say unto Iddo, and to his brethren the [t] Nethinims, at the place Casiphia, that they should bring unto us ministers for the house of our God.

18 And, by the [u] good hand of our God upon us, they brought us [x] a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli, the son of Levi, the son of Israel; and Sherebiah, with his sons and his brethren, eighteen;

19 And [y] Hashabiah, and with him Jeshaiah of the sons of Merari, his brethren and their sons, twenty;

20 [z] Also of the Nethinims, whom David and the princes had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinims: all of them were expressed by name.

21 ¶ Then [a] I proclaimed a fast there, at the river of Ahava, that we might [b] afflict ourselves before our God, to [c] seek of him a right way for us, and for our little ones, and for all our substance.

22 For I was ashamed to require of the king a band of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy in the way:† because we had spoken unto the king, saying, The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him; but his power and his wrath is against all them that forsake him.

23 So [d] we fasted, and besought our God for this; and he was entreated of us.

24 ¶ Then I separated twelve of the chief of the priests, Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them,

25 And [e] weighed unto them the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, even the offering of the house of our God, [f] which the king, and his counsellors, and his lords, and all Israel there present, had offered;

26 I even weighed unto their hand ‡ six hundred and fifty talents of silver, and silver vessels an hundred talents, and of gold an hundred talents;

27 Also twenty basons of gold, of a thousand drams; and two vessels of § fine copper, precious as gold.‖

28 And I said unto them, Ye are holy unto the LORD; the vessels are [g] holy also; and the silver and the gold are a free-will-offering unto the LORD God of your fathers.

29 [h] Watch ye, and keep them, until ye weigh them before the chief of the priests and the Levites, and chief of the fathers of Israel, at Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.

30 So took the priests and the Levites the weight of the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, to bring them to Jerusalem, unto the house of our God.

31 ¶ Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the [i] twelfth day of the first month, to go unto Jerusalem: and the [k] hand of our God was upon us, and he delivered us from the hand of the enemy,* and of such as lay in wait by the way.

32 And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there three days.

33 ¶ Now on the fourth day was the silver, and the gold, and the vessels, weighed in the house of our God, by the hand of [l] Meremoth the son of Uriah the priest; and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; and with them was [m] Jozabad the son of Jeshua, and Noadiah the son of Binnui, Levites;

34 By number and by weight of every one; and all the weight was written at that time.

35 Also the children of those that had been carried away, which were come out of the captivity, [n] offered burnt-offerings unto the God of Israel, [o] twelve bullocks for all Israel, ninety and six rams, seventy and seven lambs, twelve he-goats for a sin-offering: all this was a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

36 ¶ And they delivered the king's commissions unto the king's [p] lieutenants, and to the governors on this side the river; and they [q] furthered the people, and the house of God.

True to their original character, "their hand is still against every man." Single travellers, or weak parties, dare not pass their haunts: even strong and numerous parties, well armed, or escorted by cavalry, cannot pass free; for when they fear to attack a well-guarded caravan, they are the most adroit pilferers by night, and carry off all straggliers whom they can seize by day. Their more general habit, however, is to avoid shedding blood, but to levy such contributions as amount to spoliation. 3 And when I heard this thing, I [g] rent my garment and my mantle, and [h] plucked off the hair of my head [*] and of my beard, and [i] sat down astonied.

4 Then were assembled unto me every one that [k] trembled at the words of the God of Israel, because of the transgression of those that had been carried away; and I sat astonied until the evening sacrifice.

5 ¶ And at [l] the evening sacrifice I arose up from my heaviness; and, having rent my garment and my mantle, I fell [m] upon my knees, and spread out my hands unto the LORD my God,

6 And said, O my God, [n] I am ashamed, and blush to lift up my face to thee, my God: [o] for our iniquities are increased over our head, [†] and our trespass is grown up unto the heavens. [‡]

7 Since the [p] days of our fathers have we been in a great trespass unto this day; and for our iniquities have we, our kings, and our priests, been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the sword, to captivity, and to a spoil, and to confusion of face, as it is this day.

8 And now for a [q] little space grace hath been showed from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us [§] a nail [||] in his holy place, that our God may [r] lighten our eyes, and give us a little reviving in our bondage.

9 For [s] we were bondmen; yet our God hath not forsaken us in our bondage, but hath extended mercy unto us in the [t] sight of the kings of Persia, to give us a reviving, to set up the house of our God, and to repair the desolations thereof, and to give us [u] a wall in Judah and in Jerusalem.

10 And now, O our God, [x] what shall we say after this? for we have forsaken thy commandments,

11 Which thou hast commanded [y] by thy servants the prophets, saying, The land, unto which ye go to possess it, is an unclean land with the filthiness of the people of the lands, with their abominations, which have filled it from one end to another with their uncleanness.

12 Now therefore give not your daughters unto their sons, neither take their daughters unto your sons, nor seek their peace or their wealth for ever; [z] that ye may be strong, and eat the good of the land, and leave it for an inheritance to your children for ever.

13 And after all that is come upon us for our evil deeds, and for our great trespass, seeing that thou our God [a] hast punished us less than our [*] iniquities deserve, and hast given us such deliverance as this;

14 [b] Should we again break thy commandments, and join in affinity with the people of these abominations? [c] wouldest not thou be angry with us till thou hadst consumed us, so that there should be no remnant nor escaping?

15 [d] O LORD God of Israel, thou art righteous; for we remain yet escaped, as it is this day: behold, we are before thee in our trespasses; for we cannot [*] stand before thee because of this.

church ought to be speedily supplied with pastors according to God's heart. With the utmost care we ought to avoid everything that looks like distrusting of our God, or dependance on an arm of flesh. We had better expose ourselves to difficulties, than dishonour God, or give occasion of stumbling even to heathens. In perplexing circumstances let us apply to solemn fasting and fervent prayer. They, who in a humble and dependant manner seek him, will find him a very present help in trouble. Let us therefore by faith cast all the care of our persons, families, and estates upon him. Only holy persons are duly qualified to take charge of holy things, and especially of precious souls. And the greatest accuracy and fidelity are necessary in every trust, as we must give account to God. But O how infinite is his goodness in bringing his chosen people safe through dangers, rendering their trustees honest and faithful, their companions devout, and their enemies friendly! REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—It is vain to expect perfection in the militant church. And the comforts of saints on earth are quickly imbittered with a mixture of griefs. But how infatuated are many professed Christians, who think of no sin, no danger, in being unequally yoked with unbelievers! A little skin-deep beauty, or a little earthly wealth or honour, is often preferred to the image of Jesus Christ! And when the most ruinous sins become fashionable, few are affected with them. Infidels have called this law harsh and unjust; but, out of their own mouth are they condemned; for they, being men, and in much ignorance, do form arbitrary rules, for neglect or violation of which, members are excluded from their societies; and yet dare to accuse God, who of his infinite wisdom, promulgates and enforces his laws, only in support of the eternal, and unchangeable principles of holiness.—Ed.

Does the commander of an army act with inhumanity when he retreats with his troops by forced marches, and in the most inclement season, from the presence of a superior force? No—we praise his promptitude, and his skill, and count a well managed retreat sometimes superior to a victory. And shall the promptitude of Ezra be blamed, who will not wait an hour after the discovery of the national sin, but instantly calls upon the people, to "flee from the wrath to come."—Ed.

God appears awfully important. And that which seems light or lawful to carnal professors lies heavy on tender consciences. These take grief and shame to themselves for such as are hardened in their sins: and to join with such, in their sorrow and zeal, is both our duty and honour: for the most fearful aggravations appear attending our sins, and those of our land, when we consider the matter as in the sight of God. It therefore becomes us faithfully and humbly to repent of, and acknowledge our sins, over our great sacrifice, our great propitiation; once offered in the evening, the end of the world; and, in the believing view of God's new covenant relation and pardoning mercy, to justify him and condemn ourselves. But often-repeated provocations weary out the patience of God. And hopeless is their case, when neither corrections humble nor mercies constrain.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Wherever sin is seen and felt there is no ground for despair: yea, there may be good hope, through grace, where there is a burden of the most aggravated guilt. In mournful circumstances, we ought to observe what makes for us, as well as what makes against us. And even weaker saints may be instructors to those who are far stronger in gifts and grace. Mourning and reforming sinners ought to be encouraged; and leaders in church or state ought to be most active in promoting reformation. Men's sins, with the aggravations and danger of them, ought to be closely laid home to their consciences; for none will part with them, till they perceive that they are undone if they persevere therein. Great men ought to take the good advice of their inferiors. Critical causes ought to be decided with great deliberation and caution; and reformations, begun and carried on with much fasting, prayer, and solemn covenanting with God, promise good success. When we truly return to God, he will return to us: he will at last pluck his people as brands out of the burning. They, who have the cause of God at heart, spare neither time nor pains to serve it. But how shameful is it to find priests, whose marriages were peculiarly restricted of God, ringleaders in unhallowed connexions with heathen women! and yet it is highly commendable in them to prove at last patterns of repentance and reformation to others. Alas, that so few clergymen are disposed to imitate their example; but rather endeavouring, by every possible shift, to extenuate, excuse, or defend their own error and wickedness.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE BOOK OF EZRA.

CHAP. VI. Ver. 2. Achmetha.—Generally supposed to be the Ecbatana of ancient, and the Hamedan of modern history, where the tombs of Esther and Mordecai, still continue to be pointed out to travellers. Some expositors, however, consider it a mere secretaire, or book-case, in which the records of Media were kept at Babylon.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 1. Seraiah, the son of Azariah.—This Seraiah was that high priest who was slain by Nebuchadnezzar at Riblah, (2 Kin. 25. 18, 21.) about 130 years before, and therefore could not be literally the father of Ezra. But by a principle of Jewish law, frequently exemplified in the Scriptures, when the intermediate parties died childless, and the family property, or offices, descended by heirship to a collateral branch, or, in virtue of the law of adoption, as exemplified (Gen. 48. 5, 6.) a grandson or still more distant relative, might be counted not as the son of his immediate father, but of his more remote ancestor. Among the many practical advantages of this system, was the facility which it afforded in tracing ancestry, and settling hereditary claims, by diminishing the links of proof necessary for their establishment.

CHAP. X. Ver. 44. All these had taken strange wives, and some of them had wives by whom they had children.—The comparatively small number who had married idolatrous wives, seems to intimate that the transgression was but of recent origin; and this view seems corroborated by the statement that "some of them had wives by whom they had children." This statement also evidences the strictness of the investigation, and enforcement of the law. But was it not cruel thus to divorce husbands and wives? No. For God had not joined them, God had forbidden their union. It was no more cruel than to divorce a bigamist, whose marriage is rendered null and void, by virtue of a previous contract. Besides, there is no reason to conclude these wives and children would be sent away portionless. The uncompromising purity of the Divine law being always consistent with the dictates of mercy. See Ex. 21. 4—11.

NEHEMIAH

WAS probably written by himself. It commences twelve years after the dissolution of the unhallowed marriages; and, including at least twelve years of his historical account, reaches to about the hundred and fourth after the return from Babylon. It represents (1) Nehemiah's deep concern for the desolations of Jerusalem, and the commission he obtained from king Artaxerxes to rebuild the wall of it; i, ii. (2) His building of the wall, and dedicating it, notwithstanding great opposition from the heathens around; iii, iv, vi. and xii. 27—43. (3) His redressing the people's grievances, their debts and mortgages; v. (4) His taking account of those who returned from Babylon; vii. (5) His care to promote the solemn reading of the law, fasting, and renovation of their covenant with God; viii—x. (6) His care to replenish Jerusalem, and settle the priests, Levites, singers, and porters, in their proper work; xi, xii. (7) His care to check unhallowed marriages, procure the Levites their provision, and restrain profanation of the sabbath; xiii.

The poverty or persecution, which discourages others, awakens his zeal and concern. In seasons of public or private distress, fasting and tears should accompany our prayers. It is a great relief for a sorrowful spirit to pour out its complaints into the bosom of a compassionate God. While we have a God in Christ to go to, our case is never desperate. And, if he pour out upon us his spirit of grace and supplication, he will certainly hear us. Let us then, with holy and believing awe of his greatness and grace, rest on the stability of his covenant. And let candid confessions of our sins and unworthiness attend our supplications for mercy. It is infinitely encouraging to us that we have to deal with a God who is our own God; a God who has done great things for us, and has pledged his promise to do more. Let us therefore put our own, and the hearts of all connected with the welfare of Zion, into his hand.

* A voice directly from heaven, is not more decisive of a divine revelation, than is the voice of prophecy and its historic fulfilment. Accordingly, God has been pleased to spread this evidence over the history of the four great empires, the Assyrian, the Persian, the Grecian, and Roman, but to concentrate it chiefly upon the history of the Jews, whose whole condition, past and present, has been made the continual theme of prophetic announcement; and thus their separation, their captivities, their scattering abroad, with their still unsettled condition, are all prophecies whose literal fulfilment constitutes such irresistible evidence of the divine origin of the Scriptures that contain them, that reason must acknowledge they came from God.—ED.

fire: [h]come, and let us build up the wall of Jerusalem, that we be no more [i]a reproach.

18 Then I told them [k]of the hand of my God which was good upon me; as also the king's words that he had spoken unto me. And they said, Let us rise up and build. So they [l]strengthened their hands[*] for this good work.

19 But when [m]Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian, heard it, they [n]laughed us to scorn, and despised us, and said, What is this thing that ye do? will ye [o]rebel against the king?

20 Then answered I them, and said unto them, The God of heaven, he will [p]prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build: but ye [q]have no portion, nor right, nor memorial, in Jerusalem.

(1) The names of the builders of the wall: 1—32. (2) The order in which the building was carried on: 1—25, 28, 32.

THEN [a]Eliashib the high priest rose up with his brethren the priests, and they builded [*]the sheep-gate: they sanctified it, and set up the doors of it; even unto the tower of Meah they [c]sanctified it unto the tower of Hananeel.

2 And [*]next unto him builded the [d]men of Jericho: and next to them builded Zaccur the son of Imri.

3 But the [e]fish-gate did the sons of Hassenaah build, who also laid the beams thereof, and [f]set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.[†]

4 And next unto them repaired [g]Meremoth the son of Urijah, the son of Koz: and next unto them repaired Meshullam the son of Berechiah, the son of Meshezabeel: and next unto them repaired Zadok the son of Baana.

5 And next unto them the [h]Tekoites repaired; but their nobles put [i]not their necks to the work of their Lord.

6 Moreover, the [k]old gate repaired Jehoiada the son of Paseah, and Meshullam the son of Besodeiah; they laid the beams thereof, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

7 And next unto them repaired Melatiah the Gibeonite, and Jadon the Meronothite, the men of [l]Gibeon, and of Mizpah, unto the [m]throne[‡] of the governor on this side the river.

8 Next unto him repaired Uzziel the son of Harhaiah, of the goldsmiths: next unto him also repaired Hananiah the son of one of the apothecaries,[*] and they [n]fortified Jerusalem unto the broad wall.

9 And next unto them repaired Rephaiah the son of Hur, the ruler of the [o]half-part of Jerusalem.

10 And next unto them repaired Jedaiah the son of Harumaph, even over against his house: and next unto him repaired Hattush the son of Hashabniah.

11 [p]Malchijah the son of Harim, and Hashub the son of [q]Pahath-moab, repaired the [†]other piece, and the tower of the furnaces.

12 And next unto him repaired Shallum the son of Halohesh, the ruler of the half-part of Jerusalem,[‡] he and [r]his daughters.

13 The [s]valley-gate repaired Hanun, and the inhabitants of [t]Zanoah; they built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and a thousand cubits on the wall unto the [u]dung-gate.

14 But the dung-gate repaired Malchiah the son of Rechab, the ruler of part of [x]Beth-haccerem; he built it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof.

15 But the [y]gate of the fountain repaired Shallum the son of Col-hozeh, the ruler of part of [z]Mizpah; he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, the locks thereof, and the bars thereof, and the wall of [a]the pool of Siloah[§] by the king's garden, and unto the stairs that go down from the [b]city of David.

16 After him repaired Nehemiah the son of Azbuk, the ruler of the half-part of [c]Beth-zur, unto the place over against the [d]sepulchres of David, and to the [e]pool that was made,[‖] and unto the [f]house of the mighty.[*]

17 And after him repaired the Levites, Rehum the son of Bani: next unto him repaired Hashabiah, the ruler of the half-part of [g]Keilah, in his part.

18 After him repaired their brethren, Bavai the son of Henadad, the ruler of the half-part of Keilah.

19 And next to him repaired Ezer the son of Jeshua, the ruler of [h]Mizpah, another piece, over against the going up to the armoury, at the turning of the wall.

20 After him Baruch the son of [†]Zabbai [i]earnestly[‡] repaired the other piece, from the

‡ There are two very characteristic notes in this narrative, viz. (1) Where it is recorded (ver. 5.) that while the Tekoites (the people) repaired, "their nobles put not their neck to the work." (2) This record of Baruch, that he "repaired earnestly." What a rebuke, and what an eulogy in a few words! Oh! that all nobles, whether by honours, riches, or influence, would calculate their duties by their means of doing good! and that all who consent to labour in any work of faith, would remember Baruch, and do it earnestly!—Ed.

Reflections upon Chap. II.—Strong grief can scarcely be concealed. And it becomes superiors or others to observe the appearances of distress in those around them, and to sympathize with them in it. Even Jesus marks his people's groans, and puts their tears into his bottle. There is therefore no reason either for fear or for shame when sorrow for sin, and for the affliction of God's people, burden our heart and sadden our countenance. Nothing is more comely than meek and humble answers, when given by distressed minds to great men. And pious ejaculations to God are proper to be intermingled with all our important dealings. The prayer of faith is never in vain. God will afford us friends, and help us where we scarcely ever expected it. It is easy with him to render the greatest on earth friendly and helpful to his church in a time of need. But every favour shown to the servants of God awakens the envy and rage of the wicked. They so heartily hate the cause of God, that they are vexed exceedingly if any take it by the hand, and zealously promote it; and are ready to attack them with every arrow of envenomed malice, derision, slander, and threatening. What strong faith in God, zeal for his glory, bold courage, and prudent discretion, are then necessary, in attempting any noted work for the Lord and his church. In this manner we bid fair to animate even cowards and sluggards to join with us in it. Many will second the labours of one that is zealous and active, who had no courage to lead. Let us therefore instantly begin, as delays are dangerous: and let us carefully observe and acknowledge the kind interposals of Providence in all that we meet with.

(2) The heathens form a plot to murder the builders, and to stop their work by force: 7, 8, 10—12. But, by Nehemiah's prayers, setting of guards, arming and encouraging the builders to fight, if needful, this design is frustrated, and the building goes forward: 9, 13—23.

BUT it came to pass, that when Sanballat heard that we builded the wall, he [a] was wroth, and took great indignation, and mocked the Jews.

2 And he spake before his brethren, and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these [b] feeble Jews? will they * fortify themselves? will they sacrifice? will they make an end in a day? will they [c] revive the stones out of the heaps of the rubbish which are burnt?

3 Now Tobiah the Ammonite was by him, and he said, Even that which they build, if a [d] fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall.

4 Hear, O our God;† [e] for we are ‡ despised: and turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them for a prey in the land of captivity:

5 And [f] cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be blotted out from before thee: for they have provoked thee to anger [g] before the builders.

6 So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof:§ for the [h] people had a mind to work.‖

7 ¶ But it came to pass, [i] that when Sanballat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites, heard that the walls of Jerusalem * were made up, and that the breaches began to be stopped, then they were [k] very wroth,

10 And Judah said, [m] The strength of the bearers of burdens is decayed, and there is much rubbish; so that we are not able to build the wall.

11 And our adversaries said, [n] They shall not know, neither see, till we come in the midst among them, and slay them, and cause the work to cease.

12 And it came to pass, that when the * Jews which dwelt by them came, they said unto us [p] ten times, † From all places whence ye shall return unto us, ‡ they will be upon you.

13 ¶ Therefore [q] set I in [§] the lower places behind the wall, and on the higher places, I even set the people after their families with their [r] swords, their spears, and their bows.

14 And I looked, and rose up, and said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, [s] Be not ye afraid of them: [t] remember the LORD, which is great and terrible, and [u] fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives, and your houses.

‡ The obscurity of meaning in this verse has led several critics of the highest order, to adopt a change in a word, so as to produce greater clearness. The alteration of words, however, without overwhelming authority of MSS. or early translations, is never to be admitted. And does not the marginal translation render the words quite intelligible? viz. The Jews that dwelt in the neighbourhood of Samaria, &c., told their brethren ten times, (frequently, continually,) "from all places," that is, from the cities which ye have occupied under Nehemiah, "ye must return to us," and thus elude or conciliate the enemies that are plotting the ruin of Jerusalem. And that this was not a friendly admonition, but a treacherous attempt to bring over the Jerusalemites, the party of the Samaritans, appears highly probable from the record of the conspiracy between the Jewish nobles and Tobiah. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—It is a hopeful appearance when ministers are most forward in every good word and work; and when they undertake and go through their work with much solemn prayer and dependence on God. And it is very encouraging when multitudes of all ranks, tradesmen, ladies, nobles, and commons, unanimously concur in promoting the work of the Lord in an orderly manner. But how honourable is it if, like the men of Jericho, Gibeon, Mizpah, Zanoah, and the commons of Tekoah, we prefer the public interests to our own private concerns! or if, like the Tekoites and Meremoth, we help our brethren after finishing our own share! When the work is the Lord's we cannot be too zealously affected; and every person, if he be but hearty, may do

15 And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that it was known unto us, and God [x] had brought their counsel to nought, that we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work.

16 And it came to pass, from that time forth, that the half of my servants [y] wrought in the work, and the other half of them held both the spears, the shields, and the bows, and the habergeons; and the rulers were behind all the house of [z] Judah.

17 They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens, with those that laded, every one [a] with one of his hands wrought in the work, and with the other hand held a weapon. [b]

18 For the builders, every one had his sword girded [†] by his side, and so builded: and he that sounded the trumpet was by me.

19 And I said unto the nobles, and to the rulers, and to the rest of the people, The work is great and large, and we are separated upon the wall, one far from another.

20 In what place therefore ye hear the sound of the trumpet, resort ye thither unto us: [b] our God shall fight for us.

21 So we [c] laboured in the work: and half of them held the spears from the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.

22 Likewise at the same time said I unto the people, Let every one with his servant lodge within Jerusalem, that in the night they may be a guard to us, and labour on the day.

23 So neither [d] I, nor my brethren, nor my servants, nor the men of the guard which followed me, none of us put off our clothes, [e] saving that every one put them off for washing.

6 ¶ And I was [g] very angry when I heard their cry and these words.

7 Then [†] I consulted with myself,[‡] and I [h] rebuked the nobles and the rulers, and said unto them, [i] Ye exact usury every one of his brother. And [k] I set a great assembly against them.

8 And I said unto them, We, after our ability, have [l] redeemed our brethren the Jews which were sold unto the heathen; and will ye even sell your brethren? or shall they be sold unto us? Then [m] held they their peace, and found nothing to answer.

9 Also I said, [n] It is not good that ye do: ought ye not to walk in the fear of our God, because of the reproach of the heathen our enemies?

10 [o] I likewise, and my brethren, and my servants, might exact of them money and corn: I pray you, let us leave off this usury.

11 Restore, I pray you, to them, even this day, their lands, their vineyards, their oliveyards, and their houses, also the hundredth part of the money,[§] and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, that ye exact of them.

12 Then said they, We will restore them, and [p] will require nothing of them; so will we do as thou sayest. Then I called the priests, and took an oath of them,[‖] that they should do according to this promise.

13 Also I shook my lap, and said, So God [q] shake out every man from his house, and from his labour, that performeth not this promise, even thus be he shaken out, and [*] emptied. And all the congregation said, Amen, and praised the LORD. And the people did according to this promise.

‡ Self-decision, when founded upon the promise of divine direction, is one of the most valuable qualities both in religion and worldly concerns. It does not proudly undervalue the counsel of a judicious friend; but where, as in the case of Nehemiah, that is scarcely to be had, it is thrown into no confusion, but retreats upon its own resources, stands self-collected, when others are in confusion, and nobly independent upon all, but the grace of God.—Ed.

§ The general opinion of expositors is, that this interest was paid monthly, and so amounted to 12 per cent. But if it was not 100th of all, but of each, viz. money, wine, oil, and corn, then would it amount to 48 percent; and in Syria and the adjoining countries, money is still frequently lent at an interest of 30 per cent. The idea of a monthly payment is, however, totally unsupported by authority. Is it not, therefore, much more likely that the word hundredth was equivalent to the phrase per centage, because 100 is the arithmetical basis upon which interest is calculated; and, consequently, that Nehemiah gives no intimation of the rate of interest, but, according to the divine law, (Ex. 22. 25.) requires the remission of the whole? something in it. None are so little as to be useless; and none are so high as to be above it. And it is highly disgraceful, even for the greatest, to shift or neglect what God calls them to do in his church.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—God's faithful builders are sure to have a share of the world's ridicule and contempt; and one wicked man encourages another. But, though scoffers make their bands strong, God will shortly cover them with shame and confusion. Let saints then never discompose their souls on account of the most bitter or insolent contempt: God observes it, and will quickly resent it. Let them in patience possess their souls, commit their way to God, and go on more briskly with their christian work. God's blessing will more than compensate men's revilings. And much may be done in a little time if all be hearty in lending their assistance. What a pity then is it that the people of God should scarcely ever be as harmonious and active in the Lord's work as the wicked are in their opposition to it! Nay, his more active servants have often as much trouble with the fears of their friends, as with the terrors of their enemies. And false friends are more dangerous than open enemies. But, be the plots of enemies ever so well laid, or ever so secret, God can discover or defeat them. Let then his infinite power and unbounded goodness encourage us to go on with our work, notwithstanding all the craft and malice of our adversaries. In all our spiritual work, all our attempts of reformation, let us put on the whole armour of God, and watch and pray, that we enter not into temp-

7 And thou hast also appointed prophets to preach of thee at Jerusalem, saying, There is a king in Judah: and now shall it be reported to the king according to these words. Come now therefore, and let us [m] take counsel together.

8 Then I sent unto him, saying, There are no such things done as thou sayest, but thou [n] feignest them out of thine own heart.

9 For they all made us [o] afraid,† saying, Their hands shall be weakened from the work, that it be not done. Now therefore, [p] O God, strengthen my hands.

tation. Let us, in our respective stations, unanimously unite, with heart and hand, against the common enemy; and count neither ease nor life dear unto us, that we may finish our course with joy. Religion bids fair to prosper when the professors thereof make earnest work of it, and endure hardship as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Hard times and hard hearts, when met together, render the poor miserable indeed. And it is cruel to take advantage of our brethren's distress, and to make their yoke heavier by usurious exactions. Alas! how we bring hardship and famine on ourselves by our sins, and then complain of it. Those, who have great families and little substance, must learn to live by faith on God's promise and providence. And those, who have small families and much substance, should make their abundance a supply for their neighbours' wants; for often poor housekeepers are in much greater straits than the most wretched vagrants. But what a scandal to our holy religion is a worldly minded and niggardly professor! And deliberate and aggravated is that theft which lies in retaining that which we have unjustly gotten. There can be no uprightness towards God without restitution to the oppressed. It is proper that rulers show themselves angry at what is sinful, that their subjects may be deterred from it, and excited to duty. But reproofs ought to be given with great consideration and temper, lest otherwise they fail of their end. And warm and rough, though not furious, measures are to be taken with hardened and presumptuous transgressors. It is highly criminal to expose the people of God, and interests of religion, to the reproach of their enemies. And the strongest bonds are necessary to restrain worldlings from their covetous courses. But how scandalous is it for magistrates to enrich themselves, or indulge their servants, to the public hurt! Those, whether magistrates or others, in whose hearts the fear and love of God remarkably reign, will discover it by the exemplariness of their lives. In times of public distress they will even remit what was their unquestionable due. But infallible are the gracious rewards of sincere piety and disinterested benevolence from God, even when men overlook it. And it is pleasant to have them as a mark of our new covenant relation to God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—O the infernal subtlety and restlessness of Satan and his agents; and the need of heavenly wisdom and steady circumspection for resisting all their ensnaring and repeated solicitations! But business of consequence ought always to be preferred to matters of civility and compliment. It is common for the church's enemies to pretend friendship in order to ruin her; and no less so to represent her faithful ministers and members as traitors to government. But no lies, or malevolent reports, should weaken our hands from the work of God. They, who have almighty power engaged for them, may look up to God and be comforted. He will uphold them; and the more the enemies rage, the more shall JEHOVAH's strength be perfected in our weakness. Yea, they shall see, to their grief, that he cares for his people, and that when he works none can hinder it. However great the opposition, and weak the instruments, he can speedily effect his work. And much good may be done in a short time if people are hearty in it, and have a good God and a pious man at the head of it. But a most dangerous plague are pretended and unfaithful ministers, treacherous magistrates, and villanous professors. The treachery of pretended friends is more to be feared than the malice of open enemies. And happy are those who, directed and encouraged of God, escape being insnared in their nets. But for this we must walk circumspectly, and try the spirits: and be ready to risk every danger, rather than injure the cause of God, or even bring a reproach on our holy character or office. God marks the iniquities of his enemies, and will turn their deep-laid schemes against his people to their own confusion. Nor shall those, who have ensnared themselves by sinful connexions, or who assist them in their purposes, long escape the judgment which lingereth not.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—The worship and service of God ought always to be preferred to our civil concerns, however important; and with great care ought princes and other rulers to make choice of their deputies: if possible they should fix upon such as are faithful and eminently fear God. Happy, even amidst dangers, are the cities and nations which have such to rule and protect them. Great caution is necessary, for our own and the church's safety, when we have traitors amongst and within us: and every man's family ought to be his immediate concern. He has need to watch over them night and day, that

(1) Ezra reads and explains Moses' law: 1—8. (2) The people spend the day in holy joy and mutual benevolence: 9—12. (3) Reading, on the second day, the law which appointed the observance of the feast of tabernacles, all the Jews were summoned to keep it fifteen days after: 13—18.

A. M. 3560. B. C. 444.

AND all [a] the people gathered themselves together as one man into the street that was before [b] the water-gate; and they spake unto Ezra the [c] scribe to bring the [d] book of the law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded to Israel.[*]

2 And Ezra the priest [e] brought the law before the congregation, both of [f] men and women, and all [†] that could hear with understanding, upon the [§] first day of the seventh month.

3 And he [h] read therein before the street that was before the water-gate [‡] from the morning until mid-day,[i] before the men and the women, and those that could understand: and the [i] ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law.

4 And Ezra the scribe stood upon a [‖] pulpit of wood,[*] which they had made for the purpose; and [k] beside him stood Mattithiah, and Shema, and Anaiah, and Urijah, and Hilkiah, and Maaseiah, on his right hand; and on his left hand, Pedaiah, and Mishael, and Malchiah, and Hashum, and Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam.

5 And Ezra [l] opened the book in the [†] sight of all the people; (for he was above all the people;) and when he opened it, all the people [m] stood up:

6 And Ezra [n] blessed the LORD, the great God: and all the people answered, Amen, Amen, with [o] lifting up their hands; and they [p] bowed their heads, and worshipped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

7 Also Jeshua, and Bani, and Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, caused the people to understand the law; and the people stood in their place.

8 So they read in the book in the law of God [q] distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading.[‡]

9 ¶ And Nehemiah, which is [r] the Tirshatha, and Ezra the priest the scribe, and the Levites that taught the people, said unto all the people, This day is [s] holy unto the LORD your God; [t] mourn not nor weep: for all the people [u] wept when they heard the words of the law.

10 Then he said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat,[*] and drink the sweet, and [x] send portions unto them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our LORD: neither be ye sorry; for [y] the joy of the LORD is your strength.[†]

11 So the Levites stilled all the people,[‖] saying, [z] Hold your peace; for the day is holy; neither [a] be ye grieved.

12 And all the people went their way to eat, and to drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth, because they had understood the words that were declared unto them.

13 ¶ And on the second day were gathered together the chief of the fathers of all the people, the priests, and the Levites, unto Ezra the scribe, even [b] to understand the words of the law.

14 And they found written in the law which the LORD had commanded [‖] by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in [c] booths in the feast of the seventh month:

15 And that they should [d] publish and proclaim in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying, Go forth unto the mount, and fetch [e] olive-branches, and pine-branches, and myrtle-branches, and palm-branches, and branches of thick trees, to make booths, as it is written.

16 ¶ So the people went forth, and brought them, and made themselves booths, every one [f] upon the roof of his house,[‖] and in their courts, and in [g] the courts of the house of God, and in the [h] street of the water-gate, and in the street of the [‖] gate of Ephraim.

17 And all the congregation of them that were come again out of the captivity made booths, and sat [k] under the booths: for since the days of Jeshua the son of Nun unto that day had not the children of Israel done [‖] so:[*] and there was very great gladness.

18 Also day by day, from the first day unto the last day, he [m] read in the book of the law of God: and they kept the feast seven days; and on the eighth day was a solemn assembly, according unto the manner.

he may preserve them from the destroyer. Important records should be preserved, as they may be of use afterwards. But wo to those, who, having given their names to the Lord, afterwards look back and return to the world; though God will compensate the loss of them to his church in the accession of others.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Not strong walls, but knowledge of, and obedience to God, are the great safety of cities and nations. Nothing is more necessary, for the establishment or preservation of true religion, than a diligent study, and thorough acquaintance, with the word of God. Men, women, and children, ought to vie with each other in their study and knowledge of it. And it is a great pleasure to faithful preachers to have hearers who hunger and thirst after it. Not only ought God's word to be read, but also explained, and enforced on the conscience. And solemn prayers and praises should be joined with every public religious instruction. Sermons bid fair for success when the hearers are solemnly attentive. Nor will those, who relish the word of God, ever think the time long which is spent in hearing. Short sermons, and soon wearied hearers, are sad tokens of cold and careless hearts. O what a happy presage it is when God's law cuts men's consciences to the quick, and makes them weep from the heart. Penitent mourning makes way for spiritual mirth.—They who sow in tears shall reap in joy. And it is the pleasantest part of a minister's work to comfort, with the gospel of Christ, those that mourn. For the gospel explained and believed, and the consolations of Christ experienced, effectually rejoice the heart, and qualify for the performance of duty or resistance of enemies. And a

NOW in the twenty and fourth day of [a] this month the children of Israel were assembled with [b] fasting, and with sackclothes, and [c] earth upon them.

2 And the seed of Israel [d] separated themselves from all * strangers, and stood and [e] confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

3 And they stood up in their place, and [f] read in the book of the law of the LORD their God one fourth part of the day; and another fourth part they confessed, and † worshipped the LORD their God.‡

4 ¶ Then stood up upon the [g] stairs, of the Levites, Jeshua, and Bani, Kadmiel, Shebaniah, Bunni, Sherebiah, Bani, and Chenani, and [h] cried with a loud voice unto the LORD their God.

5 Then the Levites, Jeshua, and Kadmiel, Bani, Hashabniah, Sherebiah, Hodijah, Shebaniah, and Pethahiah, said, Stand up§ and bless the LORD your God for ever and ever; and blessed be thy glorious name, which is exalted above all blessing and praise.

6 Thou, even thou, [i] art LORD alone: thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their host, the earth, and all things that are therein, the seas, and all that is therein, and thou [k] preservest them all;‖ and the host of heaven worshippeth thee.

7 Thou art the LORD the God, who didst choose Abram, and broughtest him forth out of Ur of the Chaldees, and gavest him the name of Abraham;

8 And foundest his heart faithful before thee, and madest a covenant with him, to give the land of the Canaanites, the Hittites, the Amorites, and the Perizzites, and the Jebusites, and the Girgashites, to give it, I say, to his seed, and [l] hast performed thy words; for thou art righteous:*

9 [m] And didst see the affliction of our fathers in Egypt, and heardest their cry by the Red sea:

10 And showedst signs† and wonders upon Pharaoh, and on all his servants, and on all the people of his land; for thou knewest that they dealt [n] proudly against them: so didst thou get thee a name,‡ as it is this day.

11 And thou didst divide the sea before them, so that they went through the midst of the sea on the dry land; and their persecutors thou threwest into the deeps, as a stone into the mighty waters.

12 Moreover, thou [o] leddest them in the day by a cloudy pillar, and in the night by a pillar of fire, to give them light in the way wherein they should go.

13 [p] Thou camest down also upon mount Sinai, and spakest with them from heaven, and gavest them right judgments, and [q] true laws, good statutes and commandments:

14 And madest known unto them thy [r] holy sabbath,* and commandedst them precepts, statutes, and laws, by the hand of Moses thy servant:

15 And [s] gavest them bread from heaven for their hunger, and [t] broughtest forth water for them out of the rock for their thirst, and promisedst them that they should [u] go in to possess the land † which thou hadst sworn to give them.

16 But they and our fathers [x] dealt proudly, and hardened their necks, and hearkened not to thy commandments,

17 And refused to obey, neither were mindful of thy wonders that thou didst among them;‡ but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion appointed a captain to return to their bondage:§ but thou art [y] a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and [z] forsookest them not.

18 Yea, when they had made them a molten calf, and said, This is thy God that brought thee up out of Egypt, and had wrought great provocations;

19 [a] Yet thou, in thy manifold mercies, forsookest them not in the wilderness: the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day, to lead them in the way, neither the pillar of fire by night, to show them light, and the way wherein they should go.

21 Yea, forty years didst thou sustain them in the wilderness, so that they [c] lacked nothing: their clothes waxed not old, and their feet swelled not.*

22 Moreover, thou [d] gavest them kingdoms and nations, and didst divide them into corners:† so they possessed the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og king of Bashan.

‡ This is decidedly the most extraordinary religious service upon record. On the first day of the month, the people were assembled, as one man, at the feast of trumpets; chap. 8. 1. On the second was an assembly for studying the law, (ch. 8. 13.) and from that time till the last day of the meeting, (ch. 8. 18.) the reading and exposition of the word continued for six hours every day, with other six hours for confession of sin to God, and solemn religious worship, that is, of sacrifice, singing, and prayer; ch. 9. 3. On the tenth was the day of atonement; on the fourteenth began the feast of tabernacles, which lasted seven days; on the twenty-fourth, the people and rulers separated themselves from all idolatrous strangers, and concluded the service with a solemn covenant to observe the law of the Lord. —Ed.

sense of God's redeeming kindness powerfully instigates to charitable benevolence. But how often the institutions of God's word are unknown to the most of professors! What a multitude of things will diligent searchers of the scriptures find there, which they had forgotten, or had never duly considered! It will convince them of many negligences and ignorances. Well spent are those hours which are occupied in earnest conversing with God by his word. And happy is the effect, when such, as have access to it, speedily and cheerfully practise whatever they find therein commanded.

24 So the children went in and possessed the land, and thou [h] subduedst before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as they would.

25 And they took [i] strong cities, and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods, [*] wells digged,[†] vineyards, and olive-yards, and fruit trees in abundance: so they did eat, and were filled, and became fat, and delighted themselves in thy great goodness.

26 Nevertheless they [k] were disobedient, and rebelled against thee, and [l] cast thy law behind their backs, and [m] slew thy prophets, which testified against them to turn them to thee, and they wrought great provocations.

27 Therefore thou [n] deliveredst them into the hand of their enemies, who vexed them: and in the time of their trouble, when they cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and, according to thy manifold mercies, thou gavest them [o] saviours, who saved them out of the hand of their enemies.

28 But after they had [p] rest, they [q] did evil again before thee;[‡] therefore leftest thou them in the hand of their enemies, so that they had the dominion over them: yet when they returned, and cried unto thee, thou heardest them from heaven; and [r] many times didst thou deliver them according to thy mercies;

29 And [s] testifiedst against them, that thou [t] mightest bring them again unto thy law: yet they dealt proudly, and hearkened not unto thy commandments, but sinned against thy judgments, (which [u] if a man do, he shall live in them;) and withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear:

30 Yet many years didst thou [x] forbear them, and [y] testifiedst against them by thy Spirit[§] in thy prophets; yet would they not give ear: therefore gavest thou them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Nevertheless, for thy [z] great mercies' sake thou didst not utterly consume them, nor forsake them; for thou art [a] a gracious and merciful God.

32 Now therefore, [b] our God, the great, the mighty, and the terrible God,[‖] who keepest covenant and mercy, let not [c] all the [] trouble seem little before thee [] that hath come upon us, on our kings, on our princes, and on our priests, and on our prophets, and on our fathers, and on all thy people, since the [d] time of the kings of Assyria unto this day.

33 Howbeit thou art [*] just in all that is brought upon us; for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly.

34 Neither have [f] our kings, our princes, our priests, nor our fathers, kept thy law, nor hearkened unto thy commandments and thy testimonies, wherewith thou didst testify against them.

35 For they [g] have not served thee in their kingdom,[†] and in thy great goodness that thou gavest them, and in the large and fat land which thou gavest before them; neither turned they from their wicked works.

36 Behold, we are [h] servants this day; and for the land that thou gavest unto our fathers, to eat the fruit thereof, and the good thereof, behold, we are servants in it:

37 And it yieldeth much increase unto [i] the kings whom thou hast set over us because of our sins: also they [k] have dominion over our bodies, and over our cattle, at their pleasure,[‡] and we are in great distress.

38 And [l] because of all this we make a sure covenant, and write it; and our princes, Levites, and priests, [§] seal unto it.

Reflections upon Chap. IX.—It is a great mercy when God's word burdens men's consciences with a sense of their sins; and when reformation from sin, and fasting for it, go hand in hand. Those fasts are made profitable in which men's souls are afflicted for their sins, the bands of wickedness are loosed, intimate fellowship with God enjoyed, and in which God's goodness leads to repentance. O what multitudes of mercies to us, and to our fathers, may a diligent observer of Providence discover! What gracious calls and covenants! What deliverance, direction, provision, and establishment! What giving of the law and of the promises! What warnings against, and pardons of, our sins! What amazing patience and long suffering! What well-timed and well-adjusted corrections! And it is necessary to confess our fathers' iniquities as well as our own, or we make ourselves heirs to them, and shall share in the punishment of them. We must likewise search out the aggravations of our sins, and seek not to exculpate ourselves, but to justify God. O what a root of wickedness and wo is the pride of men's heart! Often by it we revolt from the free and honourable service of God into the basest slavery. But God's infinite mercy, and his constant adherence to his new covenant with Christ, and in him with us, ought to encourage us to return to him under the deepest sense of our provocations. And solemn evangelical covenanting with God is peculiarly proper when we have notoriously departed from him, are sharply corrected by him, and earnestly desire to return to him.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—It is honourable to be solemnly and publicly bound in the service of God; and especially is it becoming when they, who have the lead in civil or sacred offices, or in solemn fasting, are correspondently forward in regular covenanting with God. But, in all our covenants of duty, a respect must be had to all God's commandments; and a peculiar guard be placed over those temptations which we have seen to be the occasion of other men's falls, and to prove most dangerous to ourselves. They ought to be framed in direct opposition to that of which we have been guilty, or to which we are most likely

11 And Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Jaddua.[o]

12 And in the days of Joiakim were priests, the chief of the fathers: [p] of Seraiah, Meraiah; of Jeremiah, Hananiah;

14 Of Melicu, Jonathan; of Shebaniah, Joseph;

20 Of Sallai, Kallai; of Amok, Eber;

21 Of Hilkiah, Hashabiah; of Jedaiah, Nethaneel.

22 ¶ The Levites, in the days of [s] Eliashib, Joiada, and Johanan, and Jaddua, were recorded chief of the fathers; also the priests, to the reign of [t] Darius the Persian.[†]

23 The sons of Levi, the chief of the fathers, were written in the book of the [u] Chronicles, even until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib.

24 And the chief of the Levites: [x] Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brethren over against them, to praise and to give thanks, [y] according to the commandment of David [z] the man of God, ward over against ward.

25 [b] Mattaniah, and Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, Akkub, were porters, keeping the ward at the [‡] thresholds of the gates.

26 These were in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of Jozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah the governor, and of Ezra the priest, the scribe.

27 ¶ And at the [c] dedication of the wall [§] of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, to keep the dedication with gladness, both [d] with thanksgivings, and with singing, with cymbals, psalteries, and with harps.

28 And the sons of the singers gathered themselves together, both out of the [e] plain country round about Jerusalem, and from the villages of [f] Netophathi;

29 Also from the [g] house of Gilgal, and out of the fields of [h] Geba and Azmaveth: for the singers had builded them [i] villages round about Jerusalem.

30 And the priests and the Levites [k] purified [*] themselves, and purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.

31 Then I brought up [l] the princes of Judah upon the wall, and appointed [m] two great companies of them that gave thanks, whereof one went on the right hand upon the wall toward the [n] dung-gate:

32 And after them went Hoshaiah, and half of the princes of Judah,

33 And Azariah, Ezra, and Meshullam,

34 Judah, and Benjamin, and Shemaiah, and Jeremiah;

35 And certain of the priests' sons [o] with trumpets; namely, Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Michaiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph;

36 And his brethren, Shemaiah, and Azarael, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethaneel, and Judah, Hanani, with the [p] musical instruments of David the man of God, and [q] Ezra the scribe before them.

37 And at the [r] fountain-gate, which was over against them, they went up by the [s] stairs of the city of David, at the going up of the wall, above the house of David, even unto the [t] water-gate eastward.

38 And the other company of them that gave thanks went over against them, and I after them, and the half of the people upon the wall, from beyond the [u] tower of the furnaces, even unto the [x] broad wall;[‡]

39 And from above the [y] gate of Ephraim, and above the [z] old gate, and above the [a] fish-gate, and the [b] tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Meah, even unto the sheep-gate; and they stood still in the [c] prison-gate.

40 So stood the [d] two companies of them that gave thanks in the house of God, and I, and the half of the rulers with me:

42 And Maaseiah, and Shemaiah, and Eleazar, and Uzzi, and Jehohanan, and Malchijah, and Elam, and Ezer: and the singers [§] sang loud, with Jezrahiah their overseer.

[o] The dates of the accession of the several high priests, after the time of Nehemiah, cannot be precisely ascertained. But as Jaddua did not accede till the time of Alexander of Macedon, about 100 years after Nehemiah's commission, this verse has been ascribed to a later writer than Nehemiah. There is, however, no necessity for this conjecture. Nehemiah might well have been cup-bearer to Artaxerxes at 25, and, at the age of 125 or upwards, have written, or caused to be written, this, as well as the foregoing genealogy. This is that Jaddua, who is said by Josephus (Antiq. l. xi. c. 8.) to have come out to meet Alexander on his march from the siege of Tyre to the destruction of the Persian empire; whom Alexander declared he had seen in a dream; to whom he did obeisance as a priest of God; whom he accompanied into the temple of Jehovah to offer sacrifices; who showed him the prophecies of Daniel, by which he was encouraged to proceed upon his warlike enterprise; and who obtained from the triumphant conqueror many favours for the Jews which he denied to the Samaritans.—Ed.

gard to carnal advantages or sinful libertics, or fear of persecution or expense, often keep many from the church or cause of God! It reflects great honour on magistrates and ministers, when they take special care of the chief stations in nations and churches, and readily show themselves patterns of self-denial and holy resolution. If God distinguish them with honour, they should distinguish themselves by zeal for his cause. And they, who for God's glory forego their own advantage, shall never lose their reward; while those, who only commend duty, but do not practise it, shall be ashamed. How commodiously God disposes of men into their various habitations! In all situations, therefore, they ought to accommodate their circumstances to his honour; and always live as strangers and pilgrims on this earth, who have here no continuing city, but look for one to come, the builder and maker of which is God.

ON that day* [a] they read in the book of Moses in the [†] audience of the people; and therein was found written, [b] that the Ammonite and the Moabite should not come into the congregation of God for ever;[‡]

2 Because they [c] met not the children of Israel with bread and with water, but [d] hired Balaam against them, that he should curse them: howbeit our God [e] turned the curse into a blessing.

3 Now it came to pass, when they [f] had heard the law, that they separated from Israel all the [g] mixed multitude.

4 ¶ And before this, [h] Eliashib the priest, [§] having the oversight of the chamber of the house of our God, was allied unto [i] Tobiah;

5 And he had prepared for him [k] a great chamber, where aforetime they laid the meat-offerings, the frankincense, and the vessels, and the tithes of the corn, the new wine, and the oil, ([l] which was commanded to be given to the Levites, and the singers, and the porters,) and the offerings of the priests.

7 And I came to Jerusalem,[‡] and [o] understood of the evil that Eliashib did for Tobiah, in preparing him a chamber in the [p] courts of the house of God.

8 And it grieved me sore; therefore [q] I cast forth all the household-stuff of Tobiah out of the chamber.

9 Then I commanded, and they [r] cleansed the chambers; and thither brought I again the vessels of the house of God, with the meat-offering and the frankincense.

10 ¶ And I perceived that [s] the portions of the Levites had not been given them: for the Levites and the singers, that did the work, were fled every one [t] to his field.[§]

11 Then [u] contended I with the rulers, and said, [x] Why is the house of God forsaken? And I gathered them [‖] together, and set them in their [*] place.

12 Then [y] brought all Judah the tithe of the corn, and the new wine, and the oil, unto the [†] treasuries.

13 And I made treasurers over the treasuries, Shelemiah the priest, and Zadok the scribe; and of the Levites, Pedaiah; and [‡] next to them was Hanan the son of Zaccur, the son of Mattaniah; for they were counted [z] faithful; and [§] their office was to distribute unto their brethren.

14 [a] Remember me, O my God, concerning this, and wipe not out my [‖] good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for the [*] offices thereof.[†]

15 ¶ In those days saw I in Judah [b] some treading wine-presses on the sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and lading asses; as also wine, grapes, and figs, and all manner of burdens, which they brought into Jerusalem on the sabbath-day: and I testified against them in the day wherein they sold victuals.

16 There dwelt [c] men of Tyre also therein, which brought fish, and all manner of ware, and sold on the sabbath unto the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

17 Then I [d] contended with the nobles of Judah, and said unto them, What evil thing is this that ye do, and profane the sabbath-day?

18 [e] Did not your fathers thus, and did not our God bring all this evil upon us, and upon this city? yet ye [‡] bring more wrath upon Israel by profaning the sabbath.

19 And it came to pass, that, when the gates of Jerusalem began to be dark before the Reflections upon Chap. XII.—Happy are those ministers, those saints, who are recorded in the Lamb's book of life! Notwithstanding the ravages of death, God will always keep up in his church a succession of servants and people, and show them distinguished honours. It is highly proper, even in a most solemn manner, to devolve the protection of our cities, and all that we have, upon our God, as reconciled through the sacrifice of Christ. And it is comely when all, even wives and children, share in the joys of the gospel, and are taught to sing God's high praise. How necessary, through the selfishness or unconcern of most professors, are fixed methods of collecting a proper maintenance for the ministers of the Lord! But it is highly becoming for them faithfully to attend to their work, and leave the supply of their needs to the care of their God.

sabbath, [f] I commanded that the gates should be shut, and charged that they should not be opened till after the sabbath: and some of my servants set I at the gates, that there should no burden be brought in on the sabbath-day.

20 So the merchants, and sellers of all kind of ware, lodged without Jerusalem once or twice.

21 Then I testified against them,[g] and said unto them, Why lodge ye [†] about the wall? if ye do so again, I will lay hands on you. From that time forth came they no more on the sabbath.

22 And I [h] commanded the Levites, [i] that they should cleanse themselves, and that they should come and keep the gates, to sanctify the sabbath-day. [k] Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me according to the [‡] greatness of thy mercy.

23 ¶ In those days also saw I Jews that [l] had married wives of Ashdod, of Ammon, and of Moab.

24 And their children spake half in the speech of Ashdod, and [§] could not speak in the Jews' language, but according to the language [||] of each people.

25 And I contended with them, and [¶] cursed[] them, and [m] smote[] certain of them, and plucked off their hair,[†] and made them [n] swear by God, saying, Ye shall not give your daughters unto their sons, nor take their daughters unto your sons, or for yourselves.

26 Did not Solomon king of Israel sin by these things? yet [o] among many nations was there no king like him, who was beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Israel: [p] nevertheless even him did outlandish women cause to sin.

27 Shall we then hearken unto you to do [q] all this great evil, to transgress against our God in marrying strange wives?

28 And one of the sons of [r] Joiada,[‡] the son of Eliashib the high priest, was son-in-law to Sanballat the Horonite: therefore I [s] chased him from me.

29 [t] Remember them,[§] O my God, because they have [u] defiled the priesthood, and the covenant of the priesthood, and of the Levites.

30 Thus cleansed I them from all strangers, and appointed the [x] wards of the priests and the Levites, every one in his business;

31 And for the [y] wood-offering at times appointed, and for the first-fruits. [z] Remember me, O my God, for good.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—It is strange to observe how unacquainted with God's law many are who have daily access to study it! and, while the common people are ready to comply with his mandates, often the principal leaders in the church are the most base and treacherous adherents to wickedness. But no dignity must plead exemption from rebuke. They who sin before all should be put to shame before all. The higher a man's station, and the holier his office, the more scandalous are his sins. Reformers have need therefore of great zeal, prudence, and fearlessness of man. But what vile robbery of God, and wicked injury to the church, is the withholding of ministers' dues from them! A scandalous maintenance makes a scandalous ministry. Few ministers are willing to serve Christ in hunger and nakedness, and amidst reproach, peril, and sword. Most are even ready to betake themselves to farming or merchandise, or like worldly cares, when they have scarcely a temptation to it: but, when they first show themselves unworthy of their maintenance, no wonder the people grudge it. Sacred is God's claim to his holy sabbath; and heinous their guilt who dare presumptuously to rob him of his property. Nobles, as well as others, ought to be faithfully rebuked for their profanation of the sabbath. And yet, alas! they are often either ringleaders in this sin, or connivers at such as are guilty. But magistrates ought to exert themselves in preventing open profanation of the Lord's day. Though their laws, or the sanctions attending them, cannot convert souls, they may oblige vice to hide itself as ashamed. And did magistrates and ministers but faithfully concur in this matter, according to God's law, much good might be done.—Nations and churches quickly relapse into their former corruptions; and into none more readily than unhallowed connexions in marriage. And none are more daring in wickedness than unsanctified clergymen. But nothing more effectually entails misery on our offspring than profane marriages: and yet no commands of God, no warnings of Providence, are sufficient to restrain men. The sharpest rebukes, corrections, and brands of infamy, are necessary to check abominations which have once become fashionable. And it is a great mercy if, in critical conjunctures, a magistrate or minister is helped so to behave in his station, as that he may look up to God for a gracious reward.

5 And when these days were expired, the king made a feast unto all the people that were [f] present in Shushan the palace, both unto great and small, seven days, in the court of the garden of the king's palace;

6 Where were white, green, and [g] blue hangings,[h] fastened with cords of fine linen and purple to silver rings and pillars of marble: the [i] beds[k] were of gold and silver, upon a pavement [l] of red, and blue, and white, and black marble.

7 And they gave them drink in vessels of gold, (the vessels being diverse one from another,) and [m] royal wine in [n] abundance, [o] according to the state of the king.

8 And the drinking was according to the law; none did [p] compel:[‡] for so the king had [q] appointed to all the officers of his house, that they should do according to every man's pleasure.

9 Also Vashti the queen made a feast for the women[s] in the royal house which belonged to king Ahasuerus.

10 ¶ On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was [t] merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, [u] Harbona, Bigtha, and Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, the seven [v] chamberlains[•] that served in the presence of Ahasuerus the king,

11 To bring Vashti the queen before the king with the crown-royal, to show the people and the princes her beauty; for she was [†] fair to look on.

12 But the queen Vashti refused[‡] to come at the king's commandment [§] by his chamberlains; therefore was the king very wroth, and his anger burned in him.

13 ¶ Then the king said to the wise men, which knew the times, (for so was the king's manner toward all that knew law and judgment:

14 And the next unto him was Carshena, Shethar, Admatha, Tarshish, Meres, Marsena, and Memucan, the [o] seven princes of Persia and Media, which saw the king's face,[‖] and which sat the first in the kingdom,)

15 [p] What shall we do unto the queen Vashti according to law, because she hath not performed the commandment of the king Ahasuerus by the chamberlains?

16 And [•] Memucan answered before the king and the princes, Vashti the queen hath not done [q] wrong to the king only, but also to all the princes, and to all the people that are in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus.

17 For this deed of the queen shall come abroad unto all women, so that they shall [r] despise their husbands in their eyes, when it shall be reported, The king Ahasuerus commanded Vashti the queen to be brought in before him, but she came not.

18 Likewise shall the ladies of Persia and Media say this day unto all the king's princes, which have heard of the deed of the queen. Thus shall there arise [•] too much contempt and wrath.[†]

19 [‡] If it please the king, let there go a royal commandment [§] from him, and let it be written among the laws of the Persians and the Medes, [‖] that it be not altered, That Vashti [•] come no more before king Ahasuerus; and let the king give her royal estate [•] unto another that is better than she.

20 And when the king's decree which he shall make shall be published throughout all his empire, (for it is great,) all the wives shall [t] give to their husbands honour, both to great and small.

21 And the saying [†] pleased the king and the princes; and the king did according to the word of Memucan:

22 For he sent letters into all the king's provinces, into every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language, that every man should bear rule in his own house; and [u] that it should be published according to the language of every people.

Reflections upon Chap. I.—Insatiable is the nature of covetousness and ambition, which gathers to itself all people and countries, yet is nothing nearer contentment. Yea, kingdoms, when once they are overgrown, are near the brink of decay and ruin. What vast expenses do many sacrifice to the idol of pride, expenses which might have relieved many helpless families. In what awful manner shall those heathens, who would urge none to drink, rise up in judgment against those professed Christians who send round their healths, their toasts, and send round sin and death along with them! Yea, ordinarily hard drinking, however unforced, issues in the misery or shame of those who occasioned it. If persons be once intoxicated with liquor, how imprudent their conduct! they are ready to dishonour themselves, or their nearest relations, and to require what cannot be decently granted. And when pride meets with pride the issue is contention and ruin. It is easier to govern a kingdom than to rule our own proud spirit. But especially unhappy are those contentions between married persons which happen before company. The bad consequences of them may never be cured. It is indeed dangerous for kingdoms to indulge disobedience in the wives of rulers; but death or divorce ought to be the last means used to prevent it. Nor ought even the general welfare of kingdoms to be founded 6 [k] Who had been carried away from Jerusalem [*] with the captivity which had been carried away with Jeconiah king of Judah, whom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away.

7 And he [†] brought up Hadassah, (that is, [i] Esther,) his uncle's daughter; for she had neither father nor mother, and the maid was [‡] fair and beautiful: whom Mordecai (when her father and mother were dead) took for his own daughter.

8 ¶ So it came to pass, when the king's commandment and his decree was heard, and when many maidens were gathered together unto Shushan the palace, to the custody of [m] Hegai, that Esther was brought also unto the king's house, [§] to the custody of Hegai, keeper of the women.

9 And the maiden pleased him, and she [n] obtained kindness of him; and he speedily gave her her things for purification, with [‖] such things as belonged to her, and seven maidens, which were meet to be given her, out of the king's house: and [*] he preferred her and her maids unto the best place of the house of the women.

15 ¶ Now when the [q] turn of Esther, the daughter of Abihail, [r] the uncle of Mordecai, (who had taken her for his daughter,) was come to go in unto the king, she [s] required nothing but what Hegai the king's chamberlain, the keeper of the women, appointed: and Esther [t] obtained favour in the sight of all them that looked upon her.

in injustice to particulars. But O the wisdom and power of God! he makes all the follies and wickedness, as well as the counsels, of mankind, to work for his own glory and the good of his church and people.

Reflections upon Chap. II.—What is done in haste and passion issues in bitter repentance and grief. And what odd shifts crafty courtiers will take to avoid coming under the power of a female whom they have injured. Yea, men will practise the greatest extravagance and wickedness to gratify their fleshly lusts. Surely we may here observe the need there was of the gospel, in order to reduce men to the observance even of the plainest laws of nature: and, at the same time, we discern the sovereignty of God in carrying on his wise and holy designs by means of the most absurd extravagance. What care he takes of orphans and fatherless! And great is the care which men ought to take of them. Yea, it is comely when near relations have a tender and fixed regard for one another. Great prudence is sometimes necessary to enable us to discern what truths may be told, and what concealed, without bordering on falsehood. And the guardians of virgins ought to take the greatest care of them, especially if they are brought into slippery and dangerous situations. How strangely God brings treasonable plots to light! And it is an advantage for courts to have faithful attendants; and very honourable to risk our own life for the sake of our sovereign, even when we have no prospect of reward.

(4) Having, by his malicious insinuations, obtained from king Ahasuerus an order to have them all massacred: 7—13. (5) This order is immediately dispersed through the whole Persian empire, to the great grief of the inhabitants of Shushan the metropolis, and of other Jews: 14, 15.

AFTER these things did king Ahasuerus [a] promote Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, and advanced him, and set his seat above all the princes that were with him.

2 And all the king's servants, that were in the king's gate, bowed, and reverenced Haman; for the king had so commanded concerning him: but Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence.

3 Then the king's servants, which were in the king's gate, said unto Mordecai, Why transgressest thou the king's commandment?

4 Now it came to pass, when they spake daily unto him, and he hearkened not unto them, that they told Haman, to see whether Mordecai's matters would stand: for he had told them that he was a Jew.*

5 And when Haman saw that Mordecai bowed not, nor did him reverence, then was Haman full of wrath.

6 And he thought scorn to lay hands on Mordecai alone; for they had showed him the people of Mordecai: wherefore Haman sought to destroy all the Jews† that were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus, even the people of Mordecai.

7 ¶ In the first month, (that is, the month Nisan,) in the twelfth year of king Ahasuerus, they cast [b] Pur, that is, the lot,‡ before Haman from day to day, and from month to month, to the twelfth month, that is, the month Adar.

8 ¶ And Haman said unto king Ahasuerus, There is a certain people scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people; neither keep they the king's laws: therefore it is not [‖] for the king's profit to suffer them.

9 If it please the king, let it be written [‖] that they may be destroyed; and I will [*] pay ten thousand talents of silver to the hands of those that have the charge of the business, to bring it into the king's treasuries.§

11 And the king said unto Haman, The silver is given to thee, the people also, to do with them [d] as it seemeth good to thee.

12 Then were the king's [e] scribes called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and there was written, according to all that Haman had commanded, unto the king's lieutenants, and to the governors that were over every province, and to the rulers of every people of every province according to the writing thereof, and to every people after their language; [f] in the name of king Ahasuerus was it written, and sealed with the king's ring.*

13 And the letters were sent by [g] posts into all the king's provinces, to destroy, [h] to kill, and to cause to perish, all Jews, both young and old, little children and women, in [i] one day, even upon the [k] thirteenth day of the twelfth month, (which is the month Adar,) and to take the spoil of them for a prey.

14 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was published unto all people, that they should be ready against that day.

15 The posts went out, [l] being hastened by the king's commandment; and the decree was given in Shushan the palace. And the king and Haman [m] sat down to drink;† but the [n] city Shushan was perplexed.‡

3 And in every province, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, there was great mourning among the Jews, and fasting, and weeping, and wailing; and many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

* Agag was the common name of the kings of Amalek, with whom Israel was commanded to have no peace. Nothing can account for the refusal of Mordecai to do an act of ordinary courtesy to his superior, but the idea that he judged himself thereby contravening a commandment of God. † Every single evil passion passes immediately into another when temptation offers. ‡ The casting of lots to find out fortunate months, and days, and even hours, is still all prevalent in Persia. The king maintains an astrologer for this superstitious purpose. European almanacs were formerly filled with such vain, but too successful, impositions upon credulity; and, even yet, there are those who prefer one month, or one day of the week to another, for special undertakings. All this is a departure from God that, rightly considered, amounts to idolatry. It amounts to a charge of rebellion against the Jews, and a lure to the king's covetousness by their extirpation. The offer amounts to above two millions of our money; but was not to come out of Haman's private property, as appears from ver. 11, but from the produce of the plunder and confiscation arising from the execution of the decree.—Ed.

b Different countries have different modes of expressing the same thing, or attempting the same object. Any obnoxious proclamation in a free country, would instantly be met by public assemblies and petitions; but, under an Eastern despotism, the effort must be personal. Loud cries are so common in the streets of Asiatic towns, that the efforts of Mordecai would not be considered more than the ordinary mode of attracting public attention.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—The very worst of men are often exalted to the highest honours: and exalted, too, to render their shame and ruin in the end the more conspicuous and dreadful. Often the cringing complaisance of others lays a snare for the truly godly. And there is need therefore of strong faith and ardent zeal to make us take a singular course at the hazard of all that is dear to us in this world. But no consideration must influence us to that which is evil. Of what intolerable pride, insatiable cruelty, and deep-rooted antipathy, to the people of God, are some men possessed! And often courtiers mark out the worthiest of the subjects as the objects of their resentments. The people of God are ordinarily loaded with the vilest calumnies, in order to encompass their ruin. And pride, malice, and revenge, met together, stick at nothing to obtain their own ends. Some men are very lavish of their money in the service of the devil, who would be absolute churls in the service of God. And crafty courtiers often make princes believe what is for their unspeakable hurt to be for their inexpressible advantage. But miserable is the state of nations when flattering sycophants can sway the sovereign to everything horrid at their pleasure. And it is absurd for princes or others to riot in mirth and pleasure when the church is in danger, and the public perplexed. But there is no counsel nor device effectual against the Lord.—Even Haman's appeal to the lot, for marking out a lucky day for the destruction of the Jews, places it at so great a distance as to render their deliverance more glorious, and his own and their enemies' ruin the more ignominious.

12 And they told to Mordecai Esther's words.

13 Then Mordecai commanded to answer Esther, Think [o]not with thyself that thou shalt escape in the king's house, more than all the Jews.

14 For if thou altogether holdest thy peace at this time, then [p]shall there [‖]enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews from another place; but thou and thy father's house shall be destroyed: and who knoweth whether [q]thou art come to the kingdom for such a time as this?[*]

15 ¶ Then Esther bade them return Mordecai this answer,

16 Go, gather together all the Jews that are [†]present in Shushan, and fast ye for me, and neither eat nor drink three days, night or day: I also and my maidens[‡] will fast likewise; and so will I go in unto the king, which is not according to the law; and if I perish, I perish.[§]

17 So Mordecai [‖]went his way, and did according to all that Esther had commanded him.

NOW it came to pass on [a]the third day, that Esther [b]put on her royal apparel, and stood in the [c]inner court of the king's house, over against the king's house: and the king sat upon his royal throne in the royal house, over against the gate of the house.

2 And it was [d]so, when the king saw Esther the queen standing in the court, that she obtained favour in his sight: and the king [e]held out to Esther the golden sceptre that was in his hand. So Esther drew near, and touched the top of the sceptre.

3 Then said the king unto her, [f]What wilt thou, queen Esther? and what is thy request? it shall be even given thee to the half of the kingdom.[*]

4 And Esther [g]answered, If it seem good unto the king, let the king and Haman come this day unto the [h]banquet that I have prepared for him.

5 Then the king said, Cause Haman to make haste, that he may do as Esther hath said. So the king and Haman came to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

6 ¶ And the king said unto Esther at the banquet of wine, [i]What is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? even to the half of the kingdom it shall be performed.

7 Then [k]answered Esther, and said, My petition and my request is;

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—A good man severely feels and laments the heavy strokes of Providence, whilst with humble resignation he submits to the rod: and it is peculiarly grievous to him that others should suffer for his sake. How brave is it to espouse the cause of God when it seems desperate and sinking! But unhappy are those courts where all are so abandoned to gaiety, pleasure, and mirth, that nothing serious or mournful dare enter. Yea, the pride or base fear of princes has introduced the most unaccountable laws, hurtful to themselves, families, and subjects. But how friendly is it when all the members of Christ, however great, sympathise with one another in their distress! God sometimes permits the most discouraging circumstance to exercise the faith, and brighten the crown, of the redeemed. And it is necessary to consider well the ends of Providence in putting us into our stations, and to labour to let slip no opportunity of answering them. If we have faith to trust in God, he will never fail us. But, if through unbelief we decline the path of duty, we may expect the danger which we sinfully decline. In times of great distress, solemn fasting and supplication to God are leading means of deliverance. And such as are confined ought to join in the work as well as the attenders in public. In all our distresses there is a throne of grace open, and a God who heareth prayer. When we are queen did let no man come in with the king unto the banquet that she had prepared but myself; and [a] to-morrow am I invited unto her also with the king.

13 Yet [b] all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate.

14 ¶ Then said [u] Zeresh his wife and all his friends unto him, Let a gallows be made of fifty cubits high, and to-morrow speak thou unto the king that Mordecai may be hanged thereon: then [x] go thou in merrily with the king unto the banquet. And the thing pleased Haman; and [y] he caused the gallows to be made.

CHAPTER VI.

[1] (1) Providence by a wonderful series of things, recommends Mordecai to king Ahasuerus' high favour: 1, 2, 3. (2) Haman, who had come in to incense the king against him, and hasten his ignominious death, is made the instrument of the high honours done to him: 4—11. (3) From this beginning Haman's friends justly predict his ruin: 12, 13, 14.

ON that night [a] could not the king sleep; and he commanded to bring the book of records of the chronicles;[†] and they were read before the king.

2 And it was found written, That Mordecai had told of Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's chamberlains, the keepers of the door, who sought to lay hand on the king Ahasuerus.

3 And the king said, What honour and dignity hath been done to Mordecai for this? Then said the king's servants that ministered unto him, There is nothing done for him.

4 ¶ And the king said, Who is in the court? (Now Haman was come into the outward court of the king's house, to speak unto the king to hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.)[‡]

5 And the king's servants said unto him, Behold, Haman standeth in the court. And the king said, Let him come in.

6 So Haman came in. And the king said unto him, What shall be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour? (Now Haman [a] thought in his heart, To whom would the king delight to do honour more than to myself?)

7 And Haman [b] answered the king, For the man [*] whom the king delighteth to honour,

8 [†] Let the royal apparel be brought [‡] which the king useth to wear,[§] and the [c] horse that the king rideth upon, and the crown-royal which is set upon his head;[‖]

9 And let this apparel and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that they may array the man withal whom the king delighteth to honour, and [*] bring him on horseback through the street of the city, and [d] proclaim before him, Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.

10 Then the king said to Haman, [*] Make haste, and take the apparel and the horse, as thou hast said, and do even so to Mordecai the Jew, that sitteth at the king's gate: [†] let nothing fail of all that thou hast spoken.

11 Then [f] took Haman the apparel and the horse, and arrayed Mordecai, and brought him on horseback through the street of the city, and proclaimed before him, Thus shall it be done unto the man whom the king delighteth to honour.[‡]

12 ¶ And Mordecai [g] came again to the king's gate: but Haman hasted to his house mourning, and [h] having his head covered.

13 And Haman told Zeresh his [i] wife and all his friends every thing that had befallen him. Then said his [k] wise men and Zeresh his wife unto him, [l] If Mordecai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou shalt not prevail against him, but shalt surely fall before him.[§]

14 And while they were yet talking with him, came the king's chamberlains, and [m] hasted to bring Haman unto the banquet that Esther had prepared.

† These chronicles were written in verse, and would therefore form an embellished narrative, well suited to amuse the sleepless king. ‡ What a blessing is a government where liberty, and life, and death, stand not in the will of any man, but solely in the law, openly administered, and deciding upon public evidence, not upon private insinuation! Haman, without any proof of crime, had obtained sentence of death against a nation, and now, by a single writ expects the immediate execution of Mordecai! Yet, in lands of law and liberty let it never be forgotten, that every nation was at one period of its history despotically governed, and that to the light of Christianity is due all the real liberties that any nation has established and enjoyed.—Ed.

truly humbled under our sins, we may hope that God will deliver us from our afflictions. And while we desire the prayers of others, let us never forget to be importunate for ourselves. And having by the prayers of faith committed our way to the Lord, we may, with the greatest courage and resolution, venture on the most dangerous work to which in Providence we have a call.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Prudence and courage must be joined to our prayers if we would succeed in any work for God. And a plentiful harvest of joy shall they reap who sow in the tears and mourning of faith. They, who venture all for God, shall find him able to do for them unspeakably better than their most sanguine hopes. While himself is easily accessible, casting out none that come to him, he can dispose the spirits of the haughtiest princes to whatever he pleases. But, in our dealing with great men, it is best first to conciliate their affection before we ask important favours: and to watch the favourable moment is the best way to ensure success. They who are careful to please God, need neither fear nor care who are displeased with them for so doing. But pitiful and miserable is the condition of the proud. Easily they are puffed up with that which is intended to ruin them, and unmeasurably fretted at that which could never hurt them. Their pride and discontentment create them numberless miseries, and rob them of the enjoyment of their mercies: and the curse of God is often visible upon them in the midst of all their great possessions. But it is unhappy for proud spirits to have rash and imprudent advisers, who spur them on to the most debasing resentment. And base are those minds which promote revenge, even the lowest, with alertness and pleasure.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—How unsearchable are God's judgments, and his ways past finding out! By the most insignificant trifles can he promote his most important purposes. Happy are those who have the sleep of his beloved granted to them: or, if their eyes be debarred from rest, can employ their minds in sweet surveys of the annals of redeeming love! The natural law of gratitude, even towards the meanest inferior, is binding upon the conscience. But how little notice earthly princes take of their mean servants and friends, when they often know not whether their important services have been rewarded or not! Nay, often the greatest merits, and best services, are least rewarded at courts. That modesty and self-denial, which are of so great price before God, hinder men's preferment in this world; whilst forward flatterers thrust themselves into honours. The longer we have neglected to recompense favours done us, we should the more abundantly reward them at last. But pride and ambition are never satisfied with the most accumulated honours. And it is dangerous for courtiers to have too high an opinion of their own merits, and of their interest with princes, or to presume on more than they really have. Kings ought always to delight in honouring the deserving, and encouraging those that do well. But how confounding is it to proud spirits, to be obliged to confer that honour on the distinguished objects of their hatred and contempt, which they had carved out for themselves! Miserable comforters, in a day of distress, are those who flatter us in the time of our prosperity; and it is in vain to fight against those whom God protects. But none hurry faster downwards than falling favourites at courts. And sad presages of approaching ruin often seize upon sinners before destruction comes upon them to the uttermost.

SO the king and Haman came [*] to banquet with Esther the queen.

2 And the king said again unto Esther on the second day, at the banquet of wine, [a] What is thy petition, queen Esther? and it shall be granted thee: and what is thy request? and it shall be performed, even to the half of the kingdom.

3 Then Esther the queen answered and said, If I have found favour in thy sight, O king, and if it please the king, [b] let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my request.

4 For we are [c] sold, I and my people, [†] to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish: but if we had been sold for [d] bond-men and bond-women, I had held my tongue, although the enemy could not countervail the king's [e] damage.[‡]

6 And Esther [f] said, [‖] The adversary and enemy is this wicked Haman. Then Haman was [g] afraid before the king and the queen.

7 ¶ And the king, arising from the banquet of wine in his [h] wrath, went into the palace-garden: and Haman [i] stood up to make request for his life to Esther the queen; [k] for he saw that there was evil determined against him by the king.[*]

3 ¶ And Esther spake yet again before the king, and [e] fell down at his feet, [*] and besought him with tears to put away the [f] mischief of Haman the Agagite, and his device that he had devised against the Jews.[†]

4 Then the king [g] held out the golden sceptre toward Esther. So Esther arose, and stood before the king,

5 And said, If it please the king, and if I have found favour in his sight, and the thing seem right before the king, and I be [h] pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to reverse [i] the letters devised by Haman the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, [‡] which he wrote to destroy the Jews which are in all the king's provinces:

6 For how can I [k] endure to see the evil that shall come unto my people? or how can I endure to see the destruction of my kindred?

7 ¶ Then the king Ahasuerus said unto Esther the queen, and to Mordecai the Jew, Behold, [l] I have given Esther the house of Haman, and him they have hanged upon the gallows, because he laid his hand upon the Jews.

8 Write ye also for the Jews, as it liketh you, [m] in the king's name, and seal it with the king's ring: for the writing which is written in the king's name, and sealed with the king's ring, [n] may no man reverse.[§]

9 Then were the king's scribes called at that time in the [o] third month, (that is, the month Sivan,) on the three and twentieth day thereof; and it was written (according to all that Mordecai commanded) [p] unto the Jews, and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which are from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof,

The plot against the Huguenots, and the massacre of St Bartholomew's, in France, can, however, furnish an example of similar devising and cruelty, where the victims were taken totally unawares, and where the king, so far from repenting like Ahasuerus, of his rash decree, himself took part in the murder of his subjects.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God often strangely animates his enemies in power, to encourage his people's requests for favour. And a tender regard for natural life at stake, makes us very earnest in supplicating deliverance: and surely then we ought to be much more earnest for the life of our own and others' souls. The most ruinous and wicked projects are often laid to gratify men's sinful lusts. And though persecution of the people of God is not only impious, but even exceedingly detrimental to the state, where nothing can repair the loss of pious and industrious subjects, how often is it practised! Men are ready often to startle at the mention of that very wickedness to which they had given their consent! And sin generally becomes vexatious and burdensome at the last. That is often done thoughtlessly, with which, on a moment's cool reflection, we cannot but be shocked. Many seem amazed at the wickedness of others, who overlook the same, or a greater, in themselves. And accomplices in guilt quickly become the bitterest enemies one to another. How dejected in adversity are those who were most proud in prosperity. The most insolent enemies of God's people may quickly be glad to bow at their feet. And every motion creates suspicion against a man whose character is once proved infamous and abandoned. All hands will eagerly help down with falling courtiers; and the ruin of the wicked comes upon them in an instant! Yea, the enemies of God's church are astonishingly taken in their own craftiness, and have their pride brought down, their persecution punished, and their mischief returned on their head.

and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language.

10 And he wrote [q] in the king Ahasuerus' name, and sealed it with the king's ring; and sent letters by post on [r] horseback, and riders on mules, camels, and young dromedaries:

11 Wherein the king granted the Jews which were in every city to gather themselves together, and [s] to stand for their life, to destroy, to slay, and to cause to perish, all the power of the people and province that would assault them,* both little ones and women, and to [t] take the spoil of them for a prey,

12 Upon [u] one day, in all the provinces of king Ahasuerus, namely, upon the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month Adar.

13 The copy of the writing, for a commandment to be given in every province, was [†] published unto all people, and that the Jews should be ready against that day to [x] avenge themselves on their enemies.

14 So the posts[‡] that rode upon mules and camels went out, being [y] hastened and pressed on by the king's commandment. And the decree was given at Shushan the palace.

15 ¶ And Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in [z] royal apparel of [§] blue and white, and with a great crown of gold, and with a garment of fine linen and purple; and the city of Shushan [a] rejoiced and was glad.

16 The Jews had light, and gladness, and joy, and honour.

17 And in every province, and in every city, whithersoever the king's commandment and his decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast and a good day. And many of the people of the land became Jews; for the fear of the Jews fell[‖] upon them.

CHAPTER IX.

(1) The Jews slay their enemies, and the ten sons of Haman: 1—19. (2) The feast of Purim instituted: 20—32.

NOW, in the [a] twelfth month, (that is, the month Adar,) on the thirteenth day of the same, when the king's commandment and his decree drew near to be put in execution, in the day that the enemies of the Jews hoped to have power over them, (though it [b] was turned to the contrary, that the Jews had rule over them that hated them),

2 The Jews [c] gathered themselves together in their cities, throughout all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, to lay hand on such as sought their hurt:* and no man could withstand them; for [d] the fear of them fell upon all people.

3 And all the rulers of the provinces, and the lieutenants, and the deputies, and [†] officers of the king, [e] helped the Jews; because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them.

4 For Mordecai was great in the king's house, and his fame went out throughout all the provinces: for this man Mordecai [f] waxed greater and greater.

5 Thus the [g] Jews smote all their enemies with the stroke of the sword, and slaughter, and destruction, and did [‡] what they would unto those that hated them.

6 And in Shushan the palace the Jews slew and destroyed five hundred men.

7 And Parshandatha, and Dalphon, and Aspatha,

8 And Poratha, and Adalia, and Aridatha,

9 And Parmashta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Vajezatha,

10 [h] The ten sons of Haman the son of Hammedatha, the enemy of the Jews, slew they; but [i] on the spoil laid they not their hand.[‖]

11 On that day the number of those that were slain in Shushan the palace [j] was brought before the king.

12 ¶ And the king said unto Esther the queen, The Jews have slain and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the palace, and the ten sons of Haman; what have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? now, [k] what is thy petition? and it shall be granted thee; or what is thy request further? and it shall be done.

13 Then said Esther, [l] If it please the king, let it be granted to the Jews which are in Shushan to do to-morrow also according unto this day's decree, and [m] let Haman's ten sons be hanged upon the gallows.

14 And the king commanded it so to be done: and the decree was given at Shushan; and they hanged Haman's ten sons.*

15 For the [n] Jews that were in Shushan gathered themselves together on the fourteenth day also of the month Adar, and slew three hundred men at Shushan; but [o] on the prey they laid not their hand.

16 But the other Jews that were in the king's provinces gathered themselves together,[†]

He is said by the Greek writers to have established post-houses with relays of horses at proper distances; and that by causing them to travel both night and day, he astonished the ancient world by the rapidity of communication with all parts of his vast empire. Early European travellers were astonished to find similar posting establishments in the Mongol empire, having 10,000 post-houses, and 200,000 horses, and expediting despatches at the rate of 200 or 250 miles in a day. The origin of posting in Europe is generally ascribed to the university of Paris. (See Marco Polo, 2. 90.)—Ed.

And as none of them all laid their hands on the prey, there can be little question that Mordecai had given them warning to manifest by this universal abstinence, that they sought protection and not plunder. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—This world is but a changing scene. The favour even of kings is precarious; and riches make to themselves wings, and fly away. Men often lay up wealth, little thinking to whom it shall at last pertain, whether to a friend or a foe. The ten thousand talents, which were lately offered as the price of the Jews' blood, now become the property of them whose lives were marked out for a prey. How just is the judgment of God; and with what care should we make sure those riches which will not be left behind, but will go with us into another world! Surely then the lives and interests of God's people ought to lie the nearest to our hearts! And no advancement must make us to forget our poor relations. It is proper to present our petitions to God or men with earnestness, and attended with the utmost modesty. Though we have justice on our side, it becomes us, as inferiors, to use entreaty. Men's mischief often survives them. They murder, even after their death, by the laws which they have made, the projects which they have set on foot, and the writings and sentiments which they have propagated. But absurd and entangling are those laws which have pride for their source and basis. And there is great need to hasten the relief when men's lives are in danger: for when we have done wrong we cannot too quickly prevent the mischievous consequences of it. God quickly turns his people's mourning into joy. And his alarming Providences in their favour, effectually determine others to join them.

and [p] stood for their lives, and had rest from their enemies, and slew of their foes seventy and five thousand (but they laid not their hands on the prey)

17 On the thirteenth day of the month Adar: and on the fourteenth day* of the same rested they, and made it a day [q] of feasting and gladness.

18 But the Jews that were at Shushan assembled together on the thirteenth day thereof, and on the fourteenth thereof; and on the fifteenth day of the same they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness.

19 Therefore the Jews of the villages, that dwelt in the unwalled towns, made the fourteenth day of the month Adar a day [r] of gladness and feasting, and a good day, and of sending portions one to another.

20 ¶ And Mordecai [s] wrote these things,† and sent letters unto all the Jews that were in all the provinces of the king Ahasuerus, both nigh and far,

21 To stablish this among them, that they [t] should keep the fourteenth day of the month Adar, and the fifteenth day of the same, yearly,‡

22 [u] As the days wherein the Jews rested from their enemies, and the month which was turned unto them from sorrow to joy, and from mourning into a good day; that they should [x] make them days of feasting and joy, and of sending portions one to another, and gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to do as they had begun, and as Mordecai had written unto them;

24 Because [y] Haman the son of Hammedatha, the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, had devised against the Jews to destroy them, and had cast [z] Pur, (that is, the lot,) to [§] consume them, and to destroy them:

25 But [a] when Esther came before the king, he commanded by letters, that his wicked device, which he devised against the Jews, should return upon his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

26 Wherefore they called these days [b] Purim, after the name of Pur: [‖] therefore for all the words of this letter, and of that which they had seen concerning this matter, and which had come unto them,

27 The Jews ordained, and [c] took upon them, and upon their seed, and upon all such as joined themselves unto them, so as it should not * fail, that they would keep these two days according to their writing, and according to their appointed time every year;

28 And [d] that these days should be remembered, and kept throughout every generation, every family, every province, and every city; and that these days of Purim should not † fail from among the Jews, nor the memorial of them ‡ perish from their seed.§

29 Then Esther the queen, the daughter of Abihail, and Mordecai the Jew, wrote with ‖ all authority, to confirm this second letter of Purim.

30 And he sent the letters unto all the Jews, to * the hundred twenty and seven provinces of the kingdom of Ahasuerus, with [f] words of peace and truth,

31 To confirm these days of Purim * in their times appointed, according as Mordecai the Jew and Esther the queen had enjoined them, and as they had decreed † for themselves, and for their seed, the matters of the [g] fastings and their cry.

32 And the decree of Esther confirmed these matters of Purim; and it was written in the book.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—How strangely sinners are infatuated to their own destruction; and obstinate revenge is deaf to all admonition. Fight they will, though both the hand of God and men be lifted up against them! But great numbers are friends or enemies to the people of God, just as the smiles of great men wind about: and pitiful is the work which the wicked have in hand, when the terrors of God, and the terrors of great men, concur to dismay them. We may make the boldest attempts, when not only great men favour us, but the great God fights for us. And it is glorious when, in the most desperate war, the laws of self-denial, humanity, and pity, are strictly regarded. Never should the people of God appear selfish, worldly, or covetous. And, if we receive signal mercies from God, our thankful returns ought to be quick and speedy: while they are yet fresh in our minds, and the impressions of them most sensible. Nor ought astonishing deliverances, and their circumstances, ever to be forgotten. Remembrance of such ought to encourage us in every subsequent distress. Yet there is great need to beware, lest what is well intended at first, should by degrees become an occasion of wickedness. Nothing more purifies the heart, and adorns religion, than holy joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ. And nothing more pollutes the heart, and reproaches religion, than carnal mirth and sensual pleasure.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—It is a great mercy, in an arbitrary government, when the weakness, or wickedness, of the monarch is balanced by the good qualities of the minister of state. They only are truly great, whose power and dignity are employed for the public good. But, alas! how unsubstantial the whole pomp, grandeur, and wealth, of this world, which so soon pass away!

THE BOOK OF JOB.

By whom the book of Job was written is uncertain, and conjecture is useless. It is, for the substance of it, a true history of real facts. Job is represented as really existent as Noah or Daniel; Ezek. xiv. 14, 20; and as a patient sufferer who obtained a joyful deliverance; Jam. v. 11. It is an ancient history. The length of Job's life; the rare use of the divine name of JEHOVAH, and frequent use of SHADDAI, or Almighty and All-sufficient; the remarkable remains of religion in the land of Uz and the places about; the mentioning of no other idolatry but that of worshipping the sun and moon; the never making any plain allusion to the dividing of the Red sea, or to the appearance of God to the Israelites in the wilderness, which lay at no great distance from the land of Uz; strongly tempt one to think that Job's distress might be about the time when Moses lived in the land of Midian, or perhaps a hundred years before. We have here (1) The history of Job's sufferings, and his remarkable patience under them, issuing in a sad mixture of human weakness, in his cursing the day of his birth, chap. i, ii, iii. (2) A hot dispute between him and Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar, his friends, Whether remarkable judgments be certain tokens of the wickedness of those upon whom they are inflicted? The aim of Job is to bewail his own affliction, complain of its weight, justify himself from gross wickedness or hypocrisy, and prove that wicked men often prosper in this world, while the godly are exposed to manifold calamities. The scope of his friends is to prove, that no good man is subjected to extraordinary calamities, but that the most wicked men ordinarily are; and hence to condemn Job as a hypocrite, because of his uncommon troubles; iv—xxxi. (3) A decision of the dispute; by Elihu, then by JEHOVAH. The aim of Elihu is to leave Job's state undetermined, or even to admit it to be good; and only to charge him with his misbehaviour under his trouble, as too arrogant and self justifying, especially when he had to do with a God of infinite sovereignty, greatness, power, wisdom, and justice. The scope of Jehovah's speech is to convince Job of his meanness, and of his own infinite power, greatness, and extensive influence; and thereby lead him into a sense of his iniquity, in insisting so much upon his own justification, and complaining so unguardedly of the providence of God:—and at last he justifies him, in opposition to his three friends, in his character and sentiments; xxxii—xlii. (4) The whole issues in Job's great honour and redoubled prosperity; xlii. In this book we have at once a most noted encouragement to patience, and a system of the most ancient believer's apprehensions and faith concerning the wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness, and sovereignty of God; and concerning his works of creation and providence; concerning the original and actual corruption of mankind; concerning redemption by Christ, and the usefulness of good works; and, in fine, concerning the resurrection of the dead and eternal life.

A. M. cir. 2484.
B. C. cir. 1520.

THERE was a man in the land of Uz * whose name was Job; and that man was perfect † and upright, and one that feared God, and eschewed ‡ evil.

2 And there were born unto him seven sons and three daughters.

3 His substance also was seven thousand sheep, and three thousand camels, and five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she-asses, and a very great † household; so that this man was the greatest of all the men of the east.

4 And his sons went and feasted in their houses, every one his day; § and sent and called for their three sisters to eat and to drink with them.

5 And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and offered burnt-offerings according to the number of them all: for Job said, It may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts. ‖ Thus did Job continually.

6 ¶ Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and Satan came also among them.

7 And the LORD said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it.

8 And the LORD said unto Satan, [a] Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and an upright man, one that feareth God, and [b] escheweth evil?

9 Then Satan answered the LORD, and said, Doth Job fear God for nought?

10 Hast thou not [c] made an hedge about him, and about his house, and about all that he hath on every side? thou hast blessed the work of his hands, and his [e] substance is increased in the land:

11 But put forth thine hand now, and touch all that he hath, † and he will curse thee to thy face.

12 And the LORD said unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thy ‡ power; only upon himself put not forth thine hand. So Satan went forth from the presence of the LORD. §

13 ¶ And there was a day when his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in their eldest brother's house:

14 And there came a messenger unto Job, and said, The oxen were ploughing, and the asses feeding beside them;

15 And the Sabeans ‖ [d] fell upon them, and

* There are three persons called Uz in Scripture. The son of Aram, Gen. 10. 23; the son of Nahor, Gen. 22. 21; and the son of Dishan, Gen. 36. 28. Hence the difficulty of deciding upon what country is called by this name. The most probable opinion, because the best supported by Scripture reference, is that which places Uz in Edom, or Idumæa, as in Lam. 4. 21. where Uz and Edom are identified. The same may be seen by referring to Jer. 49. 7. Ezek. 25. 13. Amos 1. 11; and in Obad. 9. the men of Teman are described as inhabitants of Idumæa, and in Job 2. 11, Eliphaz is described as a Temanite.—ED.

† Not a legal perfection, (see chap. 9. 20. & 7. 20.) The word signifies complete; that is, Job was a believer in Christ, whose day he saw by faith and rejoiced. Chap. 19. 25. For the manner in which a believer is perfect and complete, see John 17. 23. Col. 2. 10.—ED.

§ Is this to be considered a real dialogue, or an allegory, a narrative of facts, or a representation by parable? When it is recollected, that JEHOVAH literally conversed with Abraham, (Gen. 15. 1, 2. 7, 8, 13. & 17. 1, 18, 19.) and, afterwards with Jacob, (Gen. 32. 24, 30.) and that he spoke with Moses "face to face," Ex. 33. 11; and then when it is farther recollected that Jesus, "the Word that was God—the Word become flesh," (John 1. 1, 14.) "God manifest in the flesh," (1 Tim. 3. 16.) permitted Satan to tempt him verbally, (Matt. 4. 3, 11.) there will be less difficulty in apprehending how this narrative may reveal and record a reality of the invisible, and not present a mere figurative emblem. But, if any be otherwise minded, still let it be remembered, that a figure is a figure of some reality, and that, consequently, the narrative, however interpreted, represents the reality of an invisible government over the good and the evil of this visible world.—ED.

‖ Probably the descendants of Sheba the grandson of Abraham, (Gen. 25. 3.) whom he sent into "the east country," (ver. 6.) where Job "was the greatest of all the men of the east."—ED.

d Gen. 10. 7, 28. & 25. 3. i. e. wild Arabs.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—God can easily raise up instances of remarkable piety, even among wild Arabs, and amidst wealth: and he delights to propagate the fame of such as are remarkably pious. It is a mercy for children to have parents deeply and constantly concerned for the glory of God, and the good of their souls. However lawful feasting and mirth may be on some occasions, there is always need after it to examine our hearts and conduct, and to supplicate the pardon of our mistakes in it. How closely Satan attends saints, ministers, and angels, particularly when they present themselves before God! We have great need to be always sober and vigilant, when our adversary the devil goeth about as a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour. And many, not less odious to God in their tempers and designs than Satan, thrust themselves into the assemblies of God's people, in their house of prayer. The noted favourites and servants of God are peculiarly the objects of Satan's malice. But precise are the limits by which he is restricted by God, who knoweth all his designs. And they, who approve themselves faithful servants to God, will find him faithful to them in preserving them from the snares of the devil. It is very common for Satan and his instruments, to reproach the people of God as selfish and hypocritical in their religion: and almost as common to ascertain their declarations with curses and imprecations. And when God, for holy ends, lengthens Satan's chain against his own people, how inexpressibly forward is he in carrying on mischief to the utmost extent of his permission! There is need then, in our happiest estate, to rejoice with trembling. How heavy are sore troubles when they come from every quarter, and on every thing, one upon the neck of another; and the last the most dreadful. Happy is it when we are graciously weaned from created comforts, of which we may be so quickly, and in so awful a manner, deprived. But no affliction should indispose us for God's worship. The more trouble we feel, the more need we have of his grace to support us. And the views of our death should wean us from perishing things. All that we have is God's gift, lent or given to us: and, whatever we lose, enough is left to deserve our thankfulness. Nay, a spirit of meekness bestowed, is a greater blessing than all that God can take from us. But, nevertheless, how powerful are the influences of God's grace, that can render his people composed, and heartily resigned to his will, under the sharpest trials! In all my troubles let me view God's hand, and acquiesce in his will: and let them all drive me into the arms, the bosom of my God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—How restless, impudent, steady, and active, is the devil in prosecuting his malice against the saints! Disappointment but sharpens his rage, and makes him return more furious to the attack: and, though proved a liar, he persists in his accusations. It is honourable and necessary to resist him, steadfast in the faith. But, above all, great is the mercy that we have Jesus as our advocate to repel his bold accusations. To what astonishing extent doth God, for his own wise ends, permit Satan to afflict his dearest saints; nay, his Son! But glorious conquerors are they, whose mind, in humble abasement, corresponds with their lowest or most loathsome circumstances of body. Heavy indeed is the trial, when those, who ought to be our sympathizing directors in trouble, become our tempters to the most horrid sins;—to rage and disquiet;—to blasphemy;—to trespass more and more against the Lord; and when those who come to comfort us, have their mouths shut! But happy is he who endureth temptation: when he is tried, he shall receive a crown of life! Happy is he who abhors to parley with vile suggestions, and who receives troubles as the love-messengers of his God! God can make our friends useless to us, even when they are so kind as to come to comfort us, and so wise as to prefer the house of mourning to the house of mirth. What frightful changes disease can make on us! Why then should we be proud of vile bodies? But worthless are those friends who hasten from the chamber of disease, and are glad to fly from the melancholy door: an awful proof that they are unmindful of, and unprepared for, death. Let then no health but what Christ is, no friend but God in him, be the trust, the boast, of my soul! In the time of need, all others take to themselves the wings of the morning, and fly away. Miserable comforters, nay, ensnaring tormentors, are they all.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. III. Ver. 1, 2. After these seven days were finished, Job gave vent to that grief, which had so long stupified him, in the most bitter lamentations, and in imprecating mischiefs upon the day of his conception and birth. 3. Let, said he, the day of my birth, and the night of my conception, be utterly forgotten, as if they had never been. 4. Let that unhappy day be covered with horrible darkness, and turned into night. And never let one ray of day-light appear thereon. 5. Let the most frightful darkness, and the most extensive and thick clouds, wholly possess it. Let black burning vapours, and the most fearful disasters, render it terrible to men. 6. Let gross darkness, or absolute extinction, seize upon the night of my conception. 7. Let that wretched night be as barren of everything comfortable as a flinty rock: and let men never meet together on it for feasting or mirth: nor let a single whisper of joy be heard on it. 8. Let the most skilful mourners, who imprecate wo upon the days of uncommon disasters, effectually curse it by name as the direful mother of monsters, redoubled terrors and mischiefs. 9. Let nothing but the most frightful darkness seize upon it, without a single glimmering of a star, or the smallest dawning of a long-looked-for morning; 10. Because it did not bury me in my mother's womb, and thus secure me from those miseries which I now feel. 11. What a wretched misfortune was it that I did not die in the womb, in the birth, or immediately after! 12. What a misfortune that they, who received me from the womb, did not let me fall on the ground, and dash out my brains; or that the nurse did not refuse to give me suck! 13. For thus should I have lain still as a ship at anchor; I should have felt none of those miseries which I now endure: but had lain quiet and undisturbed in the grave; 14. Equal to kings and great men, who lie alone in the tombs which they built for themselves; 15. And to princes, who in their life had heaped up riches and wealth; 16. Or like a concealed abortive infant, which was never numbered among men. 17. There, in the grave, the most wicked can hurt no one; and they, who had been restlessly tossed and wearied with violence, enjoy the profoundest safety and rest. 18. There the condemned prisoners and enslaved captives enjoy the most perfect ease, and do not so much as hear the voice of an oppressor or exacter of labour. 19. There every person is on an equal level of power and greatness; and the servant is as free as his master. 20. Is it not strange that a man should be forced to live when his miserable condition makes him heartily abhor it; 21. Who in vain wishes for death, and seeks it more eagerly than the greatest riches; 22. And who would more gladly leap into his grave than the covetous miser can meet with a rich vein of silver; 23. Being so oppressed, and shut up with God's indignation, that he knows no other way to turn himself? 24. For my meat doth but sustain a miserable life, which is filled up with heart-sinking sobs, and loud roarings, on account of my troubles. 25. For whatever dreadful things I fear, they immediately come upon me, notwithstanding all my care to prevent them. 26. In my prosperity I never securely trusted in my riches, nor indulged myself in carnal ease; yet that has not preserved me from being miserable. And in this distress I have had no rest; and yet further billows of tossing troubles are still coming upon me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—How dreadful are the days, the ages, in hell on which Heaven frowns, and which earth forgets, joy forsakes, and curses attend. The best, when left to themselves, may fall into the greatest folly and guilt; become mad in their wishes, liberal of their curses, cruel to their friends, and unthankful to their God! But how much better is the never-cursed day of our spiritual and eternal birth than that of our natural! How helpless are men when they come into this world! But kind is the care of Providence about them. How levelling are the strokes of death! None of our earthly honours dare enter the grave. Happy only those in it who die in the Lord! What relief from trouble, what rest, what liberty, they enjoy! But sad is the case when inflicted troubles, and want of prospect of deliverance, make even saints to long for death, and bid it welcome. To quarrel with the life which God bestows, is to sin against our own mercies. Fretfulness and impatience at our lot can only aggravate our sufferings. And to reflect on God's providence is to accuse himself. It is our happiness that our time is in God's hand. The more irksome this life is, we should be the more solicitous to prepare for a better. And they only are fit to die who are content to live; and, satisfied under every burden, wait cheerfully the Lord's pleasure.

CHAP. IV.—Then Eliphaz, a descendant of Esau, replied, ver. 2. Thou wilt doubtless be incensed by the slightest attempts to offer a reply: but who can restrain himself from speaking the truth upon such a pressing occasion? 3. Behold, in former times thou hast, with great pains and success, instructed many under trouble, and corrected their mistakes; and by thy kind and pertinent advices, hast mightily encouraged the dispirited. 4. By thy discourse thou hast encouraged and supported those whose hearts were ready to sink; and hast settled them who trembled under the burdens of their adversity. 5. But now, when fallen into their condition, thou canst not practise thy own lessons, but faintest, and art struck with consternation. 6. Is not this the time to exercise thy piety, thy confidence in God, thy hope of blessings, and thy integrity of conversation? Or shall all thy religious appearances turn out a mere nothing? 7. Too good reason thou hast to suspect thyself a hypocrite: for think if thou canst remember one instance of an innocent and godly man who was ever punished with such remarkable strokes of divine vengeance as thou art. 8. For my part, aged as I am, I have always observed, that it is the wicked devisers and practisers of horrible crimes who reap the fruit of their works in such a manner. 9. By the blasting and burning influence of God's fearful judgments, they are more suddenly, or more gradually, reduced to misery and ruin. 10. And though, like thee and thy sons, they be oppressors, fierce and strong as lions, their power and influence are broken, and themselves afflicted. 11. The mightiest tyrants, and their posterity, are in due time stripped of their ill-gotten wealth, and violently reduced to misery and servitude. 12—16. Moreover in a vision, which exceedingly terrified me, I heard a spirit, whose form I could not comprehend, amidst profound silence all around, say, 17. Shall a wretched man be more righteous than God, or justified before him? or even the most excellent man be pure before his Maker? 18. Behold! he put no firmness in his heavenly ministers, and can put no trust in them; and in his angels he has placed no ground of boasting, and can perceive defect of service and readiness to slide. 19. How then can he perceive perfection in mortal and sinful men, whom he can crush as easily as, or before the face of, a moth! 20. They are pricked and bruised in a mortar of trouble through their whole life, and quickly perish for ever, without any oppressing them, or regarding their fall. 21. Is not all their power and excellency a plucked-up nothing, is it not destroyed together? They pine and melt away for want of, and without ever attaining, wisdom, or any solid and well-connected good. And, though their dignity be ever so great, and their posterity ever so numerous, they die like so many beasts, which have no understanding of their latter end.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Such as are in sore trouble ought to be spoken to and dealt with in great tenderness. But affection must not hinder, but promote, faithfulness in our reproofs and admonitions. We must not, for fear of offending, suffer sins upon our brother. And it is very edifying, when such, as are noted in their profession, lay out themselves for the instruction and encouragement of others in the Lord's way; warning the unruly, supporting the weak, and comforting the feeble-minded. Yet, through the corruption of our nature, it is far easier to give good counsel than to take it. Extremely trying is the situation when Satan employs the saints' godly friends to make them raise their hopes, and acknowledge themselves hypocrites. The charge of hypocrisy is most frequently laid against the people of God, and is one of the hardest to be borne. But exceeding sinful is the indulgence of a censorious spirit. We must never judge of a man's state from a particular failing, or from his outward lot. Though tyrannical oppressors, and other sinners, be recompensed in this life, yet no man knows either love or hatred by all that is before him. What singular intimacy with God might saints enjoy, if duly weaned and withdrawn from the things of this life! Were our tempers duly holy, even our dreams might be means of our noted fellowship with God. O how men's spirits shrink under visits from the other world! What then must be the terrible majesty, infinite holiness and equity of God himself! Insignificant and impure are all creatures in comparison of him. Mean are men while they live; and wretched in death, if driven away in their sins. But for senseless, sinful, dying worms to impeach the wisdom, goodness, or equity, of JEHOVAH'S dispensations of Providence, or to plead their own wealth and excellency in his presence, is the boldest presumption. How strange is it that, amidst so many and remarkable warnings of an entrance into eternity, most men should live entirely unconcerned about it! And scarcely less strange that even good men should so often wrest God's oracles to serve their own humours. This oracle, which Eliphaz heard, gave ground to rebuke Job for his murmuring, but none to condemn him as a hypocrite.

CHAP. V.—Call now, if there be indeed any that will answer this oracle in thy favour! And to which of the saints canst thou turn as an advocate for thy cause, or as an example of thy condition? 2. For the just vengeance and holy jealousy of God shall destroy foolish and wicked men: and their own rage at Providence, and envy of other men's happiness, shall render them miserable. 3. Even when I have seen wicked men flourishing in apparently fixed prosperity, I have judged them unhappy, and predicted their fall, and quickly seen them and their families rendered miserable. 4. Their posterity are exposed to great dangers and calamities: they are oppressed and ruined in their lawsuits, or are openly punished, while there is none to deliver them. 5. The hungry vagabonds eat up their crop; and notwithstanding all the means used to secure it, or the danger to the taker, the sweeping scourge, and savage robber, such as the Chaldeans or Sabeans, carry off their whole substance and wealth. 6, 7. Affliction never comes to men without the just influence of God, and the deserving influence of men's sin, even though it be altogether common and natural for men to meet with trouble. And men, outrageous in iniquity, and abandoned to gross impiety, shall not long flourish on the earth; but if, as born in it, a man be obstinate in gross wickedness, the flaming thunderbolts of God's vengeance shall fly aloft to destroy him. 8. Truly, therefore, were I in thy place, I would humbly address myself unto God, and refer myself to his disposal. 9. I would refer myself to God, who works so many things, the nature, causes, and immediate ends of which we do not understand, and so is able to help or punish as he pleases. 10. To God, who waters the earth with rain; and who causes the fountains to spring, and rivulets to run along the streets and fields. 11. That by plentiful crops he may enrich and dignify men of low condition, and exalt those that mourn in sordid baseness and misery to an extended happiness and safety: 12. To God, who defeats the craftiest designs of subtle men to raise or enrich themselves, that it is not in their power to execute the schemes which they have most cunningly contrived: 13. Who makes their own devices to produce what they studied to avoid, and to hurry them, contrary to their expectation, into dreadful ruin. 14. So that, when everything seems plain and prosperous, they suddenly stumble into mistakes and misery; and, in the very midst of their wisdom and felicity, unexpected danger seizes upon them. 15. By which means God delivers those who fear his name from the open fury, and from the treacherous flatteries and calumnies of these powerful oppressors. 16. That by observation and experience of this, the poor and oppressed may be encouraged to hope in God for help and deliverance, and wicked men may be confounded and silenced.—17. And, moreover, God makes all the afflictions of his people to work remarkably for their good; therefore never complain of his corrections, but esteem them as a distinguished favour. 18. For he not only makes us grieved, and pained with trouble, for our good, but quickly removes his rod, and bestows his comforts. 19. When manifold troubles are inflicted on others, thou shalt escape, if thou refer thyself to God's disposal. Nay, be thy own troubles as many as they will, they shall do thee no real hurt. 20. God shall supply thee with food in times of famine, and protect thee in the day of battle. 21. No malicious reproachers or false witnesses shall be able to hurt thee; and thou shalt be secure amidst the depopulations of countries. 22. No pestilence nor famine, nor ravenous beast, shall be allowed to hurt thee, nor even mar thy cheerfulness. 23. The stones of the field, as if in league with thee, shall neither hurt thy person nor crop; and even the wild beasts shall submit to thee as thy conquered servants. 24. Thou shalt, by experience, find thy dwelling, family, and substance, wherever it is, in safety and quietness: and thou shalt be enabled to manage thy household affairs without any allowed iniquity; and shalt take an account of them without disappointment. 25. And, however bare thou now appearest, as the earth in winter, thou shalt find thy posterity very numerous, prosperous, and beautifully connected. 26. And, when thou hast arrived at an uncommon age, thou shalt enter into thy grave with an easy smile, and shouts of joy, as one fully ripened for the glories of heaven. 27. Doubt not of this; for we have thoroughly examined the point, and find it as I have said. Hear, consider, and practise it, for thy present and everlasting advantage.

Reflections upon Chap. V.—The best of men quickly grow confident in their own mistakes. And it is the greatest discouragement to one in sore trouble to find no saint in his case or sentiment. But how foolish and silly are the greatest of sinners! Their own wickedness fearfully corrects them, and their backslidings ruin themselves, their families, or property. It is stupid and heathenish to think that anything happens to us by chance. And, the more we are acquainted with the sinfulness of our nature, we shall see the less reason to murmur at our afflictions. Under sore troubles, it is necessary to search out and remove the sinful cause, and to turn all our fretful murmurs into humble supplications. How encouraging is it to have an Almighty, condescending, and gracious God to apply to! No craft, no strength, no plots of devils or men, need discourage us when we have him on our side. If our mind be brought down to our circumstances, let us never quit our hope: it is in a faithful promiser. Our malignant opposers may for a while open their mouths wide against us, and their oppressing hand may lie heavy on us; but quickly their arms shall be broken, and their lips sealed up in death. But great and holy caution is necessary under trouble, that we may neither be averse to it, nor think ill of it, nor overlook and disregard it. For when blessed of God they are remarkably advantageous. They but open God's way for bestowing his distinguished favours. And those who dwell under the shadow of the Almighty shall enjoy the surest protection, inward quietness, peace with God and his creatures, comfort in their families and seed, and joy and honour in their death. Let us then attend to, and profit by every truth we hear.

Chap. VI.—But Job replied to Eliphaz: 2. O that my oppressive trouble, allotted me in God's indignation, and my extensive, unavoidable, and sinking calamity

7 The things that my soul refused to touch are as my sorrowful meat.*

8 Oh that I might have my request; and that God would grant me the thing that I long for!

9 Even that it would please God to destroy me; that he would let loose his hand, and cut me off!

10 Then should I yet have comfort; yea, †I would harden myself in sorrow:‡ let him not spare; for I have not concealed the words of the Holy One.§

11 What is my strength, that I should hope? and what is mine end, that I should prolong my life?

12 Is my strength the strength of stones? or is my flesh of brass?

13 Is not my help in me?‖ and is wisdom driven quite from me?

14 To him that is afflicted pity should be showed from his friend; but he forsaketh the fear of the Almighty.*

15 My brethren have dealt deceitfully as a brook, and as the stream of brooks that pass away;

16 Which are blackish by reason of the ice, and wherein the snow is hid:

17 What time they wax warm, they vanish: when it is hot, they are consumed out of their place.

18 The paths of their way are turned aside; they go to nothing, and perish.

19 The troops of Tema looked,* the companies of Sheba waited for them.

20 They *were confounded because they had hoped: they came thither, and were ashamed.

21 †For now ye are ‡nothing;§ ye see my casting down, and are afraid.‖

22 [r] Did I say, Bring unto me? or, Give a reward for me of your substance?

23 Or, Deliver me from the enemy's hand? or, Redeem me from the hand of the mighty?

24 Teach me, and I will hold my tongue; and cause me to understand wherein I have erred.

25 How forcible are right words! but [s]what doth your arguing reprove?

26 Do ye imagine to reprove words,* and the speeches of one that is desperate, which are as wind?†

27 Yea, ‡ye overwhelm [h]the fatherless,§ and ye dig a pit for your friend.

28 Now therefore be content, look upon me; for it is evident ‖unto you if ‖I lie.

29 Return, I pray you, let it not be iniquity; yea, return again, my righteousness is *in it.†

* May not ver. 5—7, be paraphrased thus?—The onager and the ox never complain while they have the food of their choice. Give them other food unsuited to their taste, and their braying or lowing will soon give proof of hunger. Even so, before me is set, a table covered with sorrowful meat which my soul refuses to touch. I have lost all taste and relish for the world, the world is become insipid and unsavoury to me; why should I not then complain, if the lower animals are so privileged? If their Maker indulge their craving appetites, why may I not call upon the death that I long for? See ver. 8.—Ed.

The meaning therefore appears to be—"Is not my help in me?" that is, have I not a right, as my only help, to ask of God, to let loose his hand and cut me off? See ver. 8, 9.—Ed.

and sorrow, were but impartially and thoroughly weighed! 3. It would be found so heavy as to hinder, and far surpass, complaints: therefore are my words full of burning rage and tossing disquiet. 4. For grievous pains in my body, and impressions of God's wrath on my conscience, by their violence, quite dispirit my soul, and waste my life. His terrible judgments shut me up on every side, and set themselves as in battle array against me. 5. You do no more than brute beasts when you are easy and unconcerned amidst your prosperity. But if these animals complain in their distress, why should I be hindered? 6. Can ever such empty and unsavoury discourse as yours, without any seasoning of grace, prudence, and moderation, be either acceptable or edifying to one in such distress! 7. Those grievous afflictions, which I was once afraid to touch, I must now in anguish endure; and yet I have nothing afforded me for comfort but your loathsome and empty discourses. 8. O that God would quickly fulfil my request for death, and grant me that which I earnestly hope and long for! 9. Even that, without leaving me to languish in this miserable condition, he would, with one effectual stroke, put an end to my present life. 10. The near views of this would comfort my spirit, and strengthen me to endure the severest pains; to obtain this, I would gladly endure what he pleases; as I am conscious that I have not hypocritically denied, disregarded, or concealed his truths. 11. My strength is so spent, that I can neither hold out nor expect recovery. I neither have, nor hope for, comfort in this life, that I should desire it; nor do I apprehend any hurt in death, that I should fear it. 12. My strength is quite incapable of bearing such troubles; nor can I but feel their terrible pressure. 13. And though I cannot deliver myself, am I therefore destitute of solid reason and true virtue? Have not I the testimony of a good conscience? Do not I know my own integrity, and the nature and degree of my sufferings, better than you? 14. Surely he who is in distress should meet with pity and compassion! and he, who, instead of pitying a friend under great affliction, censures and reproaches him, shows that he has not the true fear of God, and is in a fair way to apostatize from his service. 15—20. My dearest friends promised me help and comfort; but failed me in a time of need; as torrents, which in winter make a great noise, and run with a violent stream, when the melted ice and snow fall thick into them; but in the summer, when water is much needed in these hot and parched countries, are quite dried up; the water is so diverted into other channels, exhausted by the dry desert, or exhaled into the empty air, that one can scarcely tell where they ran: and the Arabian travellers, who expected to refresh themselves with the water, find themselves shamefully and miserably disappointed. 21. Just so are ye deceitfully disappointing me in my adversity, when I most need your help. Instead of comforting me, you, seeing my distress, shrink from me, as if you were afraid I should prove burdensome or disgraceful to you. 22, 23. But since I never asked aught of you for either my subsistence or deliverance, can you not afford me a few comfortable words! 24. If you can convince me of any mistake, I shall submit, cease my complaints, and hearken to your counsels: 25. For solid arguments have a marvellous power to convince and persuade; but your reproofs are to no purpose, as they proceed wholly on mistakes. 26. To what purpose rail ye at words, or critically censure the speeches of a man desperate with trouble! 27. Mean ye to oppress me, when so helpless and destitute, with your bitter calumnies and revilings; and designedly to add to my misery? 28—30. Consider therefore my case and words more deliberately and impartially: you can easily detect me if I speak false, or maintain a bad cause. Fairly try my cause over again, and you will find me innocent of the hypocrisy and wickedness which you have laid to my charge. Have I uttered aught that is false or wilfully wicked? or am I so stupid that I cannot distinguish that which is vain, false, or impious, from that which is true, gracious, and edifying?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—How insupportable is inward trouble, either felt or feared; and, of all our evils, none more intolerable than a sense of God's wrath. They, in general, are partial judges of other men's troubles who live in case and plenty themselves. And it adds greatly to afflictions to meet with nothing under them but uncharitable censures and insipid comforts from our Christian friends. It is difficult to keep either heart or lips aright under such complicated troubles. Ungoverned passion grows more violent when it meets with rebukes and checks. But it is most unbecoming when it gets into our very prayers to God, and by our folly turns them into sin. There is great need of always living faithful for God, since we know not how soon troubles may render us weary of our life. And those, who are by grace prepared for another world, can see little in this to make them fond of staying in it. But it is not self-hardening, but humility under trouble, that makes us ripe for deliverance. Alas! how often dejected spirits preach despair to themselves, and refuse to be comforted; forgetting how God can strengthen or recover for his own glory, as he pleases! It is a mercy then to have wisdom and grace, that will remain with us in the very worst of times. Unjust, yea impious, is the want of compassion to those who are under heavy afflictions. And it is bitter to find the friends, on whom we depended, prove faithless. Yet created comforts commonly disappoint us, and become gall and wormwood, when we come to have most need of their encouraging and supporting influence. Upright souls are averse to be a burden to their friends. And the importunity of want often provokes the abuse of the uncharitable. But how contrary to sense—to reason—to pity—to patience—to equity—to a desire after truth—do friends act when God makes them scourges to us! Truth is a mighty weapon when wielded by the weakest arm. And they who have truth on their side will never shun the light, but court inquiry; and nothing then can be more unreasonable than to refuse them a patient hearing.

CHAPTER VII.

(1) Job defends his desire of death: 1—11. (2) Complains of his trouble, and expostulates with God: 12—21.

A. M. cir. 2484. B. C. cir. 1520.

IS there not [a] an appointed time to man[*] upon earth? are not his days also like the days of an hireling?

2 As a servant [†] earnestly desireth the shadow,[‡] and as an hireling looketh for the reward of his work;

3 So am I made to possess months of vanity, and wearisome nights are appointed to me.

4 When I lie down, I say, [b] When shall I arise, and [§] the night be gone? and I am full of tossings to and fro unto the dawning of the day.

5 My flesh is clothed with worms and clods of dust; my skin is broken, and become loathsome.[‖]

6 My days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle, and are spent [c] without hope.

7 O remember that my life is wind: mine eye [*] shall no more [†] see good.

8 The eye of him that hath seen me shall see me no more: [d] thine eyes are upon me,[‡] and [§] I am not.

9 As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away; so he that goeth down to the grave shall come up no more.[‖]

10 He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more.

11 Therefore I will not refrain my mouth; I will speak in the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of my soul.

12 Am I a sea, or a whale,[*] that thou settest a watch over me?

CHAP. VII.—Is there not a warfare of trouble, and the set time thereof appointed, for wretched man upon earth? Are not his days fixed and determined, and full of toil and labour? 2. As a servant wearied with the toils of the day desires a place of refreshment, and as a hireling looks for the end and reward of his work, so I long for death, to deliver me from my miseries, and bring me to my glorious reward. For I have now allotted me for my portion, months of wretchedness and vanity, without any solid comfort; and in the night, when others rest from their sorrows, I can but restlessly increase mine. 4. I am scarcely laid down on my bed, when, through agony and pain, I wish to be up again; and I am continually tormented both in body and mind. 5. For my body is overspread with ulcers, filled with worms, and crusted over with scabs, which have made such clefts in my skin, that I am become loathsome to myself. 6. My happy days have quickly run over in a moment, and there is no hope that I shall recover them. 7. Remember, O God, how short and unsubstantial my life is, though once it was pleasant; and when once dead, I shall never return to my possessions and worldly prosperity. 8. My friends shall never more see me in this mortal state. Thou dost but frown upon me, and I vanish out of this world. 11. Since there is no hope that my condition will be better in this world, therefore I will give some vent to the extremity of my sorrow, by complaining. 12. Am I so strong and unruly that nothing but such strong chains of affliction can tame, rule, or restrain me? 16. Either cease from afflicting me, or from preserving me in life; for my days have no need to be made more miserable and fading than they are of themselves. 17. What is man that thou shouldest honour him so much as to contend with him, and set thyself against him, in rendering him so miserable? 18. And that thou shouldest visit him with new afflictions every morning, and try him with new strokes every moment? 19. If thou art so patient and kind to the generality of mankind, why wilt thou not turn away thy displeasure from me, and at least give me time to breathe? 20. I cannot satisfy thy justice for my sins, O thou Observer of men: yet why hast thou set me up as a mark for thy vengeance to shoot at and run against, so that I am a burden to myself and to thee? 21. Why wilt thou not forgive me my sin, and at least release me so far from its punishment, that I may die? for if thou come not speedily to help me, it will be too late.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Our life hath its bounds and form unalterably fixed by God's decree. But how shortlived and hard is the condition of mankind on earth! Surely then we ought to be humble, whose bodies are so vile, and our days so empty and short! And sweet must the heavenly rest be to those who get thither through so much tribulation. It is proper therefore to die with affections quite weaned from this world, and set on things above. But if the saints' afflictions can be so terrible, so constant on earth, what must hell be to the wicked for evermore! How terrible to be driven thither in our wickedness! to fall into the hands of an angry God! The views then of our near approaching death ought to animate our confessions of sin, our cries for pardon of it, and deliverance from it. It is a mercy that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanses from all sin, the most unadvised and desperate expostulations with God not excepted: and, sprinkled with this, we may cheerfully bid adieu to this valley of tears and sorrows.

CHAP. VIII.—Not without a mixture of mistake, rage, and pride, Bildad replied, 2. How long wilt thou outrageously pour forth what is dishonourable to God and unprofitable to men; and brutishly violent, noisy, and presumptuous? 3. Can God, who has no reason to fear the displeasure, or court the favour of any, wretchedly and wickedly deal unjustly with men? 4. Suppose he has fearfully punished thy children for their wickedness; 5. Yet thy humble, speedy, and penitent supplication to him for mercy would meet with due regard. 6. And wert thou thyself sincere in heart, and upright in conduct, he would, all of a sudden, bestir himself to help thee, and restore thee and thy family to its wonted peace and prosperity. 7. And, however low and contemptible thy condition is at present, he would render thy happiness and glory more eminent than ever. 8—10. And, as you look on us as mere ignorant upstarts, carefully inquire of the most aged and best informed, and they will assure you, that God never punished but for sin, and never rejected a penitent person. 11, 12. And, that, as rushes and flags, without abundant moisture, quickly wither of their own accord; 13, 14. happiness, will quickly issue in apostasy, infamy, disappointment, and self-wrought wretchedness. 15. The wicked man may attempt to rely on his friends, family, or wealth, and may exert himself to the utmost to retain what he has, but to no purpose. 16. The external smiles of Providence may render his prosperity remarkable for a little time; and his family, wealth, and honour, may greatly flourish and increase. 17. He may appear deep-rooted amidst outward enjoyments; and, in height of glory and apparent stability, may vie with the loftiest buildings of marble. 18. But quickly shall his native soil swallow him up into ruin: and he, and all that he had, shall quickly disappear and be forgotten. 19. Such is the mad and unsubstantial joy of the wicked, and the issue of their flourishing prosperity; while others are exalted, from meanness and poverty, to fill their place in the world. 20. For—mark it as a certain and important truth—the mighty God will never despise, or loathe, or refuse to help and comfort, an upright saint; nor will he strengthen, support, or deliver, evil-doers. 21, 22. Wert thou perfect, or thoroughly penitent, he would bless thee till his favours had overwhelmed thee with raptures of thankful praise; they who hate thee, and rejoice at thy present troubles, should be confounded at thy restoration, while they and their's should irrecoverably perish.

Reflections upon Chap. VIII.—Men readily follow one another in running down those who are singularly distressed. And much sooner do they perceive other men's sins marked in their judgments than their own. But in every affliction it is always wise to have recourse to God for help. His blessing can soon make a remarkable change for the better in our lot. And, if he knows our integrity, it matters little though men esteem us as hypocrites. God often gives his people indirect hints of the kindness which he intends for them, by words never intended for that purpose by the speakers. And the knowledge and experience of others ought carefully to be improved for our instruction and comfort. What a common sin among professors is hypocrisy and dissimulation! What a sad source of it is forgetfulness of God! But the hope of hypocrites will put the most fearful cheat upon themselves. Though it flourishes a while, it perishes at last. And the things of nature around us suggest the most important admonitions, did we but consider them aright. The most precious truths are often abused, through the misapplication of them, to make the heart of the righteous sad, and the souls of the wicked to triumph. Let me therefore never be a harsh judge of others, and never too mild with respect to myself. Let me never judge of people's character by their outward lot. It is not time, but the last judgment and eternity, that will reduce all things to apparent order.

Chap. IX.—Immediately Job replied, 2. I know indeed that God is righteous, and that he ordinarily punishes the wicked, and favours the godly! But what frail man can, in your sense, be just before God? 3. If God please to call him to a strict account, he cannot answer for one of a thousand of his thoughts, words, or actions. 4. And while God is infinitely righteous, his knowledge, wisdom, and power, are so unbounded, that it is impossible for any to harden himself, in rebellion against him and peacefully prosper. 5—9. Against him, who can in a moment remove and overturn the largest mountains,—who can shake the earth out of its place, and shatter its rocky foundations,—who can at pleasure forbid the rising of the sun or shining of the stars,—who at pleasure spreads out or dispels the clouds, and triumphantly treads upon the swelling waves of the sea, all being subject to his will,—who makes and governs all the starry constellations which appear in the north or south parts of our world, 10. And does works unsearchably marvellous and unnumbered. 11. In his providential dispensations he can pass before me and attack me; can quickly pass by and rush upon me, and continually set his works before me: and yet I cannot perceive him, nor understand them. 12. Behold! he can suddenly or forcibly snatch away whatever a man has, and none can resist his infinite power, or make him to restore it, or even bring him to account for his conduct. 13. If he, the object of our adoration, continue the displays of his terrible majesty and almighty wrath in the CHAPTER X.

Job expostulates with God concerning his afflictions.

MY soul is • weary † of my life: I will leave my complaint upon myself; I will speak in the bitterness of my soul.

2 I will say unto God, Do not condemn me;‡ show me wherefore thou contendest with me.

3 Is it good § unto thee that thou shouldest oppress? that thou shouldest despise ‖ the work of thine hands? and shine upon the counsel of the wicked?

4 Hast thou eyes of flesh? or seest thou as man seeth?

5 Are thy days as the days of man? are thy years as man's days,•

6 That thou inquirest after mine iniquity, and searchest after my sin?†

7 Thou knowest that I am not wicked;‡ and there is none that can deliver out of thine hand.

8 Thine hands have made me, and fashioned me together round about; yet thou dost destroy me.

9 Remember, I beseech thee, that thou hast infliction of just punishments, the most proud, powerful, and fierce, helpers and avengers must yield to his influence, and confess their inability to relieve us. 14. How then can I, a poor, weak, unbefriended wretch, answer him in judgment; or choose, give sense to, and order, my words in debating with him! 15. Though my case were ever so just, nothing would become me, but to make humble supplications to my tremendous and omniscient Judge, who contends with me. 16. And if he had graciously accepted my supplication, and even promised to grant the request of such a poor and wretched creature as I am, I could not believe it. 17. Since, without my being conscious of any uncommon wickedness, he breaks me to pieces by a fiery whirlwind of his judgments, and multiplies my painful afflictions. 18. He allows me no interval from trouble, no ease under it, but fills me with the most tormenting troubles and bitter griefs. 19. Should I be inclined to dispute with him by force, lo! he is infinitely more powerful than I. Should I be inclined to cite him at law, who, higher than he, could be our judge, and appoint us a time or place of hearing? 20. Though I am guilty of no allowed crime, yet his majesty and holiness would make me condemn myself: and, though I be no hypocrite, my attempts to justify myself before him would prove me perverse. 21. Though I were ever so perfect, I durst not, on my own consciousness, debate the matter with him, nor insist that my soul were really such in his view; but I would undervalue, disapprove, and loathe, my practice, before his infinite holiness; and would rather lose my life than dare to contend with one of boundless majesty. 22. All that I have affirmed and insist upon is this important truth, that God, in sovereignty, fearfully afflicts the righteous as well as the wicked. 23. When the most fearful calamities fall upon and suddenly kill men, he often, with seeming pleasure, for their trial, grievously afflicts the most innocent. 24. Who but he prospers the wicked, and gives the earth to be possessed by wicked men, and ruled by blind judges, who, from ignorance, misinformation, bribery, or partiality, pass unrighteous decisions? 25, 26. I myself am an instance of his sovereign management. My days of prosperity have quickly passed away without substantial comfort; and my natural life, amidst inexpressible misery, posts on to an end, more swiftly than the boat of paper reeds is hurried down the rapid stream, or the hungry eagle alights upon his prey. 27, 28. If I attempt to forget my calamities, lay aside my mournful looks, pluck up my spirits, and cause my face to shine with a smile, my tormenting pains and sorrows terrify my mind: and I find by experience that thou, O God, wilt not remove my trouble, as if I were innocent. 29. I see that I shall be held and punished as one that is wicked—Why then do I thus fatigue myself in vindicating my innocency? 30. Though I could wash myself by the most effectual vindications, and thoroughly purge my practice with purity itself, 31. Thou, O infinitely holy God, wouldst plunge me into depths of noisome afflictions and of filthy ulcers; and my discovered wickedness and manifest troubles should hold me forth as quite abominable: 32. For God is so infinitely above me, that I cannot, dare not, enter into a debate or plea with him. 33. Neither, indeed, is any umpire or arbiter to be found who could order us to silence, or oblige us both to stand to his award. 34, 35. If he would remove from off me this heavy trouble, and not terrify me with the dread of his power and majesty, then would I freely speak, without any slavish fear of him, in my own vindication; for I am not such a hypocrite as you allege. But, alas! sorrows and fears oppress my spirit.

Reflections upon Chap. IX.—O the infinite goodness of God! And what is man, so mean, so sinful, that he should be mindful of him! How incapable of advancing a justifying righteousness before him! Dreadful is the case of those devils and men who harden themselves against him. His excellencies are plainly marked in his works of creation and providence. Happy are they whose God is Jehovah! and inexpressibly miserable his most powerful and proud opposers! In incontestable sovereignty he often afflicts the righteous, and prospers the wicked. And it is hard to complain much of our troubles without mingling somewhat reproachful to God. Let therefore the thoughts of my own meanness, sinfulness, and mortality, keep my mind low and silent before him. It is his mercy, not my merits, that must be my only plea. Conceit of my sinless perfection, and of the worth of my righteousness, will but manifest my ignorance of the spirituality of his law, and of my own corruption. Let me always stand in awe of him and the power of his wrath. Let me tenderly pity such as are wounded in spirit, and earnestly pray for them, as they can sometimes scarcely pray for themselves. Let me always entertain kind and honourable thoughts of God; as hard thoughts of him are inlets to much sin and sorrow. But, above all, let me bless him that Jesus Christ is the Mediator between himself and me, and that my soul is not under extreme anguish and disquiet. And, while I walk in the light of the Lord, let me rejoice therein, but rejoice with trembling. Who knows what change a night or a day may bring forth!

Chap. X.—My soul bursts asunder with weariness of being detained in the cords of natural life. I will therefore permit my complaints to vent themselves freely, be the issue what it will. I will speak fervently in the bitter anguish of my soul. 2. I will say to God, Do not condemn and punish me as a wicked man, but cause me to know for what sin or reason I am so peculiarly afflicted. 3. Is it either pleasant, profitable, or honourable, to thee, or is it just and equal, that thou shouldst

For whatever food is received into the stomach there undergoes the first process of digestion, and is afterwards farther changed into chyle; whence by the lacteals—an innumerable system of absorbent vessels—it is carried into the thoracic duct in the form of milk; next it is commingled with the blood, which it thus serves to renew; and, being in that form carried throughout the whole body, it supplies the necessary repairs or increase to bone, muscle, and every other part of the frame.—Ed.

Remember that thou, as my Potter, hast formed me out of the clay; and wilt thou, in this sudden and fearful manner, so quickly reduce me to dust by death? 10. Didst thou not, in the womb, purify my substance as milk, and curdle and compact the liquid matter of which my body was framed? 11. Didst thou not cover my inward parts with skin and flesh, and curiously fence and weave me together with bones and sinews? 12. Didst thou not grant me the entrance and continuance of life? And hath not thy providential care and kindness preserved me from dangers and death? 13. And, notwithstanding, hadst thou a secret purpose thus to afflict me?—I find, by experience, that it was then determined with thee, 14. That, if I should sin, thou wouldst watch over me to punish me, without the least patience, pardon, or pity. 15. That, if I should be wicked, fearful judgments should fall upon me; and, though I should live holy and innocent, I should nevertheless be oppressed with trouble. I am full of confusion and shame, on account of my uncommon circumstances; therefore look with pity on my inexpressible misery. 16. Shall my trouble still increase, and exalt itself over me? Wilt thou follow me close with plagues, as a fierce lion hunteth his prey? Wilt thou, by repeated strokes of vengeance, set me up as a distinguished spectacle of thy marvellous power and wrath to all around me? 17. Wilt thou bring fresh plagues upon me, as witnesses of thy continued displeasure? Wilt thou still afflict me more and more? Shall nothing but diverse forms and multitudes of trouble assault me? 18. Why then didst thou bring me out of the womb at all? Why did I not die in the womb, without ever being seen on this wretched earth? 19. Or die in the birth, that I might have been carried from the womb to the grave? 20. Shall not the momentary duration of my life quickly cease? Shall I not then be allowed a short reprieve from trouble? 21, 22. Before I go to the dark region of the grave, where there is no orderly succession of day and night, summer and winter, labour and rest, but one perpetual night of gross darkness?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—To be weary of life, before God sends us our discharge, is to be unfaithful to the post which he hath given us to maintain. In suffering times we should inquire into their cause, that we may answer their end; and chiefly plead for the removal of our sin, and of the condemnation on account of it. But those, who are awed by the majesty of God, often attempt easing their mind in sinful resentments. And under extraordinary troubles it is hard to forbear impeaching the goodness or equity of God by sinful murmurings. The most humble prayers are often mingled with the most peevish and proud expostulations. Neither the views of his omniscient discernment of all our sins, nor the almighty power of his correcting hand, can awe our souls into quiet submission. Nothing but the largest supplies of grace can bridle the tongue in such a case. But when God hides himself as a Saviour, his work, as a Maker and Preserver, should lead us to admiration and thankfulness. When he changes his way towards us, we are to believe that he has reasons hid for it in his heart, which will be shortly manifested. Alas! how sin stares the best of men in the face, when God lays them under heavy troubles! Happy are they whose iniquities are pardoned, and in whom the fruit of afflictions is to take away the sin that procured them. But if sins be great, troubles heavy, life and its comforts short, death and its darkness near, let us give ourselves unto prayer. Every trouble is a call from God; and every moment of reprieve from death is an opportunity to prepare for it.

CHAP. XI.—Then Zophar the Naamathite replied, 2. Dost thou think to stop our mouths with a multitude of words, or by thy talkativeness to persuade us thou art innocent? 3. Must no one confute thy false allegations concerning thine own innocence or God's dispensations of providence? And, when thou hast so insolently scoffed at God and thy friends, must none expose thee to shame, by pointing forth thy wickedness? 4. Wilt thou dare pretend to God himself that thou art

But the body of a beast, a fowl, or a fish, is a far more curious and more complicated machine, and answers thousands of purposes that no work of man could accomplish; the conclusion is again inevitable, that the several parts of the creature were designed for their several functions.—Ko.

quite pure and unspotted in thy principles and practice? 5. Truly my earnest wish is, that he would fully and freely debate the cause with thee, and confute thy mistakes; 6. And that he would show thee the hidden methods of his Providence, and reasons of his wise counsels, which infinitely transcend thy conceptions, and make thee to know that thou hast deserved far more affliction than has been laid upon thee. 7. Darest thou pretend, by thy inquiries, fully to know the secrets of his Providence, or the reasons of his procedure? 8, 9. Thou mayest sooner measure the height of heaven, or fathom the depth of hell, and describe the surfaces and boundaries of the earth and sea. 10. If he attack a person or family, and shut them up in chains or nets of affliction, or bring them to his public tribunal, who can resist or refute him; or cause him to restore them to liberty? 11. For he knoweth the lovers of, and dealers in, falsehood and vanity. He exactly observes and understands what emptiness and wickedness takes place, however unimportant it appears to us, and thus hath reasons for inflicting trouble that men overlook. 12. Let then the dull and self-conceited pretender to knowledge, who just now spoke, be endued with solid wisdom; and let him, who appears as rude and blockish as an ass, be formed into a man of understanding. 13. If thou art truly wise, forbear disputing; and, in the exercise of faith and hearty repentance, apply thyself to humble supplication. 14. Reform thyself and family from whatever wickedness thou hast indulged. 15. Thus shalt thou be quickly delivered from thy loathsome disease and lamentable condition, and be firmly established in holiness and happiness. 16. The greatness of thy prosperity shall make thee forget all thy present trouble as if it had never been. 17. The remainder of thy life shall be filled up with the most glorious and ever-increasing felicity. Thy present labour, under confounding trouble, shall issue in a fresh, clear, and pleasant morning of prosperity. 18. Thy mind shall be quiet, and free from terrors, in the well-grounded confidence of God's favour and protection. Thou shalt dig thy wells of water, or intrench thyself for security, and nothing shall disturb thee or thine. 19. And whilst thou art in perfect peace, without anything to disquiet thee; many, even of the great, shall humbly court thy favour and friendship. 20. But wicked men shall never enjoy the happiness they desire or expect; their refuge from, help under, or escape out of, misery, is utterly perished. Their firmest hope of happiness is as the giving up of the ghost, a noisy puff of breath, all on a sudden leaving them miserable and desperate.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—It is highly indecent and sinful to be abusive and passionate in religious controversy; and cruel to deal harshly with them whose spirits the Lord has wounded. Harsh censures readily exceed the bounds of truth. Such as are forward in giving the lie to others are ordinarily too guilty of falsehood themselves: and none are more forward in making their appeals to God than they whose cause is bad. How little we know of God's unbounded excellencies, or of the mysteries of his wisdom and will! men often talk well concerning them to serve a bad purpose. But surely it is very unreasonable to complain under troubles, when we have not only a God of deep counsels and unsearchable perfections to deal with; but, in providence, have a mixture of undeserved mercy in the most severe afflictions we meet with. Men often proudly imagine they know much when they are amazingly ignorant: and the more ignorant they are, so are they the more unsettled and ungovernable. But in trouble there is need of a thorough reformation of ourselves and families. Yea, to have our nature changed, our heart lifted up to God in holy desires and self-dedication, and our practice rectified. And the most holy confidence towards God; holy composure in our own mind; comfortable reflection on troubles; and joyful expectation of peace, joy, and honour, attend upon sincere and gospel repentance. If God establish us we shall not fail; nor need we fear what all the powers of hell and earth can do against us. Though we may for a little suffer an eclipse, we shall at last, without spot, shine forth in the kingdom of our Father. If the anchor of our hope be fixed on the faithfulness of God, no storms can hurt or endanger our security.—But unavoidable misery awaits the impenitent; and, if not before, the hope of the wicked always expires in death.

CHAP. XII.—To this Job replied, 2. No doubt you think yourselves the only men upon earth who understand divine things, by whose death all solid knowledge will be rooted out from the world. 3. But, believe it, I, and even the weakest of mankind, understood all that you have said of God's infinite wisdom, power, and justice. 4. I am indeed insolently mocked by you, my fellow-professors, even while you promise me great prosperity in answer to my prayers. But it has been the common lot of upright men to be made the butts of derision by their wicked neighbours. 5. The best of men, when reduced to the point of perishing, are generally contemned and hissed at by those who wallow in worldly ease and affluence. 6. But it is certain that the most wicked and mischievous persons often prosper remarkably in this world. 7, 8. The beasts and fowls which they live upon, or are served by, can teach you pretenders to wisdom this: the earth, that affords them her plentiful and delicious fruits; and the fishes of the sea, which gratify their appetites, plainly manifest this. 9, 10. And even the most stupid of mankind must know that this is ordered by the Providence of God, who is the Creator, Preserver, and Governor, of both animals and men. 11, 12. Cannot our mind distinguish truth from falsehood as exactly as the palate can do sweet from bitter? And the older we grow the more wise we ought to become. 13. Much more with the eternal God is there wisdom to know all, and strength to do everything. He never mistakes in his conceptions, nor miscarries in his purposes. 14. Behold he destroys cities, families, persons, and things; and none can restore them. He shuts up men in prisons or troubles, and none can bring them out. 15. At one time he withholds rain, or restrains the springs, and the waters dry up. Anon he sends forth the rains and fountains with unbridled liberty, and the torrents of water overturn the strongest banks: 16. Nor is his wisdom inferior to his power. The sin of the deceiver, and the sufferings of the deceived, are both ordered by him to his glory. 17. He defeats the projects of the wisest statesmen, and infatuates the ablest senators. 18. He deprives kings of their royal majesty and authority, and reduces them to slavery and imprisonment. 19. The most devout priests, or the noblest ministers of state, he renders captives; and overthrows the most powerful armies of warriors. 20. Eloquence, fidelity, and prudence, gained by long experience, are rendered quite unavailable for the protection of princes or kingdoms. 21. He renders the greatest princes contemptible, and the strongest persons or armies weak. 22. He brings to light the most secret plots; makes plain the mysteries of doctrine or Providence; and advances such as were poor, obscure, condemned, or imprisoned, to liberty and glory, to honour and wealth. 23. At his pleasure he increases nations in number, power, wealth, and honour; and anon diminishes them by famine, war, and pestilence. He enlarges their boundaries, and anon shuts them up into corners. 24. Princes, magistrates, and others, he deprives of courage and wisdom; and throws them into such confusion that they know not which way to turn themselves. 25. Without either sense or success, they seek for ways to help themselves and their people out of trouble; but, by his providential influence, they are quite uncertain in their counsels, and doubtful what course to take.

Reflections upon Chap. XII.—Nothing is more disgusting and offensive than proud boasting; and a high conceit of our own importance is extremely foolish and sinful; contempt is all that is ordinarily gained by it. It is but just to allow others a share of reason and wisdom as well as ourselves. But often they, who riot in prosperity, contemn and reproach the afflicted, especially if they be religious. And peevish minds are sometimes apt to take well-meant reproofs for ill-natured reproaches. Mankind are rarely able to give things of importance a fair trial. Those, who are fast running to hell, often get large portions of earthly things, even the most delicate, in their way to it. But their abuse of God's creatures in this world shall witness against them, and will but increase their torments in the next. The most instructive lessons concerning God are afforded us in the volumes of creation and providence. But how mad and criminal is it to attempt contending with Him who hath all possible excellency in possession, and doth according to his will in the armies of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth! No king so high but he can bring down; no politician so crafty or eloquent, but he can infatuate; no plot so well laid, but he can frustrate; no nation so mighty, but he can destroy with his nod; no general so brave, but he can intimidate. Be thou wise, my soul, to observe these things; so shalt thou understand the loving-kindness of the Lord.

Chap. XIII.—Behold, all these things I know from my own experience and observation, or have learned from others; whereby you may see that I need none of your instructions on these points. 3. It is with God himself that I wish to debate my own integrity, and to answer his objections against it; 4. For ye are all forgers of false doctrines and accusations against me; you unskilfully and unfaithfully prescribe bad remedies for my affliction, and misapply good ones. 5, 6. It would be more agreeable to me, and show more wisdom in you, if ye would never speak a word more on the subject, but carefully listen to what I can say in my own behalf. 7. Doth God stand in need of your false doctrines, or your false accusations of me, contrary to the dictates of your own conscience, to justify his proceedings against me? 8. Hath he so little right on his side, that you must show him favour, and oblige him by wronging me? 9. Would it be for your honour or advantage that he should narrowly examine your discourses, and the springs and motives of them? Do ye think that he will be deceived with your flatteries and high pretences to piety? 10. No; he will certainly, fearfully, and openly, chastise you for your hypocritical attempts to gratify him by condemning me. 11. Should not his infinite majesty, holiness, and awful justice, make you afraid to deal unjustly, even on his behalf, or to speak rashly of his ways and counsels? 12. Ye yourselves are but mean worms, sprung out of the dust before him; and your boasted remonstrances on his behalf, and your bulwarks of arguments, are worthless and weak, as heaps of dirt or clay. 13. Keep silence therefore, and do not interrupt my speech; let me but speak out my mind, be the penal issue of it what it will. 14. I am so conscious of my integrity, that I must wonder why I suffer such enraging miseries, and am exposed to such evils; and I could risk all danger to obtain a thorough reasoning with God. 15. Lo! should

• This chapter should begin with the last verse of the preceding. "And he, as a rotten thing, consumeth, as a garment that is moth-eaten. Man that is born of a woman is of few days, and full of trouble." A melancholy history, but needful to admonish youth, thoughtless of death and of eternity, and to shake that confidence in health, and humble that pride of life, which betray so many to forget God.—Ed.

he utterly cut me off, and not leave me the least glimmering of hope, I would, to the last gasp, maintain mine integrity. 16. Nay, I am confident that he himself, with whom no hypocrite dare lodge his appeal, will in due time vindicate me, preserve me in, or deliver me from, trouble; and save me with an everlasting salvation. 17, 18. Hear me then with care and attention: I have formed a process against myself, and digested what I have to say for myself; and I know that, in the issue, I shall be cleared from every charge of hypocrisy, and manifested a righteous person. 19. What impartial person dare charge me with hypocrisy, or can prove his point? If he could, I should be silent, die with shame, and be strangled with grief. But, when it is otherwise, it is death to me to neglect my own just vindication. 20—22. Do thou, great Judge, remove thy oppressing rod from off me, and let not the overwhelming awe of thy majesty terrify me: then will I, in the most bold and free manner, debate my cause with thee. 23. What, and how many, O God, are those heinous sins which require such grievous punishments? Or, If I am thus afflicted for some particular crime, cause me to know, it. 24. Why shouldest thou in anger thus withhold thy favours and comforts? Why shouldest thou hold and treat me as an enemy to thee? 25. How canst thou find in thy heart so violently to toss and grievously persecute me, who am so mean, weak, and contemptible, in thy sight? And what honour canst thou acquire by it. 26. Thou passest the most severe sentence against me; and, by afflicting me with the most tormenting troubles, bringest to my mind, and punishest me for, the crimes which were committed before I well knew what I did. 27. Thy fearful judgments compass me in so close and tormenting a manner that I cannot escape. They follow me at the very heels; the tokens of thy wrath are engraven on the very soles of my feet. 28. And under these my frail carcass gradually rots into death.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—Hot disputants generally magnify themselves and undervalue their opponents; and too seldom do they adhere to truth with proper exactness. There is great need then to pray that the Lord would mortify our pride, and keep us from the way of lying; and, so far as is for his glory, keep us out of temptation. Deliberate lying is of all things most infamous. But what insignificant physicians are all but Christ to a sin-sick or wrath-sick soul! It is singularly criminal to manage the cause of God in a wicked and deceitful manner. What men call pious frauds, are with God impious cheats; and devout persecutions are but horrid profanations of his name. Strict will be the scrutiny, and severe the rebukes of God, with respect to those found guilty of these things! No good intentions, no pious pretence, will avail at his awful bar. Let us then stand in awe of his perfections. Never let us, who are so mean and mortal, dare to contemn or trample on our neighbour. Never let us dare to exhibit weak and carnal remonstrances on God's behalf. But how supporting is it under trouble to have the testimony of a good conscience! and it is relieving to get our minds vented in kindly complaints. It is glorious, in the extremity of trouble, to be strong in the faith, giving glory to God, and coming boldly to his throne of grace, to ask mercy, and obtain grace to help us in the time of need. But how awful is it to find the greatest saints mingling their passions with their prayers! Lord, what is man, even in his best estate, if left to himself! And what a hell on earth sin sometimes forms for the chief favourites of God! Sins long before committed fall with an awful weight on their conscience, and cause them to roar through disquiet of spirit. If then I find myself deserted of God; if I find my sins of youth remembered by him, and my present miscarriages strictly animadverted upon; if I find myself wasting away under his heavy hand; let me never murmur at his dispensations. Let me, holding fast his promise, believe him to be my friend, even when he puts on the appearance of an enemy. Let me firmly expect the performance of his promises, even when all the ways leading to it are seemingly shut up. Let me rejoice in the Lord when he hath left me nothing else: and in dying moments let me derive from him my everliving consolation.

CHAP. XIV.—Man that is born of a poor, weak, frail woman, through whom he derives guilt, curses, corruptions, and infirmities, is of few days, and so surfeited with troubles, that he needs pity, rather than a violent hand to cut him off. 2. He makes a sparkling and fair show for a few days or hours, and then is cut down by an untimely death, or gradually, and without substantial happiness, posts through age into the eternal state. 3. And wilt thou, O God, debase thyself to take notice of, frown on, or contend with, such an insignificant creature, or to hale to thy tribunal, and execute strict justice upon me! 4. How is it possible for such as are sinfully corrupted themselves to produce innocent children! Why then should I, who am by nature no worse than others, be so peculiarly punished? 5, 6. Since the period of every man's life is unalterably fixed by thy purpose and providence, why shouldest thou now torment, and not let me alone, till I have contentedly accomplished my appointed service, and obtained the wished-for evening of death? 7—12. And the rather, since there is no hope that men once dead will revive into life like the stumps of old trees in a well-watered soil; but will lie crumbled into dust, and quite insensible till the last day. 13. Oh that thou wouldest hide me in the state of the dead, and cover me with a vail, till this storm of thy wrath blow over! or set some limit of time and degree to thy wrath, and in pity remember me! 14. Then, however impossible it be for Eliphaz reproves Job of justifying himself, and appeals to antiquity for the judgments of wicked men.

THEN answered Eliphaz the Temanite, and said, men to rise from the dead before the last day, I should patiently, all the days of my troublesome warfare, wait for my dying hour; and no less patiently wait for my glorious change at the resurrection. 15. Then, in love to thy poor creature, thou shouldest by death call me to thy judgment-seat, and I should readily come: and at the resurrection, thou shalt, in love to me, call me up from the grave, and I will gladly obey. 16. But now thou wrathfully observest all the steps of my life, and, as it were, greedily markest the smallest trips of my conduct, in order to punish them. 17. The least of my sins of infirmity is as carefully preserved in thy remembrance against me as if it were a precious treasure; and thou huntest after forged calumnies to add to my sin, and punish me for it. 18, 19. But there is no more hope of men's recovery from death, or of me from this calamity, than that fallen mountains should raise themselves up, or removed rocks resume their place, or worn stones should grow again; or that which is carried away by a flood should be brought back, and the devastations repaired. 20. None can resist thy deadly stroke, but must pass into eternity whenever thou requirest. Thou wrathfully changest his countenance, spoilest his beauty, and expellest him as a leper from thy camp on earth. 21. And then, whatever glory, power, or honour, or whatever debasement, disgrace, or misery, his posterity meet with, he neither knows nor regards it. 22. But his body, after pains in death, shall corrupt in the grave; and his soul, imbittered in death, often removes to an eternal anguish in hell.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—If human life be so short, so sinful, and so wretched; if death and an awful eternity be so near; why should any be proud! Why unconcerned about spiritual, about eternal happiness! Why not live on that gracious God who hath a feeling of our infirmities; and look and long for that rest which remaineth for the people of God! Awful and awakening, though comfortable and heart-composing, are believing views of death and of the resurrection from the dead: and happy is the thought that, while my body, as precious dust, sleeps in Jesus' arms of kindly care, my soul shall retire to sit with him on his throne, and there wait, till my great, my last, change come! If grace has changed my heart, death hath changed its nature to me: and the hope of a glorious resurrection is enough to support me under every human trouble. Everything around admonishes me of death: and nothing can resist it when God gives it the commission. Sharp are its pains, and strange is the change it makes! It separates the chiefest friends! In view of it, to render me always content, let me maintain kind thoughts of God and a deep sense of my sin. And at last let it find me weaned from this perishing world, disengaged from all but a God in Christ; and singing, O death, where is thy sting! O grave, where is thy victory!

CHAP. XV.—Filled with indignation at the contempt which Job had discovered for him and his friends, Eliphaz replied, 2. Shouldest thou, who pretendest to wisdom, presume to throw forth such unsubstantial and boisterous nonsense; or to satisfy thy own conscience with such pernicious fancies? 3. Shouldest thou, instead of solid arguments, pour forth unprofitable wranglings? 4. Nay, shouldest thou cast off, and break through, all reverential regard to God, and refuse to pour forth thy humble complaints and prayers before him; and even tempt others to do the like? 5. Thy tongue proclaims the wickedness of thy heart, even while, by pretences of respect to God, thou attemptest to cover thy impious principles and practices. 6. I need produce no evidence of thy impiety; thy own words sufficiently manifest and prove it. 7. Wast thou formed before every other creature, that thou pretendest to be wiser and better than other men? 8. Hast thou been acquainted with the most secret counsels and mysteries of God, that thou shouldest engross all wisdom to thyself? 9. What secrets hast thou learned that we do not fully comprehend? 10. Among us, and on our side in this debate, we have the most aged and experienced men. 11. Darest thou to contemn the divine admonitions and comforting promises which we have suggested, and undervalue our kind and consoling discourses, as if thou knewest some better way of comfort? 12. Why do thy inward lusts thus violently transport thee into such pride, fury, and scornful contempt, 13. That thou shouldest dare to rage against the Most High, and insolently arraign the equity of his providence? 14. Can the corrupted child of a sinful parent be innocent or righteous before an infinitely holy God? 15, 16. When the loftiest angels are not without their mutability and comparative imperfections, how inexpressibly and universally abominable must the man be, who, with greediness and delight, commits the most criminal impieties? 17—19. Listen carefully while I clearly declare and demonstrate unto thee what I myself have observed, and which the wisest, most powerful, and wealthy princes of former ages, have observed, professed, or believed, and informed their children of. 20. The wicked tyrant is never free from inward torment; he lives in continual dread of disasters, death, and damnation, never knowing how soon they may overtake him. 21. Consciousness of guilt keeps him in perpetual terror of approaching mischiefs. And never is the destroyer more ready to attack him than when he is in the height of his prosperity. 22. In trouble he despairs of deliverance; in the night he dreads being killed before morning; everywhere he fears; and is indeed exposed to the most certain and sudden destruction. 23. In the most destitute and vagabond manner he is obliged to wander for bread. He finds, by experience, that terrible and inevitable ruin is just ready to seize him. 24.

Straitening distress and anguish shall terrify him; they shall quickly rush on and prevail against him, as a strong and furious army commanded by a valiant prince: 25. As the punishment of his daring impiety, because he defied and set himself in opposition to the Almighty. 26. Daring to sin in the most insolent and presumptuous manner, even amidst the tokens of the divine indignation, inflicted or impending; 27. Because, grown rich, powerful, and successful, his only care is to pamper himself, and wallow in ease and luxury; 28. Dwelling in cities and stately houses, from whence he had driven, or murdered, the righteous proprietors; and which, by the curse of God, for his sake, shall be quickly reduced to heaps of ruins, and he be obliged to shift for himself in the most miserable manner. 29. The riches and glory which he hath gotten by violence and oppression shall neither be lasting, complete, nor firmly rooted. 30. Having once entered into terrible and confounding troubles, he shall never get out of them. The lightning, like flames of God's wrath, shall destroy his flourishing family and substance; and he himself shall be ruined and driven to hell by the threatened judgments of God, amidst his proud boasting. 31. Let therefore no one, who is seduced to wicked or carnal security, trust in the uncertain profits, pleasures, or honours of this world; for vexations, losses, disappointments, and troubles, shall be all he will get by them. 32, 33. These shall come upon him far sooner than he thinks. His riches, hopes, or children, shall scarcely make their appearance, when, blasted by the vengeance of God, they shall all be reduced to ruin. 34. Thus suddenly and fearfully shall the stock and numerous family of hypocrites be utterly destroyed; and some terrible judgment of God shall consume the house built up by, or stored with, ill-gotten goods. 35. With no small pains such wicked men plot and practise mischief against others; but in the issue it usually brings ruin on themselves.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Men too often hold fast the false principles which they have once imbibed: and it is much easier to treat an adversary with contempt than to answer him with reason. Disputants often turn revilers rather than reasoners; and charge their opponents with things which they utterly abhor. And none are more ready to indulge pride and self-conceit in themselves than those who rage against it in their neighbours! Old men often rather boast of their knowledge and wisdom than possess it. But surely it is a humbling sight to see men so corrupt in nature, so abominable in practice; and amazing that God should love any such, and deliver them from the pit of corruption! In the study of true knowledge, the experience and observation of others, as well as our own, are an excellent help. But how unbounded is the patience of God, that can bear with wicked monsters so long! Yet little external happiness have they even in this world. Their seemingly purest prosperity is mingled with gall and wormwood. But, if they are miserable in this world, which is their heaven, what must they be in death, in judgment, in hell!

CHAP. XVI.—To this Job replied, 2. Thou hast but repeated the senseless and tormenting jargon which I had heard before. Instead of comforting, you plague, harass, and tempt me to despair. 3. When wilt thou make an end of such idle and impertinent discourse? What has instigated and emboldened thee to answer me in this censorious, scornful, and peremptory manner? 4. Were your condition and mine exchanged, I could easily insult you with a multitude of words, and deride you in a grave or scornful manner. 5. I could furiously bear you down with my mouth, and restrain my lips from uttering a single sentence of consolation;—though I hope I should rather attempt to encourage, strengthen, and comfort you. 6. But now, indeed, whether I boldly defend my innocence, and pour forth my complaints, or whether I forbear, my frightful sores and griefs are nothing eased. 7. This terrible trouble has quite tired me out, and made my life a burden to me. Thou, O God, hast, with thy thunderbolts and fiery tempest, utterly destroyed my large family, and all that pertained to me. 8. While others murder my character, and torment my spirit, thou, by plagues and griefs, hast so wasted and disfigured my body, that it testifies my great affliction, and is employed against me as a witness of my great wickedness. 9. Meanwhile, my pretended friends, who indeed implacably hate me, tear my reputation, and torment my spirit with their speeches. They reproach me in the most spiteful and outrageous manner; and, while their eyes sparkle with anger, they cruelly set themselves to spy out every, even the least, occasion to calumniate me. 10. They behave like wild beasts, gaping to devour or deride me; they treat me with the most cruel and abusive scorn and contempt; they have met together to satisfy their infernal malice in tormenting me. 11. And God hath quite abandoned me, chained me up, and dreadfully cast me down into the hands of these and other wicked men, to be abused by them as they please. 12. Great was my former happiness and prosperity; but now God has trodden and bruised me in the press of his wrath, and made me, as it were, to boil over with dregs of trouble and desperate complaints. In the most tormenting manner he has ruined my soul, my body, my children, and all that I had: he has set me up as a distinguished butt of his fearful indignation. 13. Devils, wicked men, calamities, and diseases, as the instruments of his vengeance, compass me round about. Without mercy he torments me with the most exquisite pains in my body, anguish of mind, and terrors of conscience. 14. As a battering-ram he breaks through me with breach upon breach, still adding one dreadful plague to another: he furiously rushes upon me with the almighty force of his wrath, which I can by no means withstand or support. 15. The sackcloth I had put on all over my body, to mark my deep mourning and humiliation under his mighty hand, sticks to my ulcers; and, exhausted with wounds of trouble, I have sat down on this dunghill, where all my former authority and honour are changed into contempt. 16. My face is terribly burnt, and tormented with trickling tears; and the very substance of my eyes is almost consumed with weeping, so that I look like one dead and rotting; 17. Although I was never a violent oppressor of men, or a hypocritical worshipper of God. 18. O earth, if I have been guilty of bloodshed or oppression, conceal it not: let the dogs lick my blood when I am dead, and let neither God nor men regard my complaints or cries for pity while I am alive. 19. But what need these imprecations, when even now the all-seeing God, who dwells in the lofty regions of heaven, is the ear and the eye-witness of my virtue and true piety. 20. My companions mock and scoff at me as a hypocrite; but my soul, with floods of tears, earnestly appeals to God, and begs, 21. That he would thoroughly and clearly examine my cause, and give a decision between me and my reproaching friends; 22. Since, if it be not done quickly, my troubles will soon make an end of me, and then it will be too late.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Often much is said, and yet nothing to the purpose: and miserable comforters to a wounded spirit are all duties, all friends, if God continue his frowns! Nothing but Jesus' blood—nothing but JEHOVAH'S mercy—can grant any solid relief. Nay, alas! men are often most cruel and harsh when they ought to be most tender and compassionate: and those who riot in prosperity and ease seldom lay much to heart the case of their extremely distressed brethren. But though complicated and terrible are the troubles of saints in this world, unspeakably more so are the troubles of the wicked in hell, where there is nothing but curses—but torment in all its perfection! Happy are they who are here purged in God's furnace! They sow in tears, but shall reap in joy. And, however hard it be to bring down their mind to their lot, the testimony of their good conscience, sprinkled with Jesus' blood, shall comfort them now. They have a good God to appeal to as their judge and friend. Their tears shall be put into his bottle, and marked in his book; and death, but destitute of its sting, shall soon set the prisoners free into a glorious eternity.
